SCHOOL BUDGET.

Disposal of a Large Amount of Business

Of Importance to all Interested in Education.

March 25, 1910.

Abstracts from the records.

Present, Mr. Charles F. A. Currier, Mr. Marcus B. May, Mr. Edgar J. Rich and Superintendent Herron.

It was voted to postpone the election of Chairman and Vice-Chairman until next meeting.

Mr. May was elected Chairman pro-tem and Superintendent Herron was elected Secretary.

The records of February 24, 1910 were read and approved.

The report of the Superintendent of Schools for February and part of March was received and ordered filed.

In a discussion relative to the coming school year it was voted that notice should be given that the School Committee would be glad to receive criticisms and suggestions from any interested persons relative to the conduct of the schools.

The pay roll for February 1910 was presented for inspection.

The bills for March 25, 1910 amounting to $291 52 were approved and ordered paid.

The financial statement for March 25, 1910 was received and ordered filed.

The Secretary was directed to acknowledge a communication from the Town Clerk notifying the School Committee as to the appropriation by the recent Town Meeting for the regular budget and for the introduction of instruction in cooking, also, as to authorization to pay for transportation and as to the "Massachusetts College."

The budget was apportioned for 1910-1911 as follows:

Note was made of the fact that it would be necessary to exercise more than ordinary care in authorizing expenditures because the demands upon the budget are relatively much greater than usual and there cannot be much leeway.

It was voted to authorize the placing of a two-inch lead supply pipe by the Water Department for the Wadleigh Grammar School building.

The Superintendent was directed to report at the next meeting relative to various repairs, which would be needed in the immediate future.

The Superintendent was authorized to place new curtains as needed in the Gifford and Prince school buildings, to purchase 48 pupils' desks and chairs for the new room in the High school building, 48 desks and chairs for new room in the Chapin building, teachers desks and chairs for High school and Chapin school buildings, stools for the Chemistry laboratory in the High school, additional secondary clocks in the High school and an additional typewriter for the Commercial Department.

Suggested changes in the High school diploma were approved and the purchase of a new supply was authorized.

The secretary was instructed to express the appreciation of the School Committee for the action taken in the letter noted below and their acceptance of the offer made therein:

69 Parkway, Winchester, March 25, 1910.

My dear Mr. Herron: -

On March 14, The Fortnightly voted that $250 be employed as a scholarship fund to be loaned without interest to one or more High school girls who may desire a higher education, payment to be made when the girl is financially able; such girl to be selected by the Superintendent of Schools and Principal of the High school with the approval of the Philanthropy Committee of The Fortnightly.

This sum of money is now available.

Sincerely yours,
Mary F. B. Woods,
Chairman of the Philathropy Committee.

FIRES OF THE WEEK.

Last Friday was a particularly strenuous day for the local fire department, no less than five alarms being received to call the apparatus out. The fires were all brush or grass. Two alarms were for fires in the Fells at the head of Wolcott road, one for a grass fire at the Highlands, one for a dump on the west side, and another for grass near Lake street.

On Monday night shortly before ten-thirty box 38 was rung in for a fire in an Italian grocery store at the corner of Florence and Swanton streets. The store had only been closed about twenty minutes, and the origin of the blaze is a mystery. The stock in trade was practically ruined, while the interior of the store was badly burned. Both the building and the store were insured for $1000 each.

Tuesday was one of the worst days of this year for the fire department of the town. During the forenoon a fire started in the woods on the westerly borders of the town in Lexington, and by twelve o'clock had attained the largest proportions as viewed from the east side hills that we remember ever having seen in this town. The volume of smoke which rolled over Andrews hill rivalled that of the fire at Chelsea as seen from this place. The local firemen were called to this fire shortly before one o'clock, the supply wagon with fifteen or twenty men going to the scene. The departments of Lexington and Arlington were fighting the flames earlier and this fire kept the three forces busily engaged for most of the day.

The second fire of Tuesday was the most disastrous of the week, and was for a house, barn and several out buildings on Washington street just over the Montvale line. This was formerly known as the Nichols place, and was occupied by two Italian families, Joseph and Michael Direnzo. The alarm was telephoned to the Woburn department by Mr. W. G. Richardson whose large house and dairy adjoins, and a few minutes later the flames were seen by others and the box in Winchester at the corner of Cross and Washington streets rung in. The Winchester apparatus arrived on the scene first, but owing to the great distance from the hydrant did not have enough hose. The steamer horses were at the west side woods fire, and as the majority of fires were brush, the centre hose wagon did not respond to the first alarm. A second alarm brought this piece of apparatus, which also arrived before the Woburn wagons. By this time the stable, where the fire originated was practically burned down, several out houses in flames, and the house proper burning fiercely on two sides. The water pressure was so low that it was not very effective, and although the house was not burned to the ground, but little of it was saved, the most beneficial work being done by Woburn water.

It is thought that the fire started from children playing with matches in the stable. The high wind blew so as to protect the house from the flames and it burned very slowly at first. Except for the long distance from any fire apparatus it would have probably been saved. All of the household effects of the two families of any considerable value were removed from the house, and it is understood that a small insurance was carried.

Later in the afternoon of the same day the department was called to the box at the corner of Eaton and Washington streets for a fire under the piazza of the house on the corner formerly used as the parochial residence for St. Mary's Church. The cause of this fire is unknown. The damage was slight.

Following this fire the supply wagon was called to the west side hills again for a fire in the woods near the Smith farm.

On the same evening the department was again called to the west side for another dangerous section of fire which burned in the woods during the day, and on Wednesday still another trip was necessary.

The welcome rain of Thursday morning aided considerably in extinguishing such fires as were still burning in the woods.

ITALIAN CENSUS.

For his own convenience, Chief of Police McIntosh has had his officers take a census of the Italians in Winchester. The names have been indexed on cards, so that he can tell at a glance where every Italian lives, the number in a house, and number of men, women and children. There are 515 altogether—257 men and 258 women and children. Each house visited contained from four to twelve men. When the warm weather arrives, the Italian population will be increased quite a little. These men are employed by contractors and in several of the industries of the town. No doubt readers of the STAR have been unaware of this large showing of Italians in Winchester.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank all who, by their acts of kindness, words of sympathy and sending of beautiful flowers, have helped us in our recent sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. McGown.

HE DOES THINGS.

Attends School and Conducts Big Business.

Colgate a Young Man whose Future Is Certain to be Bright.

There is a young man in Winchester who is destined to make a mark in life, and his name is Wm. Homer Colgate. He is a student at the High school and studying hard, yet outside of school hours he is doing a big man's work, and doing it well and successfully, too. Some months ago Mr. Colgate announced to his intimate friends that he was going to take up vacuum cleaning. They laughed at him, and predicted early discouragement and failure. Happily, he has disappointed his friends by making good, and now they are smiling and taking the young man seriously for they see him to be full of grit and determination, two essential qualities needed to make a man great in this world.

Mr. Colgate secured a vacuum cleaner, and this with his get-there qualities was his only stock in trade. He is a staunch believer in printer's ink, so he promptly started in by telling the army of STAR readers that he was ready for business and what he could do to relieve the mistress of the druggery of cleaning house and making it fresh and free from dust.

The earnestness of the young man and the printed stories that he told quickly made their impress on women folks, and also for that matter the men, too, and business began to come his way. In fact it came so fast that in a short time he found that he could not handle it and at the same time attend to his studies at school. This latter he did not propose to abandon, for he is bound to secure an education no matter what comes, so he persuaded his step-father to give up his business, and devote his time to vacuum cleaning. This gentleman, being a little skeptical, relinquished his position, but with a string attached to it. He quickly found, however, that he, alone, was not equal to handling the fast coming orders, so an extra man was hired, then another, until now there are four of them, and they have to march quickstep to keep up with the business that young Colgate is crowding upon them.

This success would cause many men to "let it go at that," but not so with Mr. Colgate, as this vacuum business is only a means to an end, and that end is an education. He is studying hard at school, and as soon as he has completed his course, the Institute of Technology is his goal, and if ever a boy gets there he will, barring anything unforseen. This will not be his ultimate goal, however, as he proposes to go higher. He has done all this unaided financially, his relatives being people of moderate means, could not materially assist him in his desire for a higher education. Our readers should follow the future of Mr. Colgate; it may not only be interesting, but instructive to the young men of today who may find themselves obliged to advance in life through their own resources, or remain nobody. It may even prove to be an inspiration to the rich man's son, also.

The vacuum cleaning business is already established and is bringing in money enough to send Mr. Colgate to the Mass. Institute of Technology, when the time comes, and when he enters he will give to his step-father a good paying proposition, and later on we will hear more from this young man in his journey up the ladder that leads to a fuller success.

March 22—April 9, 1910.

Wells Cathedral. This Cathedral, though not one of the largest, is considered one of the finest churches in England, and some authorities do not hesitate to give it the first place of all, its complete collection of old ecclesiastical buildings making it the most perfect example of a cathedral, with all its parts and appurtenances. It is situated in the small city of Wells, which has been the see of a bishop since the 10th century. The church is the chief ornament of the place, and indeed may be said to be the place itself.

MRS. KATHERINE WELCH.

Mrs. Katherine Welch, a former resident of this town, passed away at her home in Cambridge on Saturday of nephritis. She leaves one daughter Mrs. Katherine Haley of 81 Nelson street, this town.

The funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Francis E. Rogers officiated. The pall bearers were Messrs. David Sullivan, Hugh McDonald, James Sullivan, and Edward Maguire. The burial was at Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

Mrs. Louis Wagg, of Burlington, Vt., is visiting her sister, Mrs. M. A. Cummings.

THE POP CONCERT.

The annual Easter Monday pop concert for the benefit of the Hospital Aid Fund, held in the Town Hall on Monday night was by far the most successful yet given. The hall was so changed by the opening of the small hall and transforming the two into one large auditorium, that many hardly realized where they were upon first entering. This was to a large measure due to the skill of the decorator, Mr. Boomer of Boston, who most kindly made this contribution to the cause. The graceful festoons of green and white bunting, starting from the very apex of the halls, gave height, airiness and a sense of coolness which was most refreshing and spring-like. The stage was banked with palms, Easter lilies and rose trees, loaned by J. Newman and Sons, and the extra electric lights contributed by Sanderson, with their rose shades added just the touch of color needed to complete the whole.

The tables, 92 in number, occupied the entire centre of the hall, while the refreshments were served from beneath the south balcony, concealed by a latticed screen, and the space under the north balcony was enjoyed as a promenade.

The scene from the balconies was one of enchantment; the beautifully dressed ladies, the kaleidoscope of color, relieved by the black and white of the gentlemen's dress, the waiters in their dainty muslin gowns, and the air of joy and mirth that prevailed throughout the whole hall, made a picture not soon forgotten.

A most acceptable program was given by the Salem Cadet Band, Jean Missud, leader, consisting of ten numbers, and attractive programmes and menus were furnished by the band as on the two previous years.

The program was as follows:

March, "The Glory of the Yankee Navy," Sousa
a Serenade" from "Les Millions' de Pierrot," Drigo
b Highland Patrol, "The Wee Mc-Greegor, Amers
Valse, "Espana," Waldteufel
Selection, "Tales of Hoffman," Offenbach
Melodies from the, "Midnight Sons," Scott
Fantasia on Themes from Celebrated Operas, Tobani
Selection, "Three Twins," Hoschna
a "Down South," Myddleton
b "Softly Unawares," Lincke
Selection, "The Dollar Princess," Fall
Melodies from the, "Red Mill," Herbert

During the evening Mr. George E. Willey sang two selections, The Creole Love Song and The Armourer from Robin Hood, which were received with much enthusiasm and greatly enjoyed by the large audience of over 400 persons.

The refreshments were especially delicious and were contributed by the Weber, McDonald Co. of Boston through Mr. George Whiting of Somerville, and also by the Warren F. Witherell Co. of Boston.

Following the concert dancing was enjoyed until 12 o'clock.

The following young gentlemen assisted:

Harold Wheatley, Dean Wheatley, Theodore Main, Walter Balger, Ernest Evans, Charles Marshall, Kenneth Caldwell, Robert Leland, Courtney Gendron, Harold Farnsworth.

The committee in charge of this very successful affair was composed of Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, Mrs. Frank A. Cutting, Mrs. George H. Root, Miss M. Alice Mason, Mrs. Percy W. Witherell, Mr. Percy W. Witherell.

CAR STOPS AT CHURCHES.

There are white posts opposite or nearly opposite most of the churches in town, but there are one or two churches of which this is not true, and accordingly the following quotation from a letter from the Superintendent of the Boston and Northern Street Railway company may be of interest.

"Cars are on Sundays and such other days as there might be entertainments, supposed to stop in front of all churches to take on and leave off passengers, and I have posted notice calling attention to same."

NAUTICAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

Winchester, Mass., March 28, 1910.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Year Book of the Massachusetts Nautical Training Shool has just been received. It has occurred to me that some parents in Winchester may be interested in knowing that a boy may, through this school, be provided at a cost of only $110 with an excellent nautical education. I note that many of the graduates are now holding responsible positions on board vessels in every branch of the marine service, the titles running from Third Lieutenant to Captain.

The qualifications for admission are as follows:

First: Candidates should be between the ages of sixteen and twenty years.

Second: They must be of normal size, of sound constitution and free from all physical defects, and must pass a physical examination before the ship's surgeon.

Third: They must, before admission, produce testimonials of good character.

Fourth: They must have an inclination for a seafaring life, and enter the school of their own free will.

Fifth: They should be able to pass a satisfactory examination, such as would be required for entrance into the High schools of this State. (Examinations are held on board the U. S. S. "Ranger," in the spring and autumn, and at other times at the discretion of the Board of Commissioners.)

Sixth: They must be residents of this State, and have either a parent or guardian residing in the State of Massachusetts to sign the necessary papers.

All expenses except for clothing, $110 are paid by the commonwealth.

The course of study is two years in length and includes seamanship, navigation, mechanics and engineering, electricity, construction, arithmetic, algebra, hygiene and English. The instruction is given on the United States Steamship "Ranger." On the same vessel, also, an annual cruise is taken. In the course of 1909 from June 7 to October 28, they touched at Copenhagen, Stockholm, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Gibraltar, Genoa and Bermuda, a trip of 12,784 miles.

In the present membership list I do not observe any name from Winchester, hence this note. If any parents would like to consult with me in this connection, I shall be glad to see them. We have no desire to lose any boys from our school but we are also anxious to be of all possible service.

Yours very truly,
Schuyler F. Herron,
Superintendent of Schools.

Plan for Abolition of the Grade Crossing.

A number of citizens having expressed a desire to see the so called Redfern two bridges plan for the abolition of the crossing in the square, we reproduce the latest plan submitted by him. The late Mr. Redfern had previously proposed several other plans which differed slightly from the above. One of them contemplated a route by way of Railroad avenue instead of by way of Winchester place. It may be said in this connection that Mr. Redfern in giving his time, thought and money to preparing the plans had no object in view except the future welfare of the town of Winchester, which he loved so much, and also its improvement. He made no personal effort to urge his plans upon the town, neither did he seek the support of citizens at town meeting in advocating them. He trusted that the citizens might see their merits, as he did, after a careful study of the situation for many years.

ADVANTAGES OF ABOVE PLAN.

1. Abolition of the grade crossings at the centre and at the station by the erection of two overhead bridges.

2. Retention of substantially same lines of travel as at present — the distance from Main street to Main street intersections being about 75 feet more than as now, and from the centre to Church street intersections about 300 feet more than existing lines.

3. Provision for passengers by steam cars to take electrics to or from the station to any part of the town.

4. No alteration in grade of R. R. roadbed; absolutely no interruption of steam, electric or highway travel, nor interference with the traffic of a single storekeeper in town while the work is in progress.

5. The public will be conveniently served with the R. R. station at the centre, and the post office instead of being located in the suburbs as at present, will be finely situated to meet the business requirements of the town.

6. A subway 15 feet wide and 8 feet high will permit the public to pass from one side of the R. R. to the other almost as easily as the accomodations now afforded by the street. A fence between the tracks, at the station will prevent passengers crossing from one platform to the other, but inclines or stairways connecting with the subway will enable them to pass freely to either side without danger.

7. No $5,000 to $10,000 outlay will be required for a new Fire Apparatus site.

8. Arrangement for an avenue to connect Swanton street with Main street at the centre.

9. Result obtained gives maximum safety and convenience with cost of construction and damages not excessive.

10. While not incorporating all the desirable features, such a plan as is here proposed makes it possible to carry out at any future time many attractive improvements.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

A Main street gentleman has just explained to The Spectator the Pocket Perin system of acquiring foreign languages by enlisting the aid of pictures and The Spectator cannot see why its introduction in the upper grades of the Winchester public schools would not be a good step for local educators to take, since its primary appeal is to the eye instead of to the ear. The principle is that we remember things we see more easily than sounds we hear. As the Main street gentleman explains the system the leading idea is simple — to teach a novice a foreign language exactly the same way in which he learns his own — i. e., through the avenues of the eye and ear. Thus, when a child is learning to talk he distinguishes certain objects before he has learned their names. He knows his mother by sight, for instance, before he associates her with the word mother. Similarly, if a child learning French is shown the picture of a canine, the notion of a canine is at once fixed in his mind. Therefore when the canine is pointed out to him, if he is told that it is un chien, he learns the French word by direct reference to the object itself, and not to its equivalent word. By this simple means the labor of learning is minimized, and the child's interest is at the same time excited. Above all, the ear becomes trained by listening to the sound of the various words as uttered by the teacher (apart from their alphabetical combinations), and by careful and repeated imitation of these sounds a really good pronunciation is assured at the outset.

Does nature study receive sufficient attention in the public schools of Winchester. A citizen very much interested in our public schools suggests an egg shell farm at each school in the town. The idea is thus described to The Spectator by the gentleman aforesaid: "Each child brings an egg shell about two thirds whole. The child's name is written on the shell and after a lesson on soils sufficient earth is placed in the shell to fill it. Each child in a room is given the same kind of seed to plant. The shells are then placed in a large shallow box and held in an upright position by sand. The box is kept in proper light and scientific care is given the plant. After the plant becomes too large for the shell the child is encouraged to take it home and plant it in a garden. The teachers aim to teach the complete life history of the plant, from seed to seed." The Spectator looks with favor upon any scheme to interest the school children of Winchester in gardening. The pupils should be encouraged to make gardens of their own at home and to assist in beautifying the school grounds.

The Spectator regrets that a representative of the society with the long name was not in the vicinity of Winchester Square the other day when a Boston dealer in eggs sent an over-loaded wagon through this town.

A Pleasant street lady muses that the nutmeg is a hard nut to crack, but it has to yield to the grate powers.

"Don't let me catch you reading any more of them dime novels," said an irate Winchester father after throwing the Lord Beaconsfield's "Endymion" into the fire. Good 'eavens' just think of it, me lads an' gentlemen!

A certain Winchester lady, whose age is among the undiscoverable things of earth, indignantly denies that her father is an old gentleman. Perhaps not; even Methuselah reckoned himself young sometime after he was rising 900.

A member of the clerical profession in Winchester describes humor as more than a capacity to make or enjoy a jest. It is really a quickened perception or faculty of looking at a subject from more than one side. This clergyman has been led to observe that there is among the women of Winchester, as elsewhere, not the lack of a sense of humor, but of the application of it, though they appreciate the more intricate lines of the humorous more deeply than do men. One of our Winchester teachers recently testified within hearing of The Spectator that quick witted, laughing children need less than half the care that others require. Some of the great and lasting pieces of literature are said to contain not one word of humor, but The Spectator's clerical friend is of the opinion that one should be a humorist to be a great moral teacher or a broad humanitarian.

"What," asked a Winchester Sunday school teacher, "is that invisible power that prevents the wicked man from sleeping, and causes him to toss about upon his pillow, and what should he do to enjoy that peace that passeth understanding?" "Don't have any holes in the mosquito netting," was the prompt answer from one of the youngsters.

At the post office one day recently The Spectator overheard a [illegible] remark to another that a [illegible] man can walk the streets on the muddiest day and not get the white edges of his canvass [illegible] soiled, when a Winchester [illegible] [illegible] feet [illegible] his [illegible]

A certain [illegible] The Spectator wouldn't be [illegible] because [illegible] kissed him, [illegible] professed [illegible]. Some persons who know the Winchesterite in question would consider this a strong argument to the contrary.

MRS. SUSAN D. HOWE.

Mrs. Susan D. Howe, aged 78 years, died at the home of her son Mr. William W. Howe on Forest street Sunday of a complication of diseases. She had been seriously ill for the previous week. Mrs. Howe was born in Groton, and was the widow of the late William R. Howe. Her father was Eben Woods, and in addition to Mr. William W. Howe she leaves one other son, Dr. Charles Howe of Cleveland Ohio, President of the Case School of Applied Science, and a daughter, Mrs. Jean Putney of Medford. Mr. William W. Howe is Sub-Master of the Henry S. Pierce School in Dorchester.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Wednesday morning at 10.30, conducted by Rev. Dr. Earl of the Ruggles Street Church, Boston. The burial was at Quincy.

CHARLES HARGROVE BROKE LEG.

On Saturday morning Charles, the young son of Police Officer James P. Hargrove, received a bad fracture to his left leg. The young man is employed by Gargas Bros., the fruit dealers, and as he attempted to get on the wagon the horse started, causing him to slip and fall beneath the wheels, both passing over his leg. He was taken to the Mass. Gen. Hospital, where he is reported as resting comfortably. It is anticipated that he will be confined there for the next five or six weeks.

Milk Ann cement!

WE beg to announce that we purchased the milk business run by A. E. and A. C. Richardson under the name of Brookside Dairy. We are aware of the high standards under which this dairy has been run and can assure you that we are prepared to maintain the quality and service that have been given you. The business, in fact will continue under the management of Mr. Richardson, who can be found at his old address.

¶ To those unfamiliar with our name and methods we may say that our bottled milk is exclusively from dairies in Massachusetts, in the east central part, and are under inspection by the State Board of Health. In addition we maintain inspectors privately, who go regularly from dairy to dairy to secure sanitary conditions. This supervision of our milk supply is supplemented by the work of a thoroughly equipped Chemical Laboratory to guarantee milk of one standard of richness and by a modern Bacteriological Laboratory to guarantee cleanliness and safety. Employees wear white suits, washed and sterilized in our own steam laundry.

¶ In our milk handling, no scientific knowledge or equipment have been spared. The bottles are subjected to cleansing and sterilizing by apparatus employing caustic alkalis, boiling water and steam. The filling of the bottles is done by sanitary and automatic apparatus which eliminates completely human handling. Throughout, the milk is maintained at a low temperature to prevent development of bacteria.

¶ In addition to our regular supply of milk at 8c per quart, we offer you the following milk products:—

Modified Milk Three formulas	To be ordered by physician for infant feeding.
Buttermilk 5c qt.	A pleasing beverage and also valuable for indigestion.
Cream in 1-2 pt. jars in three grades	Light, 7c Medium, 10c Heavy, 15c

¶ We assure you of our desire to give you the highest quality of milk products and the best of service, and we bespeak the favor of your patronage.

Very truly yours,

HELPFUL HYMNS

Or Favorite Hymns of Favorite Men and Women, and Gems of Thought in Verse that appeal to all Mankind.

Besides an anthological collection of gems of thought in verse, it is hoped at some future time to be able to publish a larger number of the favorite Hymns of men and women of note, a few specimens of which are given below:

Dr. Lyman Beecher said that the following hymn was the sweetest one in all hymnology.

"Depart in peace the Savior said
Thy sins are all forgiven,
The trembling sinner raised her head
In peaceful hope of Heaven."

Daniel Webster's favorite hymn:

"In the cross of Christ I glory
Towering o'er the wrecks of time,
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head Sublime."

Dr. Park's of Andover, which was sung at his funeral (1900):

"O God our help in ages past,
Our hope in time to come,
Our Shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."

Oliver Wendell Holmes':—

"I love to steal awhile away
From every cumbering care,
And spend the hours of setting day
In humble grateful prayer."

Originally written "Little ones and care" as the author, Phoebe Brown, being in humble circumstances did washing for the students at Amherst College, and had a large family of children.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale's:—

"While Thee I seek Protecting Power
Be my vain wishes stilled,
And may this consecrated hour
With better hopes be filled."

Dr. E. H. Chapin (New York) Universalist minister:—

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform,
He plants his footsteps on the sea,
And rides upon the storm."

Also

"O could I speak the matchless worth,
O could I sound the glories forth
That in my Savior shine."

Brooke Hereford's: Unitarian minister (London-Boston)

"Abide with me! fast falls the eventide;
The Darkness deepens, Lord, with me abide;
When other helpers fail and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, oh, abide with me!"

Henry Francis Lyte (1847).

H. W. Beecher:—

"Love Divine all love excelling."

Sung usually to a tune called "Beecher" which was composed by his pet organist

John Zundell.

"When all thy mercies O my God
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view I'm lost
In wonder, love and praise."

By Addison

is said to have been greatly admired by Tom Paine.

Fanny Crosby who has written more than five thousand hymns tells us that she spent eight years studying different poetic measures, and authors, and how to write smoothly and correctly.

She has memorized and can repeat almost volumes composed by herself and others. Her favorite of her own composition is:—

"Safe in the arms of Jesus."

Of other authors:—

"Lead Kindly Light"

By Bishop Newman

"Faith of our fathers" By Faber, and

"Nearer my God to Thee"

By Sarah F. Adams.

Dr. Peabody, (Chaplain of Harvard College) and Dr. S. H. Taylor of Andover, showed partiality for the same hymn of Dr. Watts, by reading it frequently at the devotional exercises of these institutions.

"My God permit me not to be
A stranger to myself and Thee:
Amidst a thousand thoughts I rove
Forgetful of my highest love."

Well do I remember the peculiar force that Dr. Taylor used to give to the following verse, as he read the hymn, at morning prayers, fifty years ago, at Phillips Academy:—

"Be earth with all her scenes withdrawn;
Let noise and vanity be gone;
In secret silence of the mind,
My heaven, and there my God I find."

The following poem written by Knox (a contemporary of Sir Walter Scott), was highly prized by Abraham Lincoln:—

"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift-fleeting meteor, a fast-flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
He passes from life to his rest in the grave."

But there is one hymn that transcends all others; it is, mother's favorite hymn, as it comes fresh to our mind, together with the same old tune, in her sweet soprano tones, she used to sing to us in our childhood days, it revives reminiscences of early life, and its remembrance begets a silence weightier than words:

"O for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb."

Though many a decade has passed, the impression of the song, and of the exemplary life remain, and we realize the force of the saying of Abraham Lincoln,

"All that I am and all that I hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

The wonderful power of Divine Healing is expressed with great strength and beauty in many of the masterly hymns of Whittier and Samuel Longfellow, affording help and consolation to those who look to the Great Physician in times of sickness and trouble.

For example:

"I look to Thee in every need
And never look in vain;
I feel thy touch Eternal Love
And all is well again;
The thoughts of Thee are mightier far
Than sin, and pain, and sorrow are."

"The freer step, the fuller breath,
The wide horizon's grander view,
The sense of life that knows no death,
The life that maketh all things new."

"The healing of the seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch him in life's throng and press,
And we are well again."

"Immortal love forever full Forever flowing free."

"O Love, O Love, our faith our Sight."

"Discouraged in the work of life,
Disheartened by its load,
Shamed by its failures or its fears,
I sink beneath the road;
But let me only think of Thee,
And then new heart springs up in me."

The favorite Hymns of the different cults oftentimes are those expressing sentiments peculiar to their own religious belief, but "Nearer My God to Thee" by Sarah F. Adams, which has sung itself around the world, seems to have such breadth and scope as to render it welcome by all denominations, the tune to which it is commonly set being adapted by Dr. Lowell Mason from an old melody called

"Oft in the Stilly Night."

In many instances some little circumstance has caused the inspiration of these songs and hymns:—

Dexter Smith, when a letter carrier, came to a house where death had occurred. Seeing the door knob draped in mourning, the inspiration came, he went to his room and composed the popular song so widely known,

"Ring the bell softly
There's crape on the door."

Hezekiah Butterworth in speaking of these hymns says "The fittest only survive." "They must be written from some deep experience in life to be lasting; those written merely for effect," no matter how highly elaborated are ephemeral, and will not stand the test of time."

Like true eloquence

"They come if they come at all like the outbreaking of a fountain from its native source, or the bursting forth of volcanic fires."

Under such inspiration they are ever classic though composed but yesterday.

These sacred songs distilled for ages from the Alembic of the poet's brain have been the inspiration of the living, and oftentimes sung or repeated by their admirers during their last moments on earth.

No wonder Andrew Fletcher, a Scottish patriot of the seventeenth century said, "Let me write the songs of a nation and I care not who makes her laws;" we might transform the language of Fletcher and with equal propriety say

Let me write the Hymns of a church and I care not who makes her creeds.

NEW BUILDING FOR BEAR HILL.

People of Stoneham, Winchester, Reading and neighboring towns are taking interest in the announcement that the widely popular Bear Hill observatory in the Fells is to be replaced with a larger, higher and vastly improved structure. The present observatory was built in the early nineties by the Appalachain Mountain Club, but about six months ago was closed by the Metropolitan Park Commission. It commands the finest view of Boston harbor and the ocean and the surrounding country in other directions to be had in this section of the state. Work on the new observatory will be commenced early this spring.

MACLEOD VS McCALL.

Ex-Senator Fred J. Macleod is thinking seriously of offering himself as a Democratic candidate for congress next fall against Congressman Samuel W. McCall. Since the election down on the cape the Democrats have taken courage and propose to make active campaigns even in the strong Republican districts. Since Mr. Foss' election there has been considerable talk heard that Mr. Macleod would give Mr. McCall a run next fall. To a Chronicle man, Mr. Macleod stated that he might possibly be a candidate.—Cambridge Chronicle.

SHALL THE STATE PROVIDE HOMES?

The establishment of a permanent homestead commission in this state, with power to expend $100,000, is recommended by the legislative committee on public health in a report made to the House. This matter was quite thoroughly inquired into last year by a special commission, which reached the conclusion that it was inadvisable to legislate, and presented strong evidence in support of that finding. By the provisions of the bill now offered the commission is to consist of seven members, including the director of the bureau of statistics, the bank commissioner, a member of the state board of health, and four others. The commission is directed to purchase arable land in the suburbs of manufacturing cities and to erect on it small houses suitable for the accommodation of employees. Any person purchasing a $100 bond or more may buy a lot of land with a house on it, paying at the rate of $15 a month until the price fixed by the commission has been covered. The right of selecting a particular house and lot is to be regulated by priority in the purchase of bonds.

While this plan is commendable in some respects, there are a number of ways in which the same results can be accomplished in a more natural manner, and without the questionable feature of paternalism involved; besides the question has been raised as to the constitutionality of such action for the benefit of only a part of the citizens.—Christian Science Monitor.

The STAR believes that the present co-operative banks are a much better means in securing homes for the working men than would be the State. There are a number of men in Winchester who have been paying into the local Co-operative Bank a sum equivalent to what they had been obliged to pay for rent, and who now own their homes.

FOX Typewriter for Free Trial
Not at Your Expense—But Mine

W. R. FOX, President,
Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of—compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

You have no risk, assume no obligation, and I thank you before hand for the privilege. Just write me, personally.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1910.

SINGLE COPIES, FIVE CENTS.

Entered at the post-office at Winchester as second-class matter.

"As Hull goes, so goes the state" is pretty nearly a dead letter. Hul gave Buchanan 97 votes to 69 for Foss. It was one of the few Republican oases in a great Democratic desert.

Every person who has had occasion to use the Town Hall will miss Mr. Sumner Carr, the courteous and always accommodating custodian of the building. He was looked upon as being a fixture, but with him as with the rest of humanity, age has been creeping on and fortunately having the good sense to recognize this he retires to spend the balance of life in well earned rest. May he enjoy it.

We print on second page the latest plan prepared by the late Charles E. Redfern as a means of abolishing the grade crossing at the Square. This plan which was printed in the STAR three years ago, is reproduced at the request of citizens who are not now familiar with it and for the benefit of the many who have taken up their residence here since it was first published. Mr. Redfern was a far seeing man who had given the question many years of close study, and he did it without hope of reward believing that it was the best solution of the problem and that it would prove of distinct benefit to the Winchesters of the future.

Prompt and vigorous steps should be taken to stop the indiscriminate setting of grass fires by boys. These numerous alarms are a severe strain on the firemen and horses, and in a sense demoralizing to the personnel of the entire fire department. One or two examples made of these boys would put a stop to the reckless and dangerous practice which is becoming more common each year.

Are women citizens? This question came up in town this week to the discomfiture of a half dozen women who desired to affix their signatures to a petition to the Legislature favoring the passage of the "bar and bottle" bill. These women were not allowed to sign the petition because it read "only citizens." They would like to know now whether they are citizens within the meaning of the word, or if not, what is their status.

The governor and legislature are after the tax dodger. Governor Draper has permitted to become law, without his signature, an act to empower the tax commissioner to compel local boards of assessors to quit shielding big taxpayers who do not return all of their taxable property. The act was reported by the committee on taxation to meet such cases as the commissioner ran against during the past year, when after his supervisors had dug up property not being taxed, boards of assessors flatly refused to revise their valuations.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The preacher next Sunday morning will be the Rev. D. D. Addison, D.D., of Brookline.

The Woman's Guild will hold its regular meeting next Tuesday afternoon, April 5, meeting at the usual hour at Mrs. W. E. Wilde's, 9 Stratford road. The speaker will be the Rev. William E. Gardner, the recently appointed Secretary for Missions, of the First Department which consists of the Dioceses of New England.

The final meeting of the committee of 25 on the Parish House Fund is announced for Friday evening, April 8, at 8 o'clock, at the Rector's house.

The spring meeting of the North Suburban District Sunday School Union is to be held at Wakefield the afternoon and evening of April 7. The general topic is to be "Teacher Training." Dr. Rousmaniere is to make an address. It is hoped that the teachers of our Sunday School will all of them be able to attend.

Easter music will be repeated next Sunday.

ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY NOTES

The subscribers seats for the third or Spring Concert of the Orchestral Society will be ready for issue next week and it is hoped that every one of the subscribers for the first two concerts will take subscriptions for the third event, and that others who from one reason or another have not subscribed heretofore will come forward and help support such a very desirable enterprise. A great many in Winchester seem to know nothing about the Orchestral Society. A few having heard something about it, consider it a mediocre amateurish organization, rendering easy and commonplace numbers in a crude and inexperienced manner.

This is a great mistake, the Winchester Orchestra is probably the largest amateur organization in all New England if not all the United States and though there may be a few small organizations composed of brilliant amateur and semi-professional performers, who may excel the Winchester Orchestra in some respects, yet we doubt if any organization in the country of an equal size can render classical music with anything like the intelligence, technique and finish of our own Winchester Orchestra.

The players are working with a much greater zest for the third rehearsal than heretofore. This is due largely to their having become better acquainted with their conductor and with each other, but a great deal is due to the psychological influence of the numbers they are rehearsing. Take for instance the beautiful Strauss Waltz, "Stories from the Vienna Forest," which as one writer says, "is intended quite as much for the concert hall as the ball room, as is indicated by the signs for retarding and accelerating and by the insertion of eighteen bars for zither, which are marked 'to be omitted in playing for dance.'" The same writer goes on to say "I have noticed at Viennese dances when conductor, players and dancers are similarly entranced by the intoxicating Strauss music, there is a slight tendency on the part of the couples to yield to the capricious coquetry of movement, which is so natural to all Strauss Waltz themes."

The "Voices from the Vienna forest" will not be the only entrancing number performed at the Concert May 3rd. "The Overture to Mendelssohn's Son and Stranger" is an exquisite bit of music and Edward German's "Henry the VIII Dances" will carry their hearers back to the Court of Bluff King Hal three centuries into the past.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

At the last meeting of the club March 28th, Mrs. Dorsey read a communication from the Civic League urging club women to use their influence in regard to the passing of bills now before the Legislature concerning Child Labor. These are House Bills 330 concerning dangerous trades, 331 the bill regulating night work for children and 618 the street trades bill. Mrs. Tracy called attention to the bill (Senate 308) providing for the free distribution of the remedy for prevention of infant blindness. Believing that a personal letter often has more weight than a formal vote, all ladies interested in these most important bills are earnestly requested to write to their Representative, Mr. Wilton B. Fay of Medford in regard to the Child Labor Bills and to Senator J. Howell Crosby of Arlington for the Senate Bill.

Miss Marion McGregor Noyes spoke upon the work of the Consumer's League. This league is an association of people who try as far as possible to buy only such articles as they know to be made under good conditions: their label is placed on goods which have been made in clean factories where State laws are obeyed. Miss Noyes laid especial emphasis upon the assistance given the League whenever women insist upon goods bearing the label, as the more persistent the demand the greater number of merchants will co-operate. Women are also urged to shop early, to avoid Saturday afternoons, and to see that paper boys and those employed in other ways are of legal age for their work.

The entertainment of the afternoon was a lecture entitled "In Bird Land," by Mr. Edward Avis. Mr. Avis gave wonderful imitations of the songs of different birds, sometimes with violin accompaniment. The lecture was illustrated by colored stereopticon views.

The next meeting of the class in Current Events, Mrs. Mary Alden Ward, will be held Friday, April 8, in Assembly Hall.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY.

A mistake in the advertisement last week made April 7th the date of the High school play instead of April 5th.

The play "An Amateur Socialist" is such a rattling good farce that all the performers have entered into it with a zest worthy of professionals and in spite of the hard school work, coming at this time of year, they have gone through the tedious drilling of rehearsals without a murmur. A good house is expected, almost all of the tickets having been disposed of, but the remaining seats have been placed on sale at Abare's drug store, where they can be had up to the night of the performance.

So great has been the demand for seats that it has been decided to make the dress rehearsal Monday afteroon a public performance; admisson 25 cents, payable at the door, all seats free. In this way students of the High and Grammar schools, who for any reason have not been able to secure seats for the evening performance will be able to see the whole show for a nominal sum.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Can anybody rise and tell what useful purpose our grade crossing commission has served in the four years it has existed? We have had, sometimes, town committees which did not appear to be of much use, but they didn't cost us anything, whereas this commission is expensive as well as useless. Why, it does not even dare to file its report.

I am glad to hear that the Winchester and Medford Boat Clubs are to take hold of the question of clearing up the Aberjona river. It is absurd to have landing platforms for boats and not even water enough to float a canoe to them. It is perhaps too much mud instead of too little water.

Now that public dumps are getting scarce why not lay out that street across the pond, and so be making new land as well as disposing of old material? I know that the pond bottoms are sacred, but ways are found nowadays to get hold of, for public use, even sacred things.

Mr. Russell's letter on town meeting procedure is to the point, but while it was bad enough to support the Ap. Com. against the Water and Sewer Board in taking $5000 from water rates to pay town debt, how much worse it was to support the motion of action of a non-resident against our own officials even if we admit, as we must, the propriety of appealing to the town meeting in such a case." Sense of the meeting" would have been something quite different.

The Ap. Com. should no longer consider the schools appropriation but, the school committee should make its demands directly to the town meeting, now that it has stated that it should spend the money it deemed needed whether the town voted it or not. School committee men are state officials and the law leaves the amount they shall spend for and in connection with education to them, but like all laws there is a string to it and their judgment can be impeached and set aside by law. However, the town should know how the matter stands.

"RENEGADE" MISAPPLIED.

Winchester, Mass., March 29, 1910.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I am sorry to find in to-day's STAR an editorial in which the word "renegade" is applied to those members of Congress who have not been strictly amenable to the dictates of Messrs Aldrich and Cannon. The use of opprobrious appellations frequently indicates that, two parties being in controversy, the one has much the better of the argument and the other has been reduced, as a last resort, to calling names. This is not convincing and is, if you will pardon the expression, unseemly. Here in New England we have always insisted on the right to think each man for himself and at the present time it looks as though—see the returns from the recent elections—a considerable number of voters agree with the insurgents.

Their conclusions may be wrong. In so far as they depend upon the following briefly stated impression it might be better to show why they are in error than to find fault.

It appears that with the best of intentions President Taft has to date not satisfied the hopes and expectations of his friends, that he has permitted himself to be influenced by men who sympathize with the special interests, that party promises have been joyously forgotten, and that Messrs. Aldrich and Cannon are again in favor at the White House. These gentlemen are generally distrusted. Doubtless they are not altogether bad, no one is, but they are not in sympathy with the aims expressed in the Roosevelt policies and embodied in the latest republican national platform and they have shown an inclination to block progressive legislation. The insurgents seem to be the true exponents of the party ideals. It will be well not to condemn them too severely lest when their regularity is unquestioned their critics shall be under the necessity of recanting.

Republican.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The inauguration of a work for temperance among the children of Winchester was successfully accomplished last Friday, when the Junior League of the Methodist Church, augmented by a large number of children from other churches, was addressed by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, State Superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion. She gave an interesting talk on "The house we live in," and after it the children were very much in favor of forming a Loyal Legion. Refreshments were served by a committee from the W. C. T. U. with Mrs. Chaffee, as hostess. Further announcement of the meetings will be given.

The regular meeting of the local Union will be held Friday, April 8, 3 p.m., at the Winchester Home for the Aged on Kendall street. After the opening exercises there will be a social time and it is hoped all former members will make an effort to be present as well as others who are interested. Work for the Home has been provided and members are asked to bring their thimbles.

The passage of the "bar and bottle," bill in spite of the strong opposition on the part of the liquor interests is a matter for congratulation. It is to be hoped we have seen the last of the flaring signs in the saloon windows entreating ladies [illegible] to [illegible] (or [illegible]) goods there. Whether the beneficent results of the separation of the licenses will meet the expectations of the temperance people is a question, but even a slight improvement is a matter for which to be thankful. Of course there will be no diminution in the sale of case goods to suburbanites who patronize such grocers as do a large business in liquors "for the family trade." Against such there is no law but thanks to the growing sanity of the common people there is a steadily increasing sentiment. It is the business of the Women's Christian Temperance Union to see that this sentiment is fostered.

SPLIT EVEN IN CITY LEAGUE.

In the Woburn City League Tuesday night, Winchester and the Edison team each won two points.

Edison took the first string from Winchester by 2[illegible] pins. Winchester came strong, and took the next two by enough pins to the total. In the roll-off of the tie McCarron, anchor for the Edison, cinched a spare in the last box, winning the point. C. Martin was high with 115 and 297.

SPRING BOWLING TOURNAMENT.

On Friday night teams G and A each won four points in the spring bowling tournament at the Calumet Club. Team G had an easy win, as its opponents to a man were not able to attend the match and to roll over their ratings was all that was necessary. Team A won its four from the Tigers, and although the losers rolled the better game, the first team won by its handicap of 8 pins. Caldwell, Gendron and Olmsted were the high rollers for the evening.

DECEPTIVE ADVERTISING.

The following, from the Dry Goods Economist, fits some of Boston's big stores, and is worth thinking over:

"We frequently hear it said that anything but the strictest adherence to the truth is business suicide. Is that really so? Unfortunately, no. There are enough gullible people in this world to make it well worth while for a certain number of stores and business firms to cater exclusively to them, appealing to their blind-sight through the medium of screaming, sensational headlines and loud type-noises; through exaggerated statements which are, in most cases, positive falsehoods, and through the use of inflated comparative values. And we shall have this kind of advertising keeping company with us just as long as 'there is a sucker born every minute,' and as long as the newspapers continue to be accessories before the fact in the deliberate swindling of their readers."

Announcement of a national tuberculosis Sunday to be held on April 24 in 215,000 churches of the United States has been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

It is planned that tuberculosis sermons shall be preached in all the churches of the country. Literature will be distributed to members of the congregations, and in every way an effort will be made to teach that tuberculosis is a dangerous disease and that it can be prevented and cured.

BOSTON THEATRE.

"The Yankee Prince" by America's most famous author, actor, composer, and playwright, George M. Cohan, comes to the Boston Theatre Monday evening, April 4. Mr. Tom Lewis, well known for his wonderful success as the "Unknown" in Mr. Cohan's "Little Johnny Jones," is heading the cast which contains 75 singers, comedians and a chorus which is said to be the best drilled in the world.

No play from Mr. Cohan's pen would be complete without music, and in "The Yankee Prince" there is said to be a riot of it interspersed with an abundance of witty lines and bright repartee. Among the important principals supporting Mr. Lewis in "The Yankee Prince" are: Miss Lila Rhodes, Miss Mildred Elaine, Miss Lola Hoffman, Miss Elsie Artz, Mr. Jack Raffael, Mr. Charles King, Mr. Sherman Wade, Mr. Frank Hollins, Mr. Purnell B. Pratt, Mr. Joe Leslie, and many others of equal prominence. The chorus is composed of over three score attractive girls who can really sing and dance. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Game Situation.

The question often is asked—why is it more destructive to shoot a game bird in the spring than in the fall? Surely the bird killed in the fall will never produce any young. But, if birds are to be shot at all, the fall is the only legitimate shooting season. Nature supplies a surplus of birds in the fall. If no birds were shot this surplus would be reduced during the fall and winter by storm, starvation, cold, natural enemies and the accidents incidental to migration. Restricted shooting in fall takes only a part of the surplus; but shooting in spring destroys the naturally selected breeding stock, the fittest survivors which are on their way north to perpetuate the race. At this season the eggs in the ovaries of the females of most species are in process of development. Eggs of the black duck have been found in Massachusetts in March and the wood duck nests there in April. A good day's shooting in March, April or May greatly reduces the number of birds that might otherwise be produced the ensuing fall.

Spring shooting kills and drives out the breeding birds. Wild ducks and geese once bred in numbers in New England and in about half the United States. In the early days of spring shooting in the Mississippi Valley considerable numbers of fresh goose eggs were found on sand bars, where the flocks had rested for the night. Spring and summer shooting either exterminated the birds that bred here or drove them from this country to the uninhabited regions of Canada.

The argument by the advocates of the wasteful and pernicious practice of spring shooting is that it is useless to protect the birds here while winter and spring shooting is still allowed in the south. If the people of the south were accustomed to rob and murder our citizens who go south in winter should we offer that as a reason why we should rob and kill those who succeeded in escaping and returning safely to their homes? If our Canadian neighbors had acted on this principle we should have had practically no wild fowl in the east today, except brant and sea fowl. But the Canadians saw that we were driving the wild fowl out of the United States and that extermination threatened the birds unless spring shooting was stopped in Canada. Therefore nearly all the provinces forbade it, and their people respect the law.

Winter shooting in the south does not reduce the birds that come here as does spring shooting in the north. Many of the birds killed in the south breed in the northwest and never come here, and we find by experiment that even the most local spring protection in the north almost immediately increases the number of birds. A Rhode Island man owning a small pond allows no shooting there and black ducks breed about his pond every year. A Massachusetts man owns the land on one side of a large pond, and although he shoots there in the fall he allows no spring shooting. Last July 75 black ducks that were bred there were counted on his side of the pond and none on the other, and by Sept. first about 250 were seen. On Fisher's Island the wild fowl were protected in spring for a few years and became numerous there, while at the same time on the near shore of Connecticut, where spring shooting was then allowed, the ducks were few and far between. Since spring shooting was abolished in Connecticut, three years ago, wild fow have become more plentiful than for many years. In Jefferson County, New York, spring shooting was forbidden by law before it was prohibited in the rest of the state and soon it seemed as if the ducks from all over the state were congregating there. Every state that has prohibited spring shooting has had a great increase in both breeding and migrating birds. No state that has tried the absolute abolition of spring shooting for a number of years has repealed the law protecting the birds.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The phrase, "everything new in vaudeville starts at Keith's," is quoted country-wide and there never was a greater demonstration of this fact than last week when Mrs. La Salle Corbell Pickett, widow of the Confederate general, appeared at Mr. Keith's theatre in Boston and gave her description of Gettysburg. Next week she will be heard in an entirely different line, possibly the famous Southern folk-lore stories, which are in a way even more interesting than her vivid description of Gettysburg.

As usual there will be an exceptionally strong vaudeville bill headed by Mlle Dazie, unquestionably America's greatest dancer and pantomimist.

Other features of the bill will be W. C. Field's the tramp juggler; Carson and Willard in "The Dutch in Egypt;" Tomy Wilson; Dolan and Lenharr; the 6 Musical Nosses in "A Day in Old Seville;" Harry Breen; and the Amoros sisters.

There are more GOOD reasons for buying lots in Sheffield West than can be offered in favor of any other site in Winchester. A personal interview will convince you. Geo. Adams Woods.

RETARDATION IS EXPENSIVE.

Retardation of pupils in the public schools of the state is an item of great expense to the cities and towns, is the statement of Superintendent of Schools John C. Anthony of Melrose in his annual report of the condition of the school department made to Mayor Moore.

Taking the present entering class of the high school for an example, Superintendent Anthony, after a careful investigation, says that with an average age of 15 years and 9 months, it has taken the class one sixth more than the allotted time, at an extra cost to the city of $9405.85. At the present time there are in the public schools 231 pupils who failed of promotion and who are repeating the work at an additional cost to the city of $7419.75.

Out of a membership in the Melrose schools of 2753 there are 929 children who have lost some time during their schooling from one to four years. The extra cost to the city for the past 12 years on account of these backward pupils, which Superintendent Anthony terms "retardation," amounts to $17,167.48, or an average yearly cost of over $6,000. As the schools are constantly growing in attendance, the cost each year on account of retardation becomes larger.

From a specific number of cases investigated Superintendent Anthony has given the reasons for the backwardness as follows: Due to immaturity 367 due to preventable cases 250, unnecessary absence or lack of interest 206, on account of transfers from other cities and towns 96.

As a remedy for the additional expense Superintendent Anthony believes that the double promotion system recently inaugurated will advance pupils rapidly enough to offset the expense for the slower and backward pupils, while the raising of the entering age from 5 to 6 years will assist materially in reducing the number of cases of non-promotion on account of immaturity, which class comprises about three eights of the total number held back.

X.—The Modern Kitchen

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

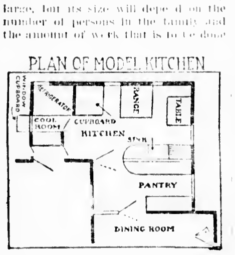
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

CONSIDERING the importance of the kitchen to the rest of the home, it seems strange that it should very often be the least attractive room from every point of view in the house. We find it tucked off in some dark corner with little or no ventilation, its wall and floor covering dark and dingy and its equipment so meager it would be impossible to find any pleasure in working with them.

The kitchen is the workroom of the home. Its arrangement, pleasant or otherwise, very often gives the keynote of conditions in the home. My idea of a real kitchen is this: It should be as bright and cheery as any room in the house. I would much prefer a gloomy parlor than a dark, unpleasant kitchen. If possible I should have a north and east exposure. This would insure sunlight in the morning and a cool breeze on hot summer afternoons. Then I should be careful to have a good view from the kitchen window, something beautiful to look out upon, like a stately tree, a bit of green lawn or a trim vegetable garden. The outlook from kitchens in towns and cities is too often brick walls of adjoining buildings, untidy back yards or high board fences. From kitchens in the country we often look out upon an unsightly woodpile or barnyard filled with a clutter of old farm implements. With such dreary views it is no wonder if the women who must spend three-fourths of their time in the kitchen have very little love for housework.

There should be at least two windows and, if possible, an outside door opposite one window in order to have good ventilation at all times. The kitchen should not be unnecessarily large, but its size will depend on the number of persons in the family and the amount of work that is to be done in it. Too much space between the different pieces of furniture necessitates too many unnecessary steps. A suitable moderate sized kitchen is about 12 by 14 feet.

PLAN OF MODEL KITCHEN



The kitchen should be convenient to the dining room, either opening directly into it or, still better, having the pantry between the rooms. In the latter case there should be a cupboard with sliding doors opening into both kitchen and pantry for convenience in setting the table and removing dishes to the kitchen. The cut gives a plan of a convenient kitchen, showing position of windows and doors, also the larger pieces of furniture.

In this plan note the position of the refrigerator, which can be reached from the outside so that ice may be put into it without coming into the kitchen. There is also a window in the cool room to which a window cupboard can be attached. This room with its cupboard will take the place of the refrigerator in winter and may be used as a baking room in hot weather.

The sink, with draining board, is located on the side next the pantry. Sliding doors are arranged at the back so that dishes washed in the sink may be placed on the pantry shelves without going into the pantry itself. Another convenient feature in the arrangement of this kitchen is the position of windows between range and work table, giving good light and ventilation. If possible avoid having a door leading upstairs opening in the kitchen, because in such cases it is almost impossible to keep the odors of cooking from penetrating to the upstairs rooms.

Wall and Floor Covering.

The kitchen to be sanitary in every particular should be finished in some way that will permit of frequent washing. The best wall covering is the simplest and most easily cared for material that can be purchased. There is nothing better for this purpose than sanitas, a material similar to oilcloth. The first cost is a little more than paint or tinting, but when carefully applied it is more lasting. Sanitas is put on with paste in horizontal strips around the room. The edge of each piece must be pasted down securely, and care should be taken to avoid wrinkles. If a tablespoonful of molasses is added to each quart of paste it will stick more firmly.

The painted wall is suitable for kitchen and pantry provided a flat finish is given and a color used in preference to white. A glossy surface, particularly a white one, is hard on the eyes and becomes very monotonous. Wall paper is not a desirable covering for a kitchen wall because it absorbs moisture and odors and cannot be cleaned satisfactorily.

For the floor the best covering is inlaid linoleum. This to my mind is better than the polished floor, which is always slippery and is hard on the feet. Then there is the painted floor, which has both advantages and disadvantages, chief among the latter being not very durable qualities. The kitchen floor should not be covered with carpet, because that is unsanitary, neither should it be devoid of any covering and so require scrubbing. This is one of the items of work which should be eliminated from the housekeeper's schedule. The white sanded floors, tables, etc., are attractive to the eye and a joy to a certain type of housekeeper, but they represent too much energy and labor to be included in modern methods. Floors should be covered with some material easily cleaned, and tables, sinks, shelves, etc., should be painted or covered with zinc, tile or oilcloth. The zinc table and the tile sink are a lasting pleasure and lessen work to such an extent that they soon more than pay for the initial cost.

Kitchen Furniture.

This should be simple, durable and adequate for the needs of the housekeeper. The kind and number of pieces will largely depend on the character of the home. But in every kitchen there should be a good range, at least one work table and a convenient sink supplied with running water and modern plumbing. These three articles should be near neighbors because they are so frequently used at the same time.

Whatever the fuel, coal, wood, gas or gasoline, it should be burned in a good range, one that is perfect in all its parts and equipped with a good baking oven. No part of the housefurnishing is more important than the kitchen stove and no piece of farm machinery, however necessary, should be bought by sacrificing the new stove. Since the preparation of food for the table is an absolute necessity in every home, the stove, whatever its style, should be as good as any part of the equipment of the entire establishment.

The work table should be high enough that the worker need not stand in an uncomfortable position while ironing or baking. Kitchen tables are made thirty inches high, which is not enough for a woman five feet six inches in height, and to bend over it, as she always must, results in an unnecessary weariness or backache. Either the low table should be set upon supports or a higher one should be ordered. The high stool is a simple piece of furniture which should be in every kitchen. It can be slipped under the work table when not in use and is a convenient seat while preparing vegetables, ironing and doing the numberless other tasks which can be performed sitting just as well as standing.

A clock is necessary in the kitchen, also a pair of strong scissors, a pincushion with pins and some coarse needles and thread, both white and black. These are constantly needed, and it makes unnecessary steps to be obliged to go to the living room for them. It is hardly possible to have too many drawers, shelves and cupboards, and yet these ought not to be used to encourage disorderliness. There is sometimes a temptation to hide away things in cupboard or drawers that would better be destroyed at once than have them add to the task of straightening up later on.

The modern kitchen may have other useful pieces of furniture in addition to the above, if there is money enough to provide them. Among these may be mentioned a water or electric motor or even a small one horsepower gasoline engine, any one of which will run the washing machine, mangle, churn, cream separator and can be attached to the sewing machine. This little contrivance is not so expensive that it need be excluded from even moderate homes, considering the amount of work it will accomplish and the strength it will save. When a woman is obliged to do all her housework it ought certainly to be counted as one of the necessities. The kitchen cabinet with separate compartments for all kinds of groceries and supplies is sometimes preferred to the pantry. It is entirely a matter of personal preference which should be chosen, for both are most convenient. Reasonable care must, however, be taken not to leave groceries lying about loosely in the cabinet, for these will attract insects as well as mice. But the housekeeper endowed with even the most ordinary degree of order may easily avoid such a misfortune.

The electric or gasoline iron is a handy little appliance for making kitchen work lighter and is inexpensive when usefulness and labor saving qualities are balanced with dollars and cents. In the country, of course, the gasoline iron is generally the only one possible, but these have now been brought to a degree of perfection that makes them satisfactory.

The Use of the Kitchen.

One last important point to remember in furnishing a kitchen is that its real purpose is a workroom, not a living or dining room. A workroom should have its tools conveniently arranged within easy reach of the workman. All utensils and evidences of kitchen work should not be kept in other parts of the house or stowed away in obscure places in order that the room may be presentable when strangers come. The modern kitchen is not intended to fill the place of a reception room, and only in exceptional cases should it be used as a dining room.

In order to show that spitting on the sidewalks is dangerous to health, an investigation has been made by Dr. John Robertson, Medical Heath Officer of Birmingham, England, which shows that seven percent of the "spits" collected in public places contained consumption germs. On the other hand the dust collected from the floors of the cottages of the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium has been found to be free of tuberculosis germs, showing that a careful consumptive is not dangerous.

I manufacture all kinds of good mattresses and sell them at retail. I find that among the best sellers, or those that are the most in demand are, first, my combination mattress, made of African and Poplar Fibres, with a good thick layer of clean cotton on the top and bottom, made up in the celebrated Webster [illegible] in two parts, and sold for

This mattress is made to sleep on and for wear, is well [illegible] the best mattress that can be made for the price.

Another mattress that is fast growing in favor is one that I make of Silk Floss, the same kind that is used in [illegible]. Silk floss is a non-absorbent vegetable fibre which grows near the equator. It never gets lumpy, and is extremely light and fleecy. The strong points of a Silk Floss Mattress are its lightness and softness, great qualifications for a mattress.

The Price is $12.00

I use the best [illegible] ticking on this mattress, and if you have one in your guest chamber, you need not hesitate to ask your guests in the morning if they rested well.

A mattress that has always proved satisfactory in every way and has added to my reputation for making first class mattresses than any other, is the mattress that I make of pure South American horse hair. This hair is taken from the manes and tails of live horses, and is thoroughly cleansed and purified, rendering it absolutely clean and wholesome. It does not absorb moisture, and will last a lifetime. It has great resilient qualities, and for sound sleep has no equal.

Price $20.00

Made in best ticking, two parts, [illegible] and full weight.

Newsy Paragraphs.

Mr. Jonas A. Laraway met with an accident on Sunday shortly after noon when driving his automobile down Forest street. According to eye witnesses just as he was approaching the turn into Washington street a Stoneham bound electric car coming along that street made it impossible for him to round the corner, so he kept straight ahead, intending to pass down Forest street extension. The severe jolt received when crossing the car tracks threw his little daughter from the seat, Mr. Laraway catching her by the leg just as she was leaving the auto. The effort caused him to lose control of the car for an instant and it swerved and struck a tree, throwing both out. The child was badly cut under the chin by the running board of the auto, and Mr. Laraway was somewhat scratched up. Neither was seriously injured, although the automobile was somewhat damaged.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The author of "Brown of Harvard" has already demonstrated her skill at the writing of lively and entertaining plays. That comedy of college boys and college life has made a record for itself, and now "The Boys of Company B" promises to have an equally successful career at the Castle Square. It will be played by the John Craig Stock Company next week. The singing of college songs, a set of boxing matches, the drilling of an awkward squad, and other manifestations of youthful energy help to give the play an abundance of dash and zest.

Young Allen, the hero, will be acted in the Castle Square production by Mr. Craig, and Miss Young will play the part of his sweetheart heroine. Donald Meek will have a characteristically comic role, and there will be good parts also for George Hassell, Walter Walker, Bert and Wilfred Young, Al Roberts, Gertrude Binley and Mabel Colcord.

W. H. S. Dramatics a Great Success.

"THE AMATEUR SOCIALIST."

The cast.

Edward Mason, wealthy and practical,	Theodore Main
Mrs. Mason, the Amateur Socialist,	Nancy Brigham
Eleanor Mason, their daughter,	Eunice Homer
Bridget, their cook,	Ruth Carpenter
Josie,	Annette Symmes
Emma, their maids,	Mary Flinn
Mike McShane,	Robert Leland
Timothy Rouke, friends of Bridget,	Alfred Dover
Lord Curtin, in search of a rich wife,	Courtney Gendron
Lt. Ward Leighton, U. S. A. who wins the girl,	Walter Badger

An audience that completely filled the Town Hall attended the W. H. S. Dramatics which were presented by the Classes of 1910 and 1911 last Tuesday evening.

The house was a brilliant sight; almost everyone was in evening dress and the flowers worn by the ladies and the artistic decorations left from the Pop concert added greatly to the gala appearance.

The play, a three act farce by Robert Elwin Ford and entitled by the author "The Sisterhood of Bridget" has been performed a number of times in and around Boston with indifferent success but Mr. Sylvester Taylor under whose direction this performance was given rechristened it "The Amateur Socialist" and with some judicious cutting and a few additional touches here and there a bright snappy farce was the result.

The story of the society woman imbued with the spirit of Tolstoi who changes places with her servants is not preposterous, for that identical incident happended in New York not two months ago. But the New York woman of real life had more fun out of her experiment than did "Mrs Edward Mason" the Amateur Socialist of the play. Nancy Brigham played the difficult part of Mrs. Mason with a complete understanding of the requirements of the character and though often sore pressed by aggravating circumstances "Mrs. Mason" never forgot that she was a lady in spite of coal smut on her face and grease spots on her frock.

Theodore Main as "Edward Mason" the hard-headed man of business who has no patience with his wife's fads was exceedingly happy in a character that well suited him. Eunice Homer was charming as "Eleanor Mason," both as the daughter of the house and as the make believe maid who waited on the table at the servants dinner party.

That same dinner party as presided over by "Bridget," the "Cook" (Ruth Carpenter) who for that evening was lady of the house, was a great success. Miss Carpenter was in her element. "Bridget" indeed was "mistress of the whole art of perloite doin' out" and when she could not convey her instructions by means of a somewhat involved vocabulary she emphasized her meaning with a toasting fork. It was a well done bit of Irish low comedy. Walter Badger had a very difficult part but he played it well. When, disguised as "Bridget's" nephew, "L. Leighton U. S. A." said he felt like a fool, everybody believed him for he certainly looked the part. The struggle of the young lover between his desire for the girl of his heart and his disgust at having to appear in a false position in order to win her was very well portrayed. Annette Symmes and Mary Flinn were very good in their parts of Josie and Emma the maids and Robert Leland and Alfred Dover as Mike and Tim their respective admirers added much to the humor of an amusing situation. Ernest Evans made a capital page boy in buttons and Courtney Gendron scored a most decided hit as Lord Algernon Curtin the bogus English nobleman.

The performance was marked by smoothness and confidence unusual in amateur theatricals and the frequent involuntary bursts of laughter on the part of the audience showed that the wit and satire of the lines carried beyond the foot lights. The entire High school turned out en masse and an unusual number of alumni was present. Dancing after the performance lasted until midnight.

The ushers were: Arthur S. Harris, head usher; Dean Whealtey, Harold Wheatley, Robert Hamilton, Harry Locke, James Flinn, John Skilling, Kenneth Pratt, Norman Small, Marshall Wellington, and Bernard Mathews.

THE BAPTIST ROLL CALL.

The eleventh annual Roll Call of the First Baptist Church will take place on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. James E. Norcross, New England Secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, will speak, and Mrs. Granville B. Lenfest, soprano soloist, will sing. The Roll of the Church will be called. After the program in the auditorium, a collation will be served in the chapel.

The Social Committee who have the Roll Call in charge are: Mrs. Willard A. Bradley, chairman; Mrs. Mott A. Cummings, Mrs. Arnold Whittaker, Mrs. West D. Eldridge, Miss Helen M. Palmer, Miss Bertha Waldmyer, Miss Elizabeth Winn, Miss Lucy Spaulding.

LADIES' NIGHT.

Carpenter's Union, No. 991, of Winchester held a ladies' night in Masonic apartments Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance of members and ladies and it was perhaps the most enjoyable social event held since the organization of the union some eight years ago. There were many members of the craft present from surrounding places.

Mr. Fred T. Dotten presided and in well chosen words introduced the speakers. The first to be called upon was Mr John J. Cogill, business agent for the union in this vicinity. He said that the average pay of carpenter's here was $16 a week which was about half what the men ought to receive in order to meet the high prices and bring up their children in a proper manner. There had been no increase in wages here for two years, and now the union had demanded a rise to take effect the first of May. He believed the contractors would grant it without any trouble. This increase would not come directly from the bosses, but from the general public, so that the contractors would see that the union was doing them a good turn too. Sufficient notices had been given so that all contract work could be made on the increased rate per day.

Mr. C. M. Kimball, general organizer, was the next speaker; and he gave a general review of the growth of the carpenters union since its formation in Philadelphia in 1881, and which was at the present time the largest and most powerful union in the world. He believed that wages should be sufficient to properly support and educate the families of workmen. He also drew a vivid picture of conditions of child labor in mill cities in Massachusetts, a condition, which he claimed, was a disgrace to the State. The average yearly wages of carpenters was $526.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of Boston gave a most inspiring and elevating address that held the close attention of all.

During the evening there was singing and instrumental music, and at the conclusion of the meeting, a very appetizing banquet was served by Covel the Caterer, followed by a social hour, the pleasant affair coming to an end at about midnight.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Fred T. Dotten, chairman; Christian Everson, David Mellett, Peter McDonald and Ernest Polley.

ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY NOTES

Apropos of what was said last week about the Winchester Orchestra being an organization of good players, doing good work in a thorough and artistic manner, we regret to inform our readers that the brilliant young concert master, Mr. Carlos Pinfield will be lost to us next season. Mr. Pinfield goes to Berlin under the patronage of Prof. Willy Hess, the concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has recently resigned his position in order to become the head of the famous Hofschule of Berlin. The Hofschule is the most celebrated conservatory of instrumental music in all Germany and not everyone who knocks at its doors may enter. The tuition fees, to be sure, are very moderate but the examinations are so extremely severe that only musicians of pronounced ability can pass them. The fact that Mr. Pinfield is able to enter this famous conservatory, stamps him as a musician above the average, and going in on the recommendation,—the protege as it were, of the great Willy Hess is something of which he may be justly proud. Prof. Hess has taken especial interest in this young violinist because he believes there is a great future before him.

One of the most enjoyable numbers on the programme of the next concert will be Edward German's "Incidental Music to Henry VIII." This was written for Sir Henry Irving's great production of the play in London several years ago and is a remarkable composition. So completely does it carry the 16th Century atmosphere with all its quaintness and simplicity that it seems hard to believe the composer was not contemporary with the author of the Faerie Queene.

The other numbers on the programme are all brilliant and effectve and cannot help but please every one present.

Mrs. Anthony Kelley is on a short visit to her mother in N. H.

Mrs. Eugene Wilde of Stratford road entertained the Guild Tuesday afternoon. The speaker was Mr. Gardner of Cambridge. It was a very enjoyable afternoon.

HIGH SCHOOL TO COMMENCE AT 8 OR 8.30.

For several weeks the High school authorities have been considering the advisability of starting the morning session at 8 o'clock during the months of September, April, May, and June. Last week Supt. Herron spoke to the school about the matter and this idea was so well received by the pupils that a vote was taken and 90 per cent voted in favor of the 8 o'clock session. There were some who objected because they had work in the morning that they could not complete before 8.30; but others had really no good reason. It would be well for these latter people to observe the fact that the High schools in Everett and Medford begin their sessions at 8 o'clock, and Reading, Winthrop and others at 8.15, throughout the whole year. Next week Principal Wixom and Supt. Herron are to investigate the towns where the young people rise early, and it is to be hoped that a few Winchester people who want to get an extra half hour's sleep will not hold up such an admirable plan.

Marshall Wellington was approved as base ball manager and Warren Goddu elected hockey captain for next year.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 the base ball team will open its schedule with Everett and everybody should be on hand to give the team a rousing start for what looks to be a very successful season. Brickley, the most popular schoolboy athlete, will probably play first base for the visitors, and is expected to show the crowd how base ball should be played. The game will be a hard one but this year's team is out to win and your presence will greatly help.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Will you kindly allow me to call attention to the announcement in another column of a regular meeting of the Winchester Equal Suffrage League? The phenomenal arousing of women to the necessity for equal opportunities for development and protection with men, under law, has extended all over the world, even to China and Persia! Women are now represented in almost every calling and trade and find themselves handicapped by unjust discriminations. Many have, for a long time been working, in various ways, for the world's betterment, and many more are realizing that they have work to do outside the home in order to secure better conditions inside the home. They often have more leisure than men to investigate conditions of living—to help in educational matters, to secure cleanliness in streets, purity in milk and other food products, safety in the water supply, proper treatment of waste materials the protection of youth, and in improving other conditions of living.

As soon as they begin to work in these directions, they find the power comes through legislative bodies and that they have no voice in deciding who shall make laws affecting these conditions! Interest in the subject is distinctly increasing and the League has several new members. Doubtless, others are beginning to question the present aspect of things, and to realize that they have not light enough on the varying phases of the subject to make an intelligent decision concerning them. To such, a cordial invitation is extended in the announcement, to come and confer together to "talk it out." The meeting is entirely informal and open to questions and offers opportunity for free discussion. It is earnestly hoped that all who are interested and uncertain will come. "In the multitude of counselors there is wisdom."

ELECTING TRUSTWORTHY MEN.

Before the New England Hardware Dealers' association Speaker Joseph Walker, in alluding to the growing popular distrust of legislative bodies, declared that it is undermining the confidence of the people in representative government and leading them to favor direct legislation.

"There is but one way to check this growing distrust in our representatives," he continued, "and that is to so perform our duties of citizens as to elect men whom the people can trust, men who will really represent their interests and their interests alone.

"We need above all things in our legislative halls men who represent the best intellect and the highest character of their communities.

"We are governed after all by men and no form of government, however good, will make up for the lack of good men in office. We wish men who can be trusted, men who will serve no special interest, no special class, no private end, men who have the moral and political courage to do the right rather than the popular thing, men who place the public good high above party advantage or personal ambition."

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The Spectator is glad to know that Chief of Police McIntosh is on the lookout for violator's of the cigarette law. The conviction he secured in police court last week ought to serve as a warning to any others [illegible] who may be engaged in the [illegible] business of selling cigarettes to boys. It is despicable business and those guilty of the crime cannot be too severely dealt with. May Chief McIntosh continue the good work.

The Spectator has no sympathy with the scheme of the flat and hopes such type of dwelling will never get much of a toothold in Winchester. The Winchesterite who has a cottage with a bit of lawn, and a bit of a garden, and flowers about the porch, shaded, it may be with graceful vines, with the children littering the lawn with playthings and the dog and cat sharing in the general enjoyment, has a home beside which even the most expensive flat counts as nothing.

Salt, a Winchester grocer informs The Spectator, is cheaper by a dollar a ton, and salt, we know, is a constituent of nearly every thing we eat. Should the retailer pass this reduction on to the consumer, which The Spectator doubts, the cost of living will be by so much reduced.

The average Winchesterite consumes, perhaps an ounce of salt in a day. He will save a dollar by the present reduction in exactly one hundred and sixty-six years and eight months, providing, of course, the lower price does not tempt him to over indulgence. That is nearly twenty-five cents from the grocer's bill every forty years. It is not much of a reduction, The Spectator admits, but the fact that it is a reduction at all ought to cheer us up a trifle.

A citizen living near the Arlington line spent the other evening in Boston and tells The Spectator a creepy story about a ghost he encountered while walking to his home at a late hour. He says the spectre, which glides out from a woods skirting—street, was headless and robed all in white and so scared him that his hair almost turned gray. The "wet goods" the townsman in question got up against certainly were most bewildering in effect.

There are various reasons why some Winchesterites do not go to church, but thus far a Somerville pastor is the first to point out one of the foremost causes for absence of many people from the pews. He says the fault lies with the "sponging sinners", who visit their friends on Sundays and keep them busy all day feeding and entertaining them. The sinner who sponges does not confine his efforts to the Sabbath day, however. He is somewhat of a nuisance all the week.

It has been called to the Spectator's attention by a prominent Main street gentleman that some colored people are far better behaved on the trolley cars passing through Winchester than some white people who wear fine clothes and shine in Winchester's register.

A discarded automobile tire makes a good life preserver. This will be joyful news to those Winchesterites who go to the seashore every season. Keep your automobile tires for the plunge in the surf. Several Winchesterites have been sitting up nights wondering what to do with the cast off rubber rims.

Mere man is inextricably in the grip of the equal rights movement. A Winchester legal gentleman gives The Spectator to understand that a woman has a right to scold her husband.

The citizen ought always to bear in mind that the general character of the people will be moulded by the condition of the town in which they live. Nothing is too good for the people of Winchester.

The Spectator believes that if the young men of Winchester and elsewhere would take the trouble to keep an account of their expenditures, they would find the task of saving much easier than it often appears to be. If the money is being wasted to satisfy the craving of a girl friend for amusement, it would be good policy to become a bachelor or get another girl. All girls here in Winchester do not insist that a young man should keep himself bankrupt in order that they may have a good time.

Simon Burns, labor leader, died recently and not until an autopsy had been performed did the physician know what was the matter with him. Then it was discovered that there was a blood clot on his brain and the doctor blamed the bursting of the blood vessel which caused the clot, on worry. Here is the practical application of the old saying that worry kills. It is vain to tell a Winchesterite not to worry when he has good and sufficient cause to do so. But there are times when a person only thinks he has sufficient cause. This may not have fitted Simon Burns' case but it fits the case of the majority of Winchesterites who worry. A good many people worry unnecessarily. But The Spectator would hurt their feelings if he told them so. They will learn later. We all learn later. To prove it just turn your mind back five or ten years and think of the things you were then worrying about.

CHARLES S. TENNEY
Who has been re-elected President of the Calumet Club.

CALUMET CLUB ELECT OFFICERS.

The regular meeting and election of officers of the Calumet Club was held Saturday evening. Mr. Charles S. Tenney, who has served the club so successfully as president during the past year, was re-elected to the office by a large vote.

The officers elected were as follows:
President, Charles S. Tenney
Vice-President, Rufus L. Clark
Secretary, Edgar M. Young
Treasurer, George H. Eustis

Directors
Danforth W. Comins
Algernon L. Jewett
Benjamin F. Blank.

Mr. Danforth W. Comins asked to have the club open one day each week for the benefit of the ladies of the club and the families of the members, which met with the unanimous approval of the meeting and it was so voted.

The new officers will be installed on Saturday, May 7.

LIQUOR RAIDS.

The police had a busy day of it last Sunday. At 2 in the morning Chief McIntosh and the officers called at the house of John P. Mawn on Railroad avenue and arrested Mr. Mawn, Patrick Dolan, John Parsons and William Kenney, who were in court Monday morning charged with playing cards on the Lord's day. Their cases were continued till Saturday.

Later in the morning raids were made at six places and at four of these quantities of liquor were secured. At the house of Maraca Gaspar, Quigley court, the officers secured 13 gallons of beer and a number of empty bottles. At the house of Joseph Agretto on Swanton street 30 bottles of beer and 60 empty bottles were taken. A call at the house of Nicholas Ganachi, 89 Swanton street, netted 48 bottles of beer and 3 empty bottles. At the house of Michael Anertua, 88 Swanton street, 31 bottles of beer, 55 empty bottles and 3 empty kegs were found. The premises of Antonio Peritano, 66 Florence street, and of Mary Jenkins, 696 Main street, were also searched, but no intoxicants found.

Also raided house of Elizabeth McEachern r Salem street: 1-2 pint whiskey.

FAREWELL TO MOTH PESTS.

An invading army of 1,000,000 foreign parasites is encamped at Middlesex Fells ready to make a concerted attack on the gypsy moth when it emerges.

The new parasites were not here one year ago. One hundred colonies of the little Japanese parasite known as the Schedius have just been planted from the insectory by W. F. Fiske. In each colony there are about 10,000 parasites, making a total for the first spring planting of 1,000,000.

In the course of three months about 1,000,000 more will be liberated.

The Schedius is a prolific parasite. Last spring there were only 19 in the government's insectary. As soon as they began to thrive they completed a generation in three or four weeks, and had increased to about 2,000,000 when Mr. Fiske took out half the flock and let them loose among the trees.

One of the men employed by the state to cut down browntail nests reports that the browntail moths have begun to emerge already. These moths hatch in the fall and crawl into their nests while very small. Now they are beginning to crawl out of the nests and will be ready to eat as soon as any buds appear.

MASQUERADE PARTY.

The closing party of Miss Alice Sanborn's dancing classes occurred last Friday afternoon in Lyceum Hall when a class of 48 children took part in a picturesque Masquerade costume dance. Miss Sanborn has had a most successful season having conducted four large day classes, a set of evening dances for young married couples and a number of private pupils. The children were in excellent condition as regards grace of movement, and deportment and were, as in the case of her other classes, certainly a credit to the pains taken by their teacher. Although these were not her youngest pupils, some of them were quite young and did their work as well as those more experienced. Miss Sanborn was most generously remembered by quantities of beautiful flowers. The following children were in the march and after the second dance the masks were removed: John Higgins, Chinaman; Richard Higgins, Christmas Elf; Eben Page, Colonial gentleman; Langley Keyes, Jester, Allan Wood, Soldier; Robert Hight, Dutch boy; John and Wellington Caldwell, Midshipmen; Paul Bean, Sailor boy; Carl Bean, Highland Laddie, Willard Holt, Jester; Julian Tenney, Clown; Roger Wild, Frog, Curtis Olmstead, Jester in black and white, Milton Cummings, a Gypsy girl; Donald Starr, Indian boy; Max Passano, Clown; Ralph Hoagland, Spanish Matador; Richard Fenno, Pilgrim; Henry Hart, Mexican; Ralph Howe, Clown; Dudley Murphy, Gondolier, Clarence Russell, Mexican; Charles Rogers, Clown; Ina Brown, Gipsy maiden Ruth Burt, Springtime; Phoebe Dresser, Gipsy maiden; Bertha Kelty, Butterfly; Marian Kendall, Folly; Catherine Starr, Dolly Varden; Ruth Caldwell, Red Riding Hood; Myrtie Dunn, Indian girl; Marjorie Dunn, Baker's Chocolate girl; Elizabeth Levick, Red Riding Hood; Julia Sherman, Hungarian Girl; Winsom Abbott, Dutch Girl who carried a goose; Joan Abbott, Geisher Girl; Mildred Shaw, Colonial costume; Helen Holt, Butterfly; Clara Somes, Spanish Girl; Elizabeth Passano, Poicilla; Evelyn Prime, Fairy Bluebell; Rhoda Case, Highland Lassie; Phyllis Fitch, Rose; Virginia Mossman, Bopeep; Selena Coburn, Winter; Lucy Hanson, April Fool; Phoebe Wilde, Italian girl. FINE NEW DAIRY.

That Winchester people in general, and those who love the best of all that pertains to good living especially, will be interested in the new dairy recently completed in the northwestern part of the town goes without saying. The energetic young proprietor, Mr. Michael Flynn, has been serving people in this section with good milk for the past six years. Now he has just built a fine new cow stable and dairy, equipped with the newest and best appliances approved by the Board of Health for selling milk. His herd of fourteen fine cows is to be increased by eight more, and his rapidly increasing business promises an even larger number in the near future.

This dairy, which is known as the Wildwood Farm, occupies a new building built with the approval of the Milk Inspector. All the floors are of concrete, the cow stable is some three feet below the floor level of the barn proper, and the milk room is separated. A complete apparatus for washing, steaming and sterilizing the bottles is used, and the cooling is done in town water running through large tubs. The sterilizing and washing is done twice daily, and the entire dairy washed with running water each morning.

By June 1st all dairies in Winchester which are not equipped with sterilizing apparatus must discontinue to do business and this is one of the few places which have voluntarily prepared for the change.

Wildwood dairy is located at the north end of Middlesex street, and Mr. Flynn will be glad to leave the best of milk with anyone who will drop him a postal.

HANLON'S NEW SUPERBA.

A whirlwind of merriment, explosive laughter, breath-beating, lightning-like transitions, a galaxy of beautiful girls, a dazzling array of costumes and scenery—this is what the promoters of Hanlons "New Superba" offer this year, the attraction opening at the Globe theatre next Monday evening for an engagement of two weeks.

Among other specialties to be seen here will be Hilda Carle and her "Military Suffragettes." Bess Rosa in dainty songs and dances, and others. "A Useful Man" will also develop a number of surprises, Pico, the clown, discovering on its person not only all the appurtenances of a barber shop, telephone booth and hotel office, but also a gatling gun, which comes in handy in the jungle, when Pico is surrounded by every variety of African wild animals, including gorillas, lions, elephants and boa constrictors.

FRED HANLON
As Pico the Clown. Globe Theatre.

A Maypole dance offers some novel color effects, and there are flower songs, African love songs and a hundred new and ingenious tricks and illusions, together with the most magnificent transformation scene that has ever been offered.

THE STARS OF APRIL.

The amateur astronomer cannot fail to notice the planet Jupiter in the east, or early in the morning the planet Venus. Looking to the left of Jupiter, one will notice Arcturus a brilliant red star in the constellation Bootes, and still farther to the left almost under the big dipper the blue Vega is rising.

Almost overhead is Leo the sickle and low down in the east is the wonder of the sky Orion.

Halley's comet will be visible this month in the morning before sunrise. It will continue to brighten until May 18, when it will dodge in front of the sun and be visible in the evening after sunset. The earth will also plunge through the comet's tail on that day, it's place will be in the constellation Leo a little below the handle of the sickle.

The Innes comet is still visible in the square of Pegasus which is visible in the morning sky with tail two degrees in length. It is now of 10th magnitude. A small telescope will reveal it.

OUR FUTURE CITIZENS.

The story comes to us, that on election day, a vote of the pupils for town officers was planned in one of the upper grades of the Wilson school building. But one of the boys objected to the girls voting for any officers except members of the School Board. One of the girls demurred at this, and declared if she could not vote for all the officers she would not vote at all. The boy said that was all the women could vote for now. "But," returned the girl, "when these boys get old enough to vote at town elections the girls will be voting at the same time, for all the officers." "Yes," added another girl, "and when that time comes we will not let the men vote for any officers but members of the School Board."

This incident seems to show that patriotism will be more prominent in the future with our voters than it is at the present time, when voters have to be urged to take an interest in town affairs. —Natick Bulletin.

ELECTRIC LIGHT NOTES.

Franklin Barnes, who has opened a new dry goods store at 537 Main street, has adopted the Edison Company's lighting service and will use (12) 80 candle-power Mazda lamps.

Herbert C. Bridges is now occupying the residence at 16 Lincoln street, where he is using the Edison Company's electric lighting service.

H. H. Dyson has opened a new store for the sale of dry goods at 529 Main street. He is lighting it with Mazda lamps on the Edison Company's service.

William F. Berry has a new residence at 17 Wildwood street which is electrically lighted on the Edison service.

Archer D. Friend has a new residence on Sheffield West, where the Edison Electric Illuminating Company's service is used for lighting.

MUNICIPAL AUTO SMASHED.

Attempting to avoid crashing into a wagon on Nahant street Wakefield last week in responding to an alarm, Driver Kent of the Volunteer Motor Hose wagon sent his machine skidding to the side of the road and one of the forward wheels collapsed. The machine then shot across the street and grazed a post, damaging the other wheel. With one wheel completely demolished, another out of commission and the water cooler smashed the machine came to a standstill. Of course the expense was the same old story.

INSTRUCTING TOWN OFFICERS

The Stockwell Matter.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The moderator of the late town meeting, also a legal gentleman of high authority, in a late issue of the STAR, express some doubts as to the binding effect of instructing the water commissioners to connect the house of Mr. Stockwell of Stoneham (his name should be Stortwell) with the Winchester water supply. I looked up this matter two years ago when the town instructed the water commissioners to allow fishing in the reservoirs under rules authorized by the Winchester board of health. The moderator then agreed with me that the town could instruct the water commissioners under Winchester's special water act, approved by Governor Washburn April 28th, 1873. This act ordains that the water commissioners shall enforce all such rules and regulations as are not specially provided for in this act as the said town may from time to time ordain and establish, not inconsistent with this act and the laws of this Commonwealth." According to Webster, "ordain" means to order, decree, enact etc. and if the town ordains a new rule or regulation instructing the water commissioners to extend the water supply pipes to all parts of the town or to any one part not at present supplied with water, it has a perfect right to do so and its instructions should be binding on the commissioners, if not "inconsistant" with the act itself or the laws of the commonwealth which in this case is not in the least bit evident.

In most cases, the right to instruct town officers is much more clear than the right of said officers to ignore and actually disobey town meeting instructions and expressions of opinion not interesting or personally repugnant to them. A year ago the selectmen were instructed to inform the citizens "now assembled in town meeting" regarding the income from the Linden street property. The Board paid no attention whatever to the vote of the town at subsequent sessions of the town meeting and a committee appointed by the moderator at the close of the meeting had to investigate the disagreeable matter and report to the town a year later because the selectmen paid no attention to the instructions of the town. A year ago the water board were instructed by the town to report regarding three small additional water supplies it was proposed to turn into the Winchester reservoirs. Not a word was reported to the town this year in relation to this matter and the instruction might just as well not been voted so far as the citizens have received any light on the subject. The town meeting instructions regarding restricted fishing in the reservoirs which was voted by the town under an article specially calling attention to the matter was practically ignored by both the water board and the board of health and free fishing and free contamination was freely allowed rather than carry out the instructions of the town, allowing restricted fishing carefully regulated under board of health rules.

I heartily join with Mr. Russell in his views of town meeting procedure in urging voters to be polite and considerate in informing its officers and servants what the town wants them to do but should not all town officers be also considerate and gentlemanly in its treatment of the town? I am now a "has been," but when on deck as a town officer, I never knew one instance when a good business proposition was explained to the town and the voters taken into confidence, reasoned with and fairly, openly, treated that the proposition, whatever it was, was not also fairly treated and properly decided. If town officers take the voters into their confidence, and tell them "the whole story" the voters will return that confidence and stand by their officers, not voting against them every chance they can so as to get "even" at some real or fancied slight in the officers methods of doing things.

In the Stockwell case, the town had no information as to the cost of favoring Mr. Stockwell (except from Mr. Stockwell himself) and no information as to Winchester citizens who also need town water as well as our Stoneham neighbor. The town meeting should have been treated as if it knew something and was capable of advising its water board in the matter, not simply expected to stand by its town officers simply because they were our town officers. No one thinks disrespect was intended to citizens by the water board in not giving fuller information as to cost etc., in the Stockwell matter, but if a little more advice had been asked for, a little more deference paid to the opinions of voters, it would have been smoother sailing all around and the result might have been different. We receive just what we give, if not to-day, why then to-morrow, therefore we should be careful what we give or say or do in town meeting that it may be void of offence as much as possible, and return to plague us another day.

As the Stockwell motion made no provision for a special appropriation to do the contemplated work and as all the money appropriated for water construction had already been appropriated for special purposes before the Stockwell matter was debated and passed, it does not seem binding on the water board to do the work this year. Another year we may have more definite information as to the cost of supplying Mr. Stockwell's needs as well as the needs of all Winchester citizens for town water. They should all be considered together and all treated alike, preference, if any, being first shown to our own citizens. But remember this, it is perfectly proper and very often advisable to instruct town officers by taking the sense of the meeting, by request or by downright plain instructions, and it is the duty of the town officers to pay respect to such requests or instructions.

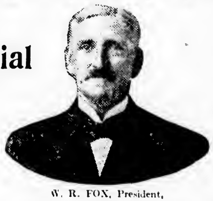
Let Me Send A
Typewriter for Free Trial
Not at Your Expense—But Mine



W. R. FOX, President,
Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of—compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

You have no risk, assume no obligation, and I thank you before hand for the privilege. Just write me, personally.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Wells Cathedral. This Cathedral, though not one of the largest, is considered one of the finest churches in England, and some authorities do not hesitate to give it the first place of all, its complete collection of old ecclesiastical buildings making it the most perfect example of a cathedral, with all its parts and appurtenances. It is situated in the small city of Wells, which has been the see of a bishop since the 10th century. The church is the chief ornament of the place, and indeed may be said to be the place itself.

The three meanest men have been found, they were caught robbing the poor boxes of a number of Boston Churches.

If rumor is true as to the many people who are to buy automobiles a few factories will be kept busy supplying the towns needs alone.

And so it is said for sure that Draper and Frothingham, present incumbents, are to head the Republican State ticket again this fall.

The question is now being asked: "Will Vahey makes way for Foss as the Democratic gubernatorial candidate this fall?" This question is not only disturbing Republicans but some Democrats, also.

The adjustment of wages to increasing prices will not stop at the necessaries of life, fares on steam roads, etc., but will extend to innumerable other things, and as a result wages as relating to the cost of living will be comparatively about where they were ten years ago.

It is being reported that the duties and responsibilities of his office have worn on President Taft to an extent that he would welcome the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for the next term. This was predicted after the strenuous service of his predecessor, also that dissatisfaction was sure to arise.

Of sixty five candidates who took the dental examinations only sixteen passed. How times have changed, and all for the good, too.

Judging from recent disclosures in three states, the bribe takers in legislatures should get together and fix a schedule. The variances in prices for official crookedness is very marked.

Wakefield citizens have started a movement to exclude non-resident junk dealers from doing business in that town. This restriction should extend to other towns. Winchester has a sufficient number of junk dealers who are citizens of the town who pay taxes, and therefore should be protected. The local men are under regulations, too.

Judge William Cushing Wait of the Superior court says that: "Most of the boys that come into the court—and there are a great many of them—are the sons of respectable parents. Only they've been loosely brought up. That is, they get 'out with the gang,' and their parents—like many American parents—don't bring them round sharply. The boys get to drinking, and then into the courts. In a great many cases it is the respectable, but weak, parents who are really responsible for the downfall of their children."

The Reading Chronicle makes a very good suggestion when it says editorially: "Now that the new town administration is installed, it would be a good thing if the year should be distinguished by the citizens getting in closer touch with the town officers, thereby understanding them and being understood better. Carry your criticism, comment, or suggestions to them. Don't even withhold approval. A general and pronounced interest is a factor in working for better government."

Regarding the vote taken at the last session of the town meeting whereby the Water and Sewer Board were instructed to extend the water main to Mr. Stockwell's house on Forest street, at the Stoneham line, it is reported on good authority that the Board agreed some time ago to extend it to that house by carrying the pipe off the street so as to avoid expensive ledge blasting. It is said that Mr. Stockwell refused to have the water brought to his house otherwise than by the street so that he might also have a hydrant in front of his house. Had the citizens known of this at the time of the meeting there is no doubt but the Water Board would have been sustained in its refusal to lay this pipe, the expense of which is roughly estimated at $800.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Easter box sent by the Winchester Union to the Flower Mission was very good, containing a variety of jellies and other delicacies as well as some money to be used in the purchase of articles needed to make a balanced ration. The distribution this year was very satisfactory as every year increases which enables the workers to know just how best to accomplish the end in view, reaching those in need and avoiding the duplication that is always a drawback to complete success.

It is a fault of all organizations as well as of individuals to think its own work or interests all important and the W. C. T. U. is not alone in sometimes failing to recognize the fact that others are working for the same end. The Union Signal, the national organ of the Women's Christian Temperance Union is however making an effort to correct this bit of astigmatism by giving accounts of what is being done by other temperance organizations. The work of the Anti-Saloon League was given prominence not long ago and a recent number tells what is being done in New York by the Church Temperance Society. This is similar to that done by the Massachusetts Branch of the C. T. S. The coffee rooms, placed at strategic points, over attractive hospitality to those, and there are many, who go to the saloons for the social life it offers. The saloons are but too truthfully called the poor man's club room and the success of the coffee rooms proves that many a man becomes a drunkard because he needs a pleasant place to go during his hours of leisure. The coffee van is another feature of the work and is much appreciated by the coachmen who are on duty while their employers are in attendance at some function. The hostess usually engages the van to come to the vicinity of the house and pays for coffee and buns to be served to the men who otherwise might be driven to go into a saloon for comfort and cheer. It must be remembered that few other places are open to the general public in the evening, at least such places as a coachman would be at liberty to visit. For this and all other helpful means to counteract the drink habit the members of the W. C. T. U. are profoundly grateful.

TRAVEL LECTURES.

An appreciative audience listened to Miss Dannum's lecture on "Venice" last Friday evening. The lecture was profusely illustrated with pictures, and the city by the sea was treated as having a unitary character.

This evening at eight o'clock Rev. William I. Lawrance is to give the second lecture of the series, in Metcalf Hall. The subject is "Spain," and will be illustrated by both slides and printed pictures. A brief history of the country will be given, after which pictures of Gibraltar, Tangiers, Cadiz, Seville, Cordova, Madrid, the Escorial, Segovia and Granada will be shown.

One week from to-night Mrs. Caroline B. Lawrance will speak on her trip through Austria.

Tickets for the four remaining lectures may be procured at the drug stores at seventy-five cents. Admission to the separate lectures twenty-five cents may be paid at the door.

MOCK TRIAL AND DANCE.

The great breach of promise case presented by Winchester Council, No. 210 K of C., in the Town Hall last evening was one of the most successful entertainments given in town this spring. The large hall was well filled with friends of those who took part, and the mock trial and the one act comedy which followed it, "Not in the Regular Army," went off without a hitch. Charles J. Harrold had the direction of the two productions, and he left no stone unturned which would tend toward deterioating from the best possible efforts of those who participated.

Judge Wisehead A profound legal light Dr. Richard W. Sheehy
Lawyer Pro-for-it Howard S. Cosgrove
Lawyer Con Agiunt Nicholas J. Murray
The two best lawyers in the County,
Widower Plentiful Smith, Defendant, John F. McNulty
Widow Rebecca Smythe, Plaintiff, Harry R. Glendon
Mark M. Down, Clerk, Jas. V. Haley
Will Taphim, Court Officer, Edw. F. Shea
Book Agent, Stephen P. Callahan
Hiram Hoecake, Daniel J. Daly
Editor of "The Weekly Creeper," Dr. Jas. H. O'Connor

Jury

A. Mutt, Deaf Man, Jas. W Haggerty
Little Jeff, Cripple, Michael S. Nelson
Ketchem Twitchem, Nervous Man, Alfred O. Latorte
Reverend Thusly, Colored Preacher, Arthur E. A. King
Hans Dunklespiel, Dutchman, Eugene P. Sullivan
Farmer Tatepatch, Edmund A. Goggin
Muldon, Irishman, Chas. J. Harrold
Jonathan Hesitate, Stutterer, John S. O'Leary
Obadiah Grunt, Hair Lip Man, Leon E. Day
Happy Hooligan, Tramp, John J. Sullivan
Ajax Mosely, Chicken Thief, Jas. P. Donaghey
Miss Ima Lone, Strong-minded Woman, J. Frank Davis

Those who took part in "Not in the Regular Army" were:

Johnny Slick, Howard S. Cosgrove
Isaac Gratinski, Dr. Jas. H. O'Connor
Mike Mullally, John S. O'Leary
Algernon Reginald Waldorf de Montmorency, Harry R. Glendon
Hans Schmidth, Eugene P. Sullivan
Joshua Green, Daniel J. Daly
Calamity Bill, Nicholas J. Murray
Scrappy Pete, John F. McNulty
Jack Johnson, Jas. P. Donaghey
Weary Walker, John J. Sullivan
Officer No. 23, Edw. F. Shea.

The work of the entire cast was exceptionally good, and to pick any one character as worthy of especial commendation would be difficult. The trial created gales of laughter from the audience, which at times was almost overcome by the ludicrous situations in which both the defendant and plaintiff found themselves.

The comedy which followed was equally good, the scene being laid in a recruiting office.

The ushers were as follows: Frank E. Rogers, M. E. O'Leary, P. E. Fitzgerald, Dennis E. Foley, Wm. E. Murphy, Fred C. Noonan, Thos. M. Kelley, Edward F. Maguire, P. Joseph O'Melia, Walter Prew, Martin J. Caulfield, John F. O'Connor, M. J. Dennen, Henry J. Lyons, Luke P. Glendon, Patrick J. Glendon, Harry E. Coty.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

THE JUNIOR RECEPTION.

Last Saturday the Junior class of the Winchester High school gave their annual reception to the Seniors in the Town Hall. The hall was very prettily decorated and the green and white streamers which have transformed the hall ever since the Pop Concert, were still in place. On either side of the clock were large banners representing the class pins of the two classes 1910-11, while directly opposite on the North Gallery were displayed the class colors of 1911.

The grand march was led by the presidents of the two classes, Miss Ruth Carpenter and Walter Badger, and after this twenty dances occupied the time pleasantly until a late hour.

The matrons for this occasion were: Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Parkhurst and Mrs. Spaulding, and the committee in charge was Miss Ruth Carpenter Miss Helen Meincke, Miss Gladys Spaulding, Charles Marshall, Richard Parkhurst and Lowell Smith.

The music was delightfully rendered by Mrs. Kingston's orchestra of five pieces and Mr. Young served the refreshments.

Mrs. F. S. Stevens of Pine street, gave a whist on Wednesday afternoon of 10 tables.

Why not have the spring cleaning done without the removal of the goods from the room. The Vacuum system removes all dirt and dust and germs quickly, without removal, is modern and quick, short and up-to-date. What company does this and what is their other business.?

DISGRACEFUL DECISIONS OF OUR COURTS.

In an article entitled "Some Follies in our Criminal Procedure," in McClure's Magazine for April, Chas. B. Brewer gives some of the examples which led President Taft to declare "that the administration of the criminal law is a disgrace to civilization." Here are a number of cases where convictions were upset by Supreme Courts, and why:

Because the stolen shoes were not a "pair," as charged in the indictment. The thief, in his haste, had picked up two "rights." (3d Harring, Del., p. 559.)

Because one member of a firm of three names from whom goods had been stolen was dead, and the indictment had named all three. ([illegible] p. 909.)

Because the indictment had charged the burglar with intent to commit a "theft" instead of intent to commit a "felony." (108 S. W. Reporter, p. 7[illegible].)

Because the indictmet charged that the thief had entered the house of one Wyatt with intent to steal from him, and the defense was able to prove that Lamb also occupied the house, and it was Lamb's property the thief was looking for. (101 S. W. Reporter, p. 806.)

Because the accused had been indicted for attempting to murder Kanegay in stead of Kornegay, his real name (103 S. W. Reporter, p. 890.)

Because the murdered man's name was Patrick Fitzpatrick and not Patrick Fitz Patrick, as charged. (3d Cal. Reporter, p. 67.)

Because the indictment named a specific though a correct date, instead of saying "on or about" a certain date. (Pa. Lower Court, Montgomery Co., 1908.)

Because the lower court had failed to advise the jury that the thief had stolen the goods "feloniously" or with "criminal intent." (89 Mon Reporter, p. 829.)

Because the indictment had not stated that a "blackjack" (designed especially for cracking skulls) was a "dangerous or deadly" weapon. (60 S. E. Reporter, 782.)

EDITORIAL PHILOSOPHY.

Philosophy is a good thing to mix in with almost any business or profession, especially that of journalism. The Anoka County (Minn.) Union has discovered a philosopher-poet in a sanctum at Lake Crystal, Minn. It says:

Down at Lake Crystal, in this state, lives an editor by the name of George C. Neff, who publishes one of the cleanest and neatest newspapers which come to the editorial desk. Like the rest of us, he is growing old, and as years fly past he can overlook the shortcomings of his fellow men, and he would rather write of their virtues than their faults. He's a noble old soul, and in a recent issue he gave space to the following quotation as an indication of his feelings:

A little more tired at close of day,
A little less anxious to have our way,
A little less ready to scold and blame,
A little more care for a brother's name,
And so we are nearing the journey's end,
Where time and eternity meet and blend.
The book is closed, and the prayers are said,
And we are a part of the countless dead.
Thrice happy, then, if some soul can say,
"I live because he has passed my way."

NOT YET.

Though the opinion of some street experts is that street watering will soon be a thing of the past, all people in Somerville are not yet ready to agree with them.

In fact a good many are wondering what will be done with the streets this year. The tarvia experiment as a whole can hardly be considered successful enough to repeat, though there were streets upon which it was not an absolute failure.

The streets which have been watered this year and which were treated with tarva last summer apparently did not hold the water as well as they used to, as they dry out much quicker than in previous years.

All of which seems to demonstrate that water is still the best dust layer, and has not yet been put in the shade by patent products which either smell, track into houses and cars, soil the clothes or further pollute the dust which rises from the streets, as their effect wears off.—Somerville Reporter.

There certainly seems to be a growing suspicion that Peary never reached the North Pole. During his recent lecture tour in the south, Governor Brown of Georgia and the mayor of Atlanta both refused to introduce him to his audience, the Governor plainly stating that he did not believe Peary discovered the North Pole. Not until the Commander submits his proofs to the same board that examined those of Dr. Cook, and they report favorable upon them, will all doubt be removed of his reaching the pole.

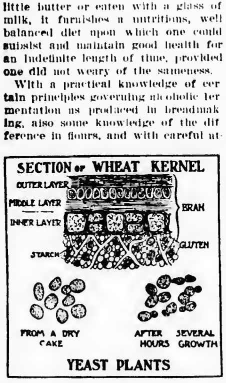
XI.—The Process of Breadmaking.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

NEXT to milk there is no food more generally used by civilized nations than bread. To the average housekeeper there is probably no part of the regular cooking more important or worthy of her best attention than breadmaking. To be able to make a well risen, good flavored, well baked loaf of wheat bread is the goal of the young aspirant for culinary fame. One has only to attend county fairs, farmers' institutes and meetings of other organizations where pantry stores and baked goods are entered in contest to see quickly that it is in the bread that the greatest interest centers. And all this is as it should be, for bread is one of our best staple foods. With the addition of a little butter or eaten with a glass of milk, it furnishes a nutritious, well balanced diet upon which one could subsist and maintain good health for an indefinite length of time, provided one did not weary of the sameness.

With a practical knowledge of certain principles governing alcoholic fermentation as produced in breadmaking, also some knowledge of the difference in flours, and with careful attention to these points, breadmaking is really a very simple process. Without this knowledge or attention there will ever be mystery and uncertainty about it, and there will always be indifferent results.



YEAST PLANTS

There are only four ingredients absolutely necessary for the making of a loaf of raised wheat bread. They are good bread flour, fresh yeast, liquid—either milk or water—and salt. Other ingredients are often used, but they are not necessary. For instance, shortening is sometimes added. This makes a richer loaf. Sugar, too, may be used in small quantity. This hastens the growth of the yeast plants. Potato water occasionally replaces the milk or water and makes a moist loaf, while potatoes and hop water form a mixture in which the yeast colonies are quickly started. But good bread can be made without the addition of any of these things.

Flour Used In Breadmaking.

In order that we may have a well raised light loaf it is necessary to use a flour containing a large per cent of gluten. This is the flour made from the so called "hard" wheats. Such flour has less water than the flour made from the "soft" wheat, therefore, mixed with a liquid, gives a larger loaf. Gluten is a grayish, rubber like substance found in flour after the starch has been washed out. It is the "gum" obtained from chewing a handful of wheat, as known by most people who have spent their childhood in the country. This very character of gluten makes it necessary in breadmaking. It stretches and stretches, forming little pockets in which the gas is retained in the loaf until it is baked. The heat of the oven hardens the gluten quickly before it has had time to relax, and so the loaf keeps its puffed shape.

Good bread flour should be white, with just a suggestion of yellow. After being pressed in the hand it should fall loosely apart. If it keeps the impress of the palm or remains in lumps it has too much moisture. When rubbed between the thumb and finger there should be a slight grittiness; it should not feel too smooth or powdery.

What Is Yeast?

This useful agent in breadmaking is as old as the hills, and its action is better understood when one is familiar with it. Yeast is a microscopic plant, consisting of a single round or oval cell. The rapidity with which it grows and reproduces itself gives it much of its importance. It reproduces either by sending out buds which break off as new plants or by forming spores which will grow into new plants under favorable conditions.

Like all plants, yeast requires heat, moisture and food in order to grow. The degree of heat at which it grows best is from 75 to 90 degrees, and this is the temperature at which bread should be kept throughout the process of making. If it were not for the liquid used in breadmaking the yeast would not have sufficient moisture and would not grow any more than it does in the dry cake.

The food of the yeast plant is sugar, and this is obtained by a chemical change being produced in the starch of the flour, changing part of it into sugar. This results in a fermentation the products of which are alcohol and carbon dioxide gas—the gas which makes the bread light. The average housekeeper is familiar with yeast or leaven in three forms—that which she makes herself by combining potatoes, flour, hop water and a "starter" left from a previous baking; also the dry and compressed yeasts. The last two are practically the same, the dry yeast having been mixed with more flour or cornmeal in order to preserve the plants for a longer time. The chief difference between these three forms of leaven is in the number and kind of yeast plants which they contain. The compressed yeast—the small square cake which comes wrapped in tin foil—contains the largest number of plants and so is able to produce the greatest amount of gas in a given time, making it possible to finish the bread in fewer hours. The commercial yeasts are supposed to be what is known as a "pure culture"—in other words, one variety of plants—therefore is more uniform in strength and composition.

Yeast plants exist in the air, and it is upon these we depend in making "salt rising" bread. The flour and water with a little salt are mixed into a batter, then set aside in a warm place to ferment. It contains sufficient gas to make into dough when full of holes or when like a sponge, and this fermentation has been caused by the action of the wild yeasts in the air.

The Process of Breadmaking.

This article is in no sense an explanation of all the scientific technicalities of breadmaking because the subject is too big and complicated to be thoroughly treated in a column or two. It is simply an attempt to outline some of the principles to be observed and to give a few helpful suggestions to women who may not have a satisfactory method of their own. The following recipe is for bread made with compressed yeast, and when care is taken to maintain an even temperature, about 80 degrees, throughout the process the bread should be ready for the oven in about four hours from the time it is started. The special advantage of the compressed yeast is that it is more rapid, and when it is used bread need not be set overnight.

Compressed Yeast Bread.

Add two tablespoonfuls of shortening (butter or lard), one tablespoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of salt and one cake of compressed yeast dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of cold water to one pint of scalded milk or one-half milk and one-half water. Then stir in flour until dough is stiff enough to beat vigorously. Turn on molding board and knead until dough does not stick to the board, using more flour as necessary, a little at a time. Put in a well greased bowl and brush surface lightly with melted butter to keep from crusting over. Cover with towel and let rise again until double its size (about three hours). At the end of that time mold into rolls or loaves and put into greased pans, brushing the surface with melted butter. Cover as before and set to rise until double its size; then bake.

Bread should be baked as soon as it is sufficiently light, and the oven should be hot enough to brown flour in fifteen minutes, about 300 degrees. At this temperature ordinary sized loaves of bread should be browned all over.

Bread should be turned from pan as soon as taken from oven and placed uncovered in such a position that all sides will be exposed to the air, not allowing it to come in contact with anything which will give it an unpleasant odor or taste. When cold it should be put into a box or jar to which the air can have access and be kept in a dry, cool place. This amount of yeast will raise three times as much flour and other ingredients if longer time is given for it to become light. One point in which many first class breadmakers often fail is in the baking. Bread to be thoroughly digestible should be thoroughly baked. The ordinary sized loaf requires from one hour and a quarter to one hour and a half to bake sufficiently, and, that this may be accomplished without burning, the oven should not be too hot in the beginning. The bread should not begin to brown until after the first ten minutes.

Many changes take place in bread during the baking. The yeast plants are killed by the high temperature, the gas expands, making the loaf still lighter, the fermentation is stopped, the alcohol is driven off and a large amount of the moisture is evaporated. Also the browning of the crust increases the ease with which the loaf is digested, and the action of the yeast on the gluten is also supposed to aid its digestion.

Whole Wheat Bread.

Scald a cupful of milk, take from the fire and add a heaping teaspoonful of salt, a level teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of shortening. Add a cupful of cold water to the scalded milk and when the mixture is lukewarm add one-half yeast cake that has been dissolved in one-half cupful of lukewarm water. Beat in enough whole wheat flour to make a rather thin batter, beat well, cover and set aside until light. Then stir in as much more whole wheat flour as you can beat in with a spoon. It must be stiff. Beat well, turn into greased tins, let rise until light, then bake an hour in a moderate oven.

Diabetic Bread.

Take one quart of sweet milk, one heaping teaspoonful of good butter, one-fifth of a cake of compressed yeast beaten up with a little water and two eggs well beaten. Stir in gluten flour until a soft dough is formed. Knead as in ordinary bread, put in pans to raise and when light bake in hot oven.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Miss Anna Held, who it will be remembered, made such a distinct hit in Boston earlier in the season at the Colonial Theatre, comes to the Boston Theatre for a single week's engagement beginning Monday, April 11th, in F. Ziegfeld Jr's musical production "Miss Innocence." The work is in two acts and eight big scenes, the first of which is a girls' seminary, located on the Isle of Innocence, the second is a railway train running between Marseilles and Paris; the third, an exact reproduction of the famous Abbaye Restaurant in Paris, showing the Moulin Rouge by night in the distance.

This scene, which is one of the important features of the production, is said to eclipse anything that has so far been attempted in the realm of musical comedy stagedom. The large cast is made up of important musical comedy players headed by Lawrence D'Orsay. Miss Held will wear her famous dress with 3000 diamonds. This engagement will mark Miss Held's first and only appearance in Boston at Boston Theatre prices

KEITH'S THEATRE.

It would appear that vaudeville has reached the limit in the production Gertrude Hoffmann will put on at Keith's next week. It is nothing short of a Ziegfeld revue, for although Miss Hoffmann does all the impersonations herself and a half a dozen burlesques, she is supported by a company of 25 people and there is constant change of scene, some of the settings being of the most elaborate character This is particularly true when she burlesques Annette Kellermann, the "Diving Venus." In this the the company appears, no less than 12 girls in Kellermann costumes going into the tank, one after another.

The entire bill will be of equal interest in character. One feature of it new to Boston will be another New York sensation, a magician named Jarrow, who has set the metropolis talking by his wonderful "lemon" trick, paper money being taken from a lemon dripping with juice. Other features will be the Holloways, one of the biggest wire acts; Hames and Vinocq; Madden and Fitzpatrick; Ila Granna; and Hap Hady.

PARK THEATRE.

The engagement of William Hodge in "The Man from Home" at the Park Theatre, Boston, is one of the most remarkable in the history of theatricals in this section. Ever since the opening performance fourteen weeks ago, capacity business has been the rule and people are turned away nightly.

"The Man from Home" is one of those cleverly constructed plays which appeal to all classes, clean, wholesome and invigorating and presented by a cast the equal of which has not been seen on a Boston stage for years. The Park Theatre management announce that they make a specialty in giving mail orders careful attention. An extra matinee will be given on Patriot's Day, Tuesday, April 19th

Messrs. Kelley & Hawes Co's brick fire-proof storage building on Park street affords safe and clean storage for furniture and valuables. This is the best equipped and safest storage building in this section and patrons are assured that their goods will receive the best of care and attention.

IN BUYING GROCERIES

...

the careful housekeeper makes every cent count.

But she can't make the pennies count by trading at every store in town, spending half her time looking for the cent cheaper article.

She can save money only by searching out a reliable grocer and sticking to him.

The money is saved by trading with the groceryman who sells dependable goods.

Dependable goods are not to be obtained in every store.

Goodness and cheapness appeal to every condition of humanity.

There are no fancy prices here, and everybody is treated alike.

Our goods are cheap because they're good -- it's not the price that makes them cheap.

Goods that are bought so cheaply that they have to be thrown away on account of poor quality are the most dearly bought goods.

Better pay a fair price in the first place and get the dependable kinds. You can't buy any other kinds here. We don't keep them.

Highlands Station Passes into Hands of B. & M.

The Winchester Highlands station has been sold to the Boston and Maine Railroad, after having been in the possession of the late Aaron C. Bell since 1876.

Private ownership of a station has not been known in this part of the country, with this single exception.

At about 1876 Mr. Bell and others who lived in the northerly part of the town became dissatisfied with the rude structure provided by the railroad company as a shelter. Several petitions had been presented to Gen. George Stark for a station, but without success. Mr. Bell then opened correspondence with Manager Horsford of the Boston and Lowell regarding the matter. At that time stock in the road had dropped to 13. There was an unwillingness to bring about the improvement. Mr. Bell then proposed to build the station for the company. The offer was accepted, and the building was completed in 1876.

Land on which the station stands was purchased of Eli Cooper, an engineer on the first locomotive that ran over the Boston and Lowell railroad. When the station was opened, there was elaborate ceremony. The selectmen added dignity to the occasion by their presence, and among those who participated in the exercises were the late Patick Holland who helped build the road in 1883, and Eli Cooper, who died at the age of 90. There was a religious service, and, for that matter, Sunday afternoon services were conducted here during a period of many years. Mr. Bell supplied the furniture for the station, and was made agent, holding the position 10 years. The Rev. Mr. Robinson, father of Henry C. Robinson, now superintendent of the southern division of the Boston and Maine, took an active interest in the religious work. The superintendent of the Sunday school held for a number of years in the building was Edwin Robinson.

Winchester Highlands has had a steady growth, and where there was a handful of dwellings a decade ago there are now scores. The increase in population demands increased facilities for passengers who take trains at that point, and a station has been suggested similar to that at Wedgemere.

In years gone by the station agent with his family made their home in the building, but of late years the agent has resided in the vicinity of the station.

The street floor of the station contains a store used for many years for the sale of groceries, etc. Residents of the Highlands have been endeavoring for some time to persuade the railroad company to build a new station, but thus far have been unsuccessful. It is thought a modern station building would do a great deal toward building up this part of the town, and unquestionably it would.

ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY NOTES

The Orchestral Society takes pleasure in announcing Miss Fay Cord, soprano as the soloist of the May concert. This will be one of Miss Cord's first appearances since her recent return from Paris, where she studied some years with Mme. Colonne, wife of the famous conductor who died this spring, and for the past year with Jean de Reszke. For Winchester people a pleasant element of personal interest in Miss Cord's artistic career lies in the fact of her being a relative and protegee of Mr. Edwin Ginn, and many persons will recall her delightful singing and youthful charm on the occasion of a musicale given by Mr. and Mrs. Ginn two or three years ago. About that time she also sang with flattering success in a Worcester Festival concert and in Mrs. Hall McAllister's north shore concerts and in Miss Terry's series at the Hotel Somerset, concerning which last a critic in the Boston Transcript writes as follows: Miss Cord has a light agile high soprano of excellent quality and her high pianissimo is especially notable . . Her selections showed her to be a singer of refinement and spontaneous impulse."

The numbers Miss Cord has chosen for this occasion are:—Michaela's beautiful aria from Bizet's "Carmen" and these songs with piano:—I "I know of Two bright Eyes" from ("Songs from the Turkish Hills") by George H Clutsam. II Sunbeams, Landon Ronald.

The future of these concerts depends entirely upon the support given to them by music lovers of Winchester and it is hoped that the interest expressed on every side will be further manifested by a large attendance at this the final concert of the season.

Remember that 25cts buys a seat.

GOOD WORK.

Year's Work of Visiting Nurse Association.

Reports Show Vast Amount Accomplished in a Quiet Way.

The annual meeting of the Visiting Nurse Association was held in the Town Hall Tuesday afternoon, the attendance being quite large. Reports of the different officers and committees were presented and the interest and enthusiasm manifested in their reading was very marked. Mrs. Joshua Coit, the president, presided. The Association is in a very flourishing condition, its membership list growing larger and its field for usefulness broadening and greatly increasing the work of the officers. After the reports had been presented, Mrs. Coit briefly referred to the work of the Association during the past year, after which she introduced Mr. Herron, Supt. of Schools who spoke of the health work being done in the schools.

Rev L. Frank Chase of Boston then gave an address on "Health and Morals."

At the close of the meeting tea was served.

The following are the officers elected:

President,—Mrs. Joshua Coit

Vice-President — Mrs. William B. French

Secretary—Mrs. Edwin C. Gilman

Treasurer—Mrs. Ellen E. Metcalf

Directors for three years — Finance Committtee,—Mrs. Rufus Herrick, Mrs. Charles M. Harris, Miss Amy White.

Supply Committee—Mrs. Lewis Parkhurst, Mrs. C. E. Ordway, Mrs. Herbert S. Underwood, Mrs. Newton Shultis.

Nursing Committee—Mrs. D. N. Skillings, Mrs. F. A. Cutting, Mrs. S. F. Herron.

Tuberculosis Committee—Miss Richards, Mrs. Henry L. Houghton, Mrs. Preston Pond, Mrs. Ferdinand F. French, Mrs. D. N. Skillings.

Following are the reports in full:

SECRETARY'S REPORT

For eleven years, The Winchester Visiting Nurse Association has been doing the work it planned, when, in 1899, it was organized, "to give to the sick, especially to those of limited means the best home-nursing under existing circumstances, and to develop its work along appropriate lines and to establish and maintain a hospital."

In a small community like Winchester, it is possible for such an organization to cover a wide field of usefulness; as time goes on, new needs are apparent and are ministered to, until the Association has become, in some sort, a bureau of Associated Charities, including in itself the Friendly Visitor, the benevolent individual and the children's aid.

This is due, in large measure, to the friendliness of the nurses, who during the eight years that they have been with the Association have won the confidence of the families in which they visit, so that many a need or difficult situation is made known to them, for which they are able to find a remedy. If a nurses' visit reveals the fact that a patient is ill nourished, or if it is necessary to send the mother of a family to a Sanatorium, the cases are reported to the Nursing Committee, considered at a meeting of the Board of Directors and provision made for their relief. The feeble patient is provided with proper food; the tuberculosis patient sent to a Sanatorium with the necessary outfit, and arrangements made for the care of husband and children during her absence.

A critical case that demanded immediate attention was cared for at the Charles Choate Memorial Hospital at Woburn, when the patient made a rapid recovery.

This hospital has opened its doors to us most generously; has given us the privilege of endowing a bed, and offers to receive patients sent by the Association at the same rates as residents of Woburn. The Association has availed itself of this opportunity, and, realizing from its experience the advantage of a well equipped hospital, near at hand, looks forward eagerly to the establishment of a similar hospital in Winchester in the near future.

Of the 3765 visits made by the nurses during the year, 1641 were free; the remainder were paid for in sums, ranging from five to fifty cents. It has seemed wise to send bills for services; with few exceptions they are generally paid, and after some delay, the payment is often accompanied by a note of apology or explanation. The money for one bill, due six years, was received in five and ten cent pieces, evidently the result of slow saving. Although the stipulated length of a visit is forty minutes, this is, by no means arbitrary; the duration of a call is regulated by the need of the patient, and often, in surgical or confinement cases, is extended to hours. Consequently, the number of calls made during a day is no exact measure of a nurses work; one long, hard visit, counting for more than several simple baths or dressings.

There have been many old people cared for, to whom the nurses' daily visits have been a great comfort, and the suggestion of Christmas toys for sick children and Thanksgiving dinners for lonely women, was acted upon by individual members of the Association, and carried cheer into many lives. The membership list has increased to 242; and individuals and organizations which have always helped in the work have continued their contributions. Not so much as usual was realized from the June Breakfast—not because of any failure in interest or attendance, on the contrary; but because some of the means of adding to the receipts, such as the paper and the automobile service, were abandoned.

More extra nurses have been provided than usual; the cost of patiens maintained at the State Sanatoriums and the salary of the school nurse, which the Association has shared with the School Board, have increased the expense account for the year. The results of the School Nursing experiment are demonstrating its need, and in connection with it is the offer of the dentists of Winchester to give each one half day in the month for the care of children's teeth, at nominal rates. That there is a growing appreciation of the work done by the Association, and that the standard of health has been raised by its means, is evidenced by letters which are frequently received, expressing gratitude for the services of the nurses, and a realizing sense of the meaning of "the best possible home nursing."

Anna B. Gilman, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The annual report of the Finance Committee for the year ending March 31, 1910, is a most successful one.

The present membership is 242, a gain of 38 members over last year, and the subscriptions amount to $244.85.

Besides the individual subscribers, 141 in number, the Association is indebted as usual to the Fletcher Fund, to the Union Thanksgiving Service for $4.35, and to the Holy Name Society of the Catholic Church for its gift of $10. We are duly grateful for a check of $25 recently received from one of our members, as a token of her appreciation of the work the Assocation is doing.

The June breakfast still seems popular with the townspeople and the breakfast of 1909 added $643.78 to the treasury.

In fulfilling its office of raising money for the Association, the Finance committee feels itself one of the most important for the advancement of this good work. We, therefore, bespeak a larger membership and more liberal contributions; not only for a firmer financial basis for the work, but knowing that a greater knowledge of its needs will result in increased interest to those who contribute, and to those who benefit by the contributions.

For the Committtee,
Carolyn E. Sanborn, Chairman.

TRAVEL LECTURE ON AUSTRIA

Mrs. Caroline B. Lawrance will give an illustrated lecture on her travels in Austria, at Metcalf Hall, this Friday evening, at 8 o'clock.

This will be the third in the series of Travel Lectures now in progress at the Unitarian Vestry, the preceeding ones having been on Venice, and Spain. The new instrument for illustrating will be used only as a stereopticon, in which capacity it excells. Mrs. Lawrance has secured a large number of excellent pictures of this comparatively little known but most interesting country.

The next lecture in the course will be given a fortnight later, the subject being Germany, and the speakers Mrs. Anne S. Lewis and Mr. F. Percyval Lewis.

SALE AND DRAMATICS.

The Metcalf Union will hold a sale of fancy articles, aprons, cake, candy and flowers at Metcalf Hall in the Unitarian Church, Friday, April 22, at 3.00 p. m. All are cordially invited.

At 7 30 p. m., two plays will be given, —"Hiring Help" and "A Dumb Waiter" under the direction of Miss M. Alice Mason. They will be followed by an hour of informal dancing. Twenty-five cents admission will be charged.

GRADE CROSSING.

Town Now Knows Where it Stands in Matter.

Preliminary Statement from the Grade Crossing Committee.

To the Citizens of Winchester:

At the recent annual meeting we were appointed a committee to confer with other interested parties as to the best method of abolishing the grade crossing at the centre of the town. By this vote we were instructed to report at a future town meeting to be called for the purpose. It seems best to us, however, before calling such a meeting to inform the citizens as fully as we can with reference to the various possibilities in order that they may become more familiar with the problem and have an opportunity to carefully consider it before the time of the meeting. In this way we should expect a more intelligent conclusion than could possibly be arrived at if the first knowledge of what could be done was obtained at the meeting

The Grade Crossing Commission appointed by the Superior Court is understood to have determined provisionally upon an elimination of the grade crossing by a bridge at the present station, approached from Church street by a new sixty-foot road back of Waterfield Block, taking a portion of Manchester field, and with its Easterly approach at a level either with the Parkway or Main street, according to the grade to be determined upon. The estimated cost of this plan is $153,400, to be borne in the proportions fixed by statute. The details of this plan were published in a recent number of the STAR. It is believed that the Commission will modify the above plan or adopt any other reasonable plan on which the Railroad, the Electric Railway, the Commonwealth and the Town agree. We have seen all the parties in interest and find them ready to cooperate with the town in solving the problem in either of the following ways:

First—If the town desires to build a single bridge at or near the station and carry the highway above the railroad, they all express themselves as willing to modify the plans recently proposed by the Commission in a manner satisfactory to the town. For instance, to make the roadway 80 feet wide instead of 60; to take on the west side of the town the whole or such portion of the Waterfield Block as may be necessary to secure a proper entrance to this bridge next to the Common; to make the grade on the east side as easy as it can be made without disturbing the grade of Main street at the corner of the Parkway—probably about 4 per cent.; to build an arch bridge over the river of sufficient width to properly take care of the water, and to make such other reasonable changes as the town may suggest. The station may be moved south of this proposed roadway, or north of it, taking a portion of the Common, or it may be carried still further north near the present railroad crossing, taking out a portion of the Common, for its location there, whichever of these three best suits the town.

The expense of this plan is estimated to be about $200,000. It can be estimated more closely than the plan at the Centre because fewer land owners are affected and the damages can consequently be more accurately computed

Second—If the town still desires to raise the highway above the railroad at the Centre, they will consent to this and pay their proportionate part of the expense up to $300,000, whatever it may cost above that to be paid by the town. For instance, if the total cost of the abolition was $400,000, the town would pay ten per cent of the first $300,000 and the entire amount in excess of that, or a total of $130,000—all this, of course, provided the Commission would approve of this arrangement. If the town should decide to accept this proposition, it would be necessary to secure a special act of the Legislature to enable us to do it, as under the statue a town can not pay more than ten per cent of the expense of abolishing grade crossings.

No estimate of the expense of this plan which the Committee can assure the Town is even approximately correct, has been, or can be, made. Between thirty-five and forty estates will be affected and the owner of each will be entitled to a jury trial for the estimation of his damages. Undoubtedly some of the owners would agree to accept, in place of general damages, the raising and adjusting of their property to the new grades and damage merely for the interruption in their use of the property during the work, but past experience has shown that no general agreement to this effect can be made, and the total expense of the alteration would be dependent upon the final outcome of a considerable number of law suits. The estimates of the total expense of construction and damages range between $325,000 and $500,000.

In former discussions relative to the various methods of abolishing the grade crossing, the bridge shown at the Centre has been represented as being carried on piers extending north and south between the railroad tracks. The Boston and Maine Railroad, however, say they should object to this type of bridge for the reason that in case of a derailment the piers would increase the danger to trains and if demolished by a heavy train would allow the bridge to collapse. Therefore they should ask that the bridge, whether built at the Centre or at the station, should be carried by overhead trusses, similar to those which may be seen at Wedgemere and at other bridges along the line of the road, leaving an open span of eighty feet in width underneath. In the case of the bridge at the Centre, which is planned to be 100 feet wide, there would be four sets of trusses, dividing the roadway into three sections or lanes, the centre one probably accommodating the street railroad, the two outside ones teams and pedestrians. The bridge at the station, which would be 80 feet wide, would have three sets of trusses, dividing the bridge into two lanes. These trusses would be from 10 to 14 feet above the roadway, and to a height of 6 feet above the roadway would be encased in wood or steel so that it would be impossible for any one to see through them or to drop anything upon the cars below. The roadway would consist of plank paved with brick and the wear and tear of this roadway would be maintained by the town. The steel work of the bridge would be maintained by the railroad.

Third—If the town is not ready to decide on either of these methods, the Boston and Maine Railroad will put in two subways for pedestrians, one just north of the station and one just south of the crossing at the Centre, will build a fence between the tracks from a point well below the station to the crossing in the centre of the town and north of the crossing as far as may be desired, and will improve the gate service at the Centre so far as it is possible for them to do so. This will cost approximately $20,000 and the railroad will bear the entire expense. If either the first or second method suggested above is adopted the work would be done in the season of 1911. If this third proposition is acceptable to the town the railroad would do the work in the season of 1910.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The base ball team, although it has dropped its two first games gives promise of putting up a good game as soon as it has had a little experience and practice. The outfield is entirely new and a lot of practice will remedy the difficulty of misjudging fly balls. The weather on both days was wretched and this had a bad effect on the playing; but even taking this into consideraton the support the team received was poor. If the same support was given the team as was shown during the basket ball season, a great deal would be accomplished towards turning out a winning team.

Wednesday the candidates for the crew were called out and Supt. Herron and Capt. Hason outlined the work for the season. A new cedar canoe is being built adapted to the requirements for school boy racing. When this canoe arrives no excuses for losing the race can be attributed to this, because it will be made of the best stock and cost approximately $125. Those who reported were, Hanson (Capt), Dover, Hamilton, Walling, Sheridan, Evans, Locke, Tuck, Dean and Harold Wheatly, Grant and Mam. Harold Webber will coach the team.

The next ball game will be this afternoon at 3.15 with Roxbury Latin. On Tuesday morning Reading H. S. will open its season by playing the home team on Manchester Field at 10 o'clock.

The Recorder was issued last Wednesday. The paper has improved 50 per cent. during the current year and too much praise cannot be given the editors who are striving to make each number the best possible. The subscription list last year contained 70 names, this year 138. With the increase in profits, pictures and new covers have appeared on every issue, and this number with a full page picture of the Girl's Basket ball team, is no exception.

ARE WOMEN CITIZENS?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Laws of the United States provide that all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens thereof, and this includes women as well as men.

The laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in providing for the voting for school committee, is as follows: Chap. 11, Sec. 13. Every female citizen having the qualifications of a male voter required by the preceding section may have her name entered upon the list of voters for school committee, etc. etc.

A woman is thus recognized as a citizen and treated as such in every position in which she may be placed.

There is often a misapprehension regarding the terms of citizen and voter. A person, male or female may be a citizen and yet not a voter, and it may be possible that those who were circulating the petition you refer to did not know the difference between the terms or designations. I remain

Very truly yours,
John T. Wilson.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

A little three-year old Winchester youngster, busied himself, last Sunday, in looking at the pictures in the big Bible, and the one representing the drowning of Pharoah, his horses and chariots, captivated him to such an extent that he at once began to play horse with his sister. "You should not play horse, Sunday," cautioned his mother. "Well, there's a horse in the Bible," was the reply, and that seemed to settle it.

No matter how highly educated a Winchesterite is, when he is sick he is an illiterate.

A Main street gentleman gives The Spectator to understand that "the class of society upon whom the privilege of female suffrage is sought to be thrust evinces a very slight desire to avail of it, and its judgment should be decisive in the case, as it is that of persons intelligent and well-informed enough to pass upon the question. Why make women voters against the silent but effective protests of their indifference in the matter? One point might be put to the test of a popular showing, viz., whether the mass of women really, in their hearts, thank the champions of female suffrage for their exertions."

Never despise the lowly. It requires a Winchesterite with considerable push to propel a wheel-barrow.

A gentleman interested in the public schools of Winchester well says that the parent or teacher who cannot secure attention or obedience from children of the primary school age without whipping, "ought to be banished from the house or the school house." Of High school pupils this gentleman informs The Spectator: "They are old enough to be reasoned with. Either they have a sense of propriety, duty and dignity which can be effectively appealed to, and so whipping is unnecessary, or they have not, and whipping would be useless, and expulsion from school the proper safeguard for the other scholars."

A leading Winchester club woman, after saying the school cannot with propriety be asked to assume the duties of the family, the church, society or the State, gives The Spectator to understand that "those who have pleaded for the introduction of sewing in the public schools are perfectly right in saying that women ought to know how to sew; are perfectly right when they assert that few women now are good seamstresses; But it does not follow because these two statements are true that the schools, already over burdened with pupils and work, should undertake that teaching. Because a thing needs to be done, it does by no manner of means follow that the schools ought to do it."

A naughty Winchesterite who had the contribution box "shoved under his nose" just after an appeal to strive to enter in at the straight gate, said he supposed they wanted to make sure of the gate money.

Many a Winchesterite who thinks himself a "great gun" is nothing more than a big bore.

A Pleasant street gentleman wants to know that if when a clergyman moistens his lips in the midst of his sermon, can he be accused of watering his talk?

A little boy living near the Arlington line wanted to know if Easter eggs were laid by speckled hens. His father, a very rude man, said they were sometimes laid by speckled hens, and the specks afterwards laid. Whatever can he mean?

The Spectator knows a certain Winchesterite who does not own an umbrella of his own, but asks for that of some other fellow, then commits petty larceny by failing to return it.

"Never milk while the cow is eating," is the advice of a bucolic publication reaching The Spectator's desk. Judging from the character of some of the milk that is sold, it would be more to the point never to milk while the cow is drinking.

"Be still, you naughty girl," said a Main street Miss to her doll, with a big chunk of maple sugar in her hand, "be still, I say. You can't have any. It isn't good for children, but its awful nice for grown folks."

Winchesterites who are their own enemies would find it a great deal more profitable to be enemies to somebody else and friends to themselves.

MIDDLESEX CANAL.

How Winchester Boys Enjoyed the Long Ditch.

Reminiscences of a Former Resident of the Town.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Your late allusion to the Middlesex Canal raises the enquiry whether or not there is anything funny about that sober ribbon of fluidity, which reached from inland river to tide-water. Fifty bridges and twenty locks accentuated this public scheme of business, you say. These bridges facilitated the crossing of teams and travellers which but for the bridges would have compelled said traffic to go round the ends of the canal, as head and caudality, so to speak which were so wet with the country water and the salt-sea, that carriages and foot, would be balked in thus crossing the canal. So the fathers of the canal, were forced to bear the expense of the fifty bridges. There the hills were climbed and scaled by means of the twenty locks. These were a device which enabled boats forty feet long and perhaps twelve wide, laden with coal or lumber or flour, to swim up-hill and slide down hill, with a kind of graceful ease and practical success, and ride in level water all the time. Water—it is plain, will move down-hill, but not generally—up hill. And yet the writer saw masses of water moving up-hill as well as down, August 8, 1847, in Portland harbor. The water had the appearance of mountains, as it moved up-hill in giant bodies, called waves. From the steamer John Marshall passengers looked out upon heights of water which had run up-hill, only to run down again—which latter action was less wonderful of course than the getting up-hill.

At ten o'clock at night sometimes, a long, loud note from a horn upon a canal boat, would announce to the sleepy lock tender near our home, that a canal boat must get up his hill. He would hasten out with an active agility that seemed to excuse his being asleep, and the boat would swim right up over the height, and on to its destination, through the skilful manipulations of the lock-man. This water way served a good many purposes, beside the matter of money gain.

This long ditch was dug for boys to swim in, as well as boats, and from all along its friendly banks, and beneath the shade and gracefulness of hanging foliage, fresh and green and lovely, bathers, in joyous splash and noisy daring would cool their sweaty limbs and vie with each other in aquatic sport. Sometimes special thirst would incline us to drink from the flowing flood. But before partaking, a quick glance would assure us that no inanimate dog, or cat or hen, was slowly floating upon the contaminated bosom of this commercial ribbon. And when a boat hove in sight, and a driver was on the tow-path, to prod the horses energies, we were quick to leave the water, seize our apparel, and make for the adjacent thickets. Then further, it would seem, that mosquitoes quenched their thirst from this convenient water. For, if at evening, young men went to bathe in the canal, it was always remarkable with what freedom the mosquitoes would feed upon the anatomy of the bathers. With a kind of stilled hum, the enemy would fix upon his prey, and bore for the vital fluid, and the victim would strike for his enemy. And so this canal you referred to, was suited to sail boats in—up-hill and down, for a natatorium for country boys and a stream from which mosquitoes could drink, when they couldn't bite the blithe and happy bathers. Also it watered the roots and fed the life of whole lines of beautiful trees that fringed its banks with intoxicating elegance. And who can fail to wonder and be grateful, when he knows anything of the chemics and mathematics of so common a thing as a tree, but which poets celebrate the exquisite comeliness of and in whose intricate life and growth the scientist glories. One more blessing was connected with the artificial brook which skirted the western part of the now proud and prosperous towns of Woburn and Winchester. There were some bodies of quiet water—estuaries perhaps which were flooded by the waters of the canal, and surrounded by woods or bushes. Into these, wild ducks would often alight, and be the game of the expert hunter. These were the attraction of those shots who are sure of bringing down a bird even if the marksman shoots in the opposite direction! The duck is not a sweet songster. He is not a rival of the Bob-o'Link, or the Cat-bird, when he exercises his native talent, beyond his "yap." The song of the plain duck reminds us of the name of the physician, who can cure every malady flesh is heir to, with no study or training, simply from his wonderful self.

A serious disadvantage hurt the remunerative power of this water-way. At every thanksgiving time, its surface would begin to grow hard and stiff and slippery, and so obstinate that no boat could be drawn through it. Boats couldn't swim up its hills or slide down. And there was no cure for this trouble, except boiling water, and enough of it could not be had to meet the exigency, and so the canal was a skating rink for boys and girls, ladies' and gentlemen. Sail-sleds were sometimes used, and runner-chairs in which interested friends would push ladies hither and thither, and get weary only when it was late.

It might be said in passing that the Middlesex Canal ran near the birthplace of him who was afterwards Count Rumford, who left our land because he did not agree with the politics of Boston and who told Frederick the Great, that he could feed his army on half their rations, if they would thoroughly masticate their food. But he now stands in Majestic stillness in a fine statue before the stately Library building in the City of Woburn. And more, his name has for perhaps 50 years, been given to one of the schools in Winchester situated in a locality familiar and dear to the writer. In respect to the science of government we are obliged to inquire, whether any rule can be effective and wholesome without the moral element of justice and honor and right. Benjamin Kidd in his fine work upon "Social Evolution" asserts that nothing but the moral element can save any nation in perpetuity and real prosperity.

BOAT CLUB ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Winchester Boat Club was held at the club house on Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected for the coming season:

President, George B. Smith
Vice-President, Charles A. Gleason
Secretary, T. Price Wilson
Treasurer, William Adriance
Fleet Captain, Fred M. Bates

Directors:

Vincent Farnsworth
Schuyler F. Herron
Preston E. Corey
Dexter P. Blaikie
James H. Gerlach
William M. Little
Charles A. Lane
Hermann D. Murphy.

The reports of the Treasurer and Secretary showed the Club to be in remarkably good standing. Considerable agitation is being made by a number of the members to have tennis courts made at the club, and it is highly probable that if satisfactory arrangements can be made, at least one court will be made this spring.

The directors will decide upon the new float which is to be erected at once on this Saturday night. It is expected that the float will be of wood placed on concrete piers.

The directors have again voted to allow the High school crew the use of the racing four and the privileges of the house for training for the Lawson trophy race, which will take place probably on June 17th.

The club house will be open all day on April 19th for the benefit of those members who desire to look over their boats and fittings. On each Saturday afternoon and Sunday following that date the house will also be opened. It is expected that the steward will be in attendance commencing May 1st.

ELECTRICITY IN THE STABLE.

Much has been written about the electric milking machine for use in the dairy and it is no more than right that it should be recorded that Old Dobbin is also enjoying the modern electrical appliances in his stable. Currying, cleaning, washing and grooming a horse by electricity is not unusual by any means.

The little motor-driven horse clipper was the first electrical device brought into the stable and since then the electric inventors have produced a currying machine which loosens all the dirt in the horse's coat. This is followed by a cleaning device which removes every bit of dirt after the manner of a vacuum cleaning machine. With the new device five horses can be groomed in the time it formerly took to clean one and without the added danger of being kicked into the ethereal beyond.

GRADE CROSSING ABOLITION EXPENSES.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

This House bill, No. 1213, inclosed, as to expense of abolishing grade crossings, was passed in the House 6th of April, 136 yeas, 72 noes. Winchester's Representative, Wilton B. Fay, voted no. How do you like it Mr. Voter and tax payer?

Whitfield Tuck.

AN ACT

Relative to the Abolition of Grade Crossings. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Section 1. In cases where a grade crossing is abolished according to the provisions of law therefor, the whole cost of the abolition and all expenses incidental thereto shall be paid by the railroad company or companies concerned, except that in cases where a street railway company also uses the grade crossing, such company shall pay fifteen per cent of the cost. In case a city or town petitions for the abolition of a grade crossing, the city or town shall pay such amount not exceeding five per cent of the cost of abolition of the grade crossing and of the expenses incident thereto, as the commissioners having the matter in charge may determine, and the commonwealth shall pay twenty-five per cent of the same except that any street railway company, which also uses the grade crossing, shall pay fifteen per cent of the said cost and expenses, the same to be deducted from the twenty-five per cent. otherwise payable by the commonwealth.

Section 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Mrs. S. Emma Cole sang a group of love songs with her usual grace and sweetness and refreshments were served by the social committee, Mrs. Addie G. Pippen, chairman; Mrs. Harriett D. Hatch poured, and punch was served by Mrs. Hattie A. Rice and Mrs. Frances J. Richardson. Following is the annual report of the secretary, Miss Maude Folts:

THE REPORT.

Though the character of the programs of this club year can hardly be called strictly serious, it would be difficult to find a greater or more pleasing variety of entertainment than has been provided. Uniquely interesting was Rev. Peter MacQueen's stereopticon lecture on Africa; strongly contrasted were Miss Best, the settlement worker, and Miss Wheeler in her charming descriptions of Girverney when the senior High school girls were guests of The Fortnightly.

The club Magazine was as popular as ever; and, could we be sure that always the corners of our mouths will turn up, not down, unusually well spent was the hour when we listened to Rev. Allen Stockdale. The fine Song Recital by Mr. Albert Edmund Brown will long be remembered with delight.

Friends of "Uncle Remus" think they discovered another congenial spirit while listening to Professor Paul Pearson as he told of Joel Chandler Harris and recited from his writings; and the perfect joy of the children watching the mysterious performance of Baril the Magician' made many club members happy that Children's Day is celebrated occasionally.

To the chairman of the Reciprocity committee, the club is indebted for a charming musicale by the "Patten Trio" and an original burlesque by members of the "Thursday Morning Fortnightly Club," and to the Dramatic committee, for a scene from "Little Dorritt" and another from "Martin Chuzzlewit," which were shared by our townswomen.

The stereopticon lecture "In Birdland" was a rare treat; so beautiful were the pictures, and so truly did Mr. Avis reproduce the songs of the birds that the ladies felt they had actually spent the hour out doors in Birdland.

"The Outlook" presented at the opening meeting by the president and chairmen of committees has gradually materialize.

Good work has been done by the Literature committee under the leadership of the chairman, Mrs. Ely. A free class in Art has been managed by Mrs. C. T. Whitten and her committee on art.

A free course of lectures on Current Events by Mrs. May Alden Ward has been in care of Mrs. N. M. Nichols, and, to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Lefavour, the club is indebted for music adapted to the various programs, and a free Choral Class which is doing excellent work under the instruction of Mr. Albert Edmund Brown, and which will, with the assistance of Mr Brown and another soloist, provide the program for "Guest Day."

The attendance at these classes has not been so large as we wish but those who have availed themselves of these opportunities have found them worth while in themselves, and also in bringing them into closer relations with club members. The average attendance at the regular meetings of the club has been two hundred and twenty-five.

Most successfully were carried out the ways and means devised by the Finance committee to raise funds for the philanthropies of The Fortnightly. Under the co chairmanship of Mrs H. A. Wheeler and Mrs. F. M White and their many efficient aids, the "Dutch Kirmiss" held in the Town Hall the afternoons and evenings of the fifteenth and sixteenth of November proved a great social success as well as a financial achievement. Then it was that the "Club Calendar," compiled by Mrs. M. F. B. Woods and Mrs. W. H. H. Tracy, made its appearance—a calendar of great merit.

Never has the Town Hall been more surprisingly or more beatifully transformed than while wearing its Dutch costume; nor has it held happier people, unless it be when The Fortnightly was told that The Kirmiss had netted $1027.52 for the philanthropic work of the club, and that from its "Advertising Program," Mrs. J. D. P. Wingate and her aids had cleared $500 for the Playground Fund. Not only does this money make it possible to continue the "Vacation Play-room," which Mrs. Woods and her Philanthropy committee managed so successfully last summer, and through which the club for many years has blessed our town; not only will it make real the dream of a former president, and the wish of the present president and Philanthropy committee to help one or more High school girls begin a higher education, but there will be a balance for some philanthropic work of another year. It is also probable that we shall be able to demonstrate to Winchester the value of an equipped and supervised playground.

The Education committee (Mrs. Holcombe chairman) has materialized visions of helping girls make over garments, trim hats, and cook simple food well, besides carrying on a class in cooking for High schools girls. Many members of the club have helped raise money for this work and have also aided in teaching.

Perhaps nothing has appealed more strongly to The Fortnightly than the request of this committee to help secure the reinstatement of the subject of cooking in the Public schools of Winchester. The action of the club a year ago had not been forgotten, and the president, Mrs. Dunning, with other club members attended the hearing when Mrs. Holcombe very ably presented to the School Committee the need of teaching cooking. By united effort, belief in the practicability and need of reinstating this subject, was created, and a happy occasion it was to a large representation of The Fortnightly at the Town Meeting, when it was unanimously voted to appropriate one thousand dollars to be used in providing an equipment and in teaching cooking.

The Legislative committee has attended several conferences and has brought to the Club opportunities to add our influence to secure legislation regulating child labor, also to secure legislation improving the conditions under which milk is produced and sold and has awakened interest in cooperating with the Consumer's League. The Civics conferences have also been profitable and that committee has brought to the attention of The Fortnightly the opportunity to help sustain the laws protecting birds. The Club also endorsed the Senate Bill providing for the free distribution of the remedy for preventing infant blindness.

The excellent reports of the Press committee printed in the Winchester STAR and Boston Transcript call forth the appreciation of the Club, as does also the efficient work of the social and courtesies committees.

One member we miss, Mrs. Brackett, who had been deeply interested in this Association for more than twenty-five years, passed away last summer.

With more knowledge of the value of the Federation of Women's Clubs gained from Federation meetings, Conferences and representation on the State Federation Board (for the Fortnightly has the honor to have a member on this State Board and Mrs. Wheeler is chairman of the committee on meetings) there has been developed a greater interest in both State and General Federations. Eight members attended the autumn meeting in Brockton, about fifty were present at the mid-winter meeting in Boston (twenty or more serving as ushers and doorkeepers) and The Fortnightly has chosen the President and Mrs. Wheeler as delegates to the Biennial Convention in Cincinnati.

The membership continues four hundred, the waiting list of last year having been admitted to membership this year and there is now a waiting list of forty-six.

To meet the needs of this club of four hundred there had been made countless unsatisfactory efforts to remodel the Constitution and By-Laws adopted in 1881, and which were suited to its twenty-two members, so following the suggestion made at the annual meeting of last year, the president appointed Mrs. Tracy, Mrs. Wheeler and Mrs. Ripley a committee to prepare new Constitution and By-Laws, and called a special meeting for their consideration. With some amendments, the proposed Constitution and By-Laws were adopted and it is hoped they will prove adequate. Already the half hour gained for business has helped materially and it is hoped that benefit will be received by holding the annual meeting a month earlier.

The History of The Fortnightly, published this year, will prove helpful in getting in touch with the club and it is hoped that every member will own a copy.

The kindness of the School Committee in allowing the Club to use Assembly Hall of the High school building for stereopticon lectures and its free classes, charging only the expense incurred, is deeply appreciated for, otherwise none of these lectures could have been given. The Fortnightly has had the pleasure of inviting the School Committee to attend the lectures on Current Events, the teachers of our one session grades to attend the classes in Art and Current Events, and the High school teachers to enjoy Mr. Avis' lecture "In Birdland." These and other friendly relations with the School Committee are delightful and prophesy increased usefulness for The Fortnightly.

May the results of this year waken in each member a deeper appreciation of our opportunities and a keener sense of our individual responsibility for, with the hearty cooperation of all, success is assured.

Not at Your Expense—But Mine

W. R. FOX, President,
Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of — compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

You have no risk, assume no obligation, and I thank you before hand for the privilege. Just write me, personally.

BASE BALL.

Everett 9 Winchester 3

In the opening game of the season Winchester High was defeated by Everett High 9 to 3. Tuck pitched a good game for the winners fanning eight men, he also did some good work with the bat hitting three singles. Ledue played a fine game on first base. He caught one high foul fly after a long run into the crowd. Two double plays figured in the contest. Tuck catching a liner and throwing it to first and Mathews stopping a grounder threw it to Ledue who in turn relayed it to Hurd for two outs. The Brickleys excelled for Everett

After the first three innings Tuck weakened through poor support. Up to that time he pitched a good game. Flaherty and Ledue excelled for the home team, while Clarke and Fritz played well for Rindge. Is it possible that in this great country, Mr. Roosevelt is the only man capable of being President.

Now is the time to do the most effective work in destroying moth nests. A few weeks more and it will be too late!

Northbridge is the banner temperance town in this state. At the recent town election, out of a total of 115 votes only one was cast for license.

During February and March we ought to have had 7.52 inches of rain, to keep up with the normal state of affairs. As it was only 4.5 inches fell.

President Taft's supposed failure is due almost entirely to lack of congressional support. The President is striving to carry out the Republican platform pledges, while Congressmen appear to have forgotten that any such things as pledges were made.

Ex Gov. Guild has been after the young men of Boston's Back Bay section for not showing interest in the militia. It might be said in this connection that the man who would be the first to call for the service of the militia is he who protest against his employees being members and who refuses to allow them to attend the annual manoeuvers.

The U. S. government is not very mindful of the convenience of the public when it allows the draws over Charles river to be opened during rush hours. Monday morning six inward trains on the Boston & Maine R. R., were held up for from ten to fifteen minutes to await the passage through the draw of a slow moving stone sloop, thereby discommoding hundreds of people who were in a hurry to get to their business or to take trains from the South station.

Elbert Hubbard, whose views always take interest from the way he expresses them, says in his new book, "The Standard Oil Company," that the company "is made up of graduates of the University of Hard Knocks. They have played," continuing from Mr. Hubbard, "the game according to regulation American rules, and they have won because they had the foresight, patience, quickness, courage, good cheer, economy, skill. The men who went down before them failed for lack of these American qualities, these qualities incu'cated in our public schools, extolled in books, preached in sermons, are the qualities that have made Americans supreme whenever they have had a fair field."

The census enumerators commenced their duties today. They may appear to be inquisitive, but they are after facts of national importance, but which are not made public only in statistics. Mr. Gettemy says he believes that his staff of enumerators are possessed of a higher intelligence than any previous body of the same kind, and bases his opinion on the fact that for the first time applicants for the positions were obliged to submit to competitive examination. Of nearly 7,000 original applicants, 3,514 took the required examination, and 1,553 passed with the requisite rating.

Wayland's experiment in appointing a committee to assist the Assessors is something unique, to say the least. Ordinarily, if a town is not satisfied with the work of officials they depose them, and this is the only legal way to accomplish it, and officials who are sworn to perform certain duties will resent having a committee who have no responsibility in telling them what they shall or shall not do. We are not surprised therefore, that when the committee offered to accompany them on their annual rounds they objected, by saying that the duties of the assessors are laid down by statute and the special committee has no power.

The Grade Crossing.

We print on first page a preliminary report from the special committee appointed by the town on the grade crossing abolition question. This report of the committee is given publicity at this time so that the citizens may give it careful consideration previous to a special town meeting that will be called about the middle of next month. This committee, consisting of Messrs. Lewis Parkhurst, Samuel J. Elder, James P. Boutwell, David N. Skillings and William D. Richards, is entitled to credit not alone for the quick dispatch of the task assigned them, but for bringing out clearly just where the town stands in this important matter, a thing not known before. After the citizens have fully digested this preliminary report and given an opportuuity to express their views, the committee may have something more to say.

The STAR gladly offers the use of its columns for the expression of opinion on this latest phase of the grade crossing question, and would only suggest that contributors back up their opinions with their names. A signed article, no matter from whom, carries far more weight than one that is not signed, and again the former will carry more weight with the committee, who really desire all the information they can procure in making a final report looking toward the settlement of this vexed and long-drawn-out question.

Newsy Paragraphs.

The engagement is announced of Miss Jennie Christie of the Eliot hospital staff, Commonwealth avenue, to Dr. Alfred G. Richburg of this town. Dr. Richburg has offices in Boylston Chambers, Boston. The wedding will take place in June.

Miss Fessenden, the kindergartner of the Episcopal Church, is to be married the latter part of this month and will go to Honolulu to live.

Mr. Samuel Smith of Washington street is very ill with the grip.

Mr. Walter Kramer of Sheffield road had as a guest last week Mr. Henry Mussy of Holden, formerly of Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howe of Forest street returned from Hampton, Virginia, the first of the week. They spent a short time there visiting friends.

Mr. Charles Kimball, the letter carrier, is confined to the house.

Thieves entered the hen house of Mr. Walter Dotten on Alben street this week and stole eight hens and a rooster.

Four Kinds of Pupils.

The Talmud says there are four kinds of pupil—the sponge and the funnel, the strainer and the sieve. The sponge is he who taketh up everything, and the funnel is he who taketh in at this ear and letteth out at that; the strainer is he that letteth go the wine and retaineth the dross, and the sieve is he that letteth go the bran and retaineth the fine flour. The student who begins at least to wish to belong to the last named class will not have been sent to college in vain.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It is questionable if the Greater Boston bill will work smoothly or prove of much benefit to the district, but it may be worth trying for awhile. A full report of all of the meetings should be made public, however, so that the people may know just what is doing. Unless the Mayor of Boston is elected the first pesident of this council, you may depend upon it he won't play.

The legislature has sat down upon the lobby bill and the free pass bill as was to be expected. There are some things even the great, good and general court cannot bring itself to, saturated with virtue as it is, but can the G. O. P. stand much more of such legislating? If the Democratic party had any real leaders on Beacon Hill it would score heavily upon the party in power, which is trying so hard and with success to enlarge its fools paradise. It is almost needless to say that the press is opposed to both the measures referred to and always has been.

Evidently the business franchise tax bill is not only going through but will take effect this year. We lost $4000 last year under the bill giving half to the places where the business is located and will lose as much more under this year's bill. The committee reported against the bill as it believed those places which had lost a considerable sum should have time to adjust their affairs before losing the other half but the bill was lobbied through by the representatives of those places that will gain by it.

Governor Draper says the State tax will be kept down to last year's figure but it is difficult to see at this time how it can be done, as the legislature is in favor of spending money freely, and every appropriation has lots of pullers for it and in those cases where representatives think it will make votes for themselves the cost cuts no figure at all.

The proposed new telephone zone comes within a half mile of Winchester and our Selectmen should urge before the commission that it's limits should be extended. It is certainly worth trying for anyway as it is of much importance to us.

The northerly end of Highland avenue macadamized last year will soon be ripped to pieces by the autos unless we get busy and bind down the top with tar or some other road paint. Put something upon it at once and not wait till mid summer. Look at it now.

The Selectmen's weekly notes invariably state when Mr. McIntosh appears with a venire calling for the drawing of jurors that he appears as Chief of Police, when the document itself calls upon him as a constable. The clerk should know this.

Our old and homely drinking fountain in the centre should be replaced by one of the sanitary fountains which the bill that will soon be law will compel anyway.

He Liked It.

Wife—How do you like my new hat? Husband—The idea of paying big prices for— Wife—Big prices! Why, I made it myself. Husband—Um—yes—er—as I was saying, the idea of paying big prices for such monstrosities as the milliners are showing! Now, your hat is a work of art. Looks as if it came from Paris. Beautiful, my dear!

Pin Money.

Mrs. Brideley—Reggie, dear, you know that $50 you gave me for a new hat? Mr. B.—Yes, dear. Mrs. B.—Well, I've saved the money. Mr. B.—But I see you're wearing a new hat. Mrs. B.—Yes; in order to economize, as you suggested, I kept the $50 and had the hat charged.—Lippincott's.

In Politics.

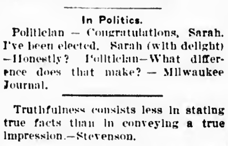
Truthfulness consists less in stating true facts than in conveying a true impression.—Stevenson.



Children In School

Cannot progress in their studies as they should if eye-strain is sapping vitality from other parts of the body. Constant aches and pains, dull feeling and headaches distract the mind from their studies and are often responsible for a supposed lack of effort.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A week of romantic drama begins at the Castle Square on Monday. "The Prisoner of Zenda," famous as a play and as a novel, will be produced by the John Craig Stock Company. It is now some years since "The Prisoner of Zenda" has been seen in Boston, and Mr. Craig's production will be in every way one of the best ever offered to our public. Mr. Craig will of course act the role of Prince Rudolf in this, and the dual roles of Rudolf the Fifth and Rudolf Rassendyll in the rest of the play, and the Castle Square theatre-goers will never have a better opportunity to see what a versatile actor he is. Mary Young will appear as the Princess Flavia, and the long cast will include the entire membership of the John Craig Stock Company.

A Sporting Chance.

"I'll teach you to play at pitch and toss!" shouted the enraged father. "I'll flog you for an hour, I will!"

"Father," instantly said the incorrigible as he balanced a penny on his thumb and finger, "I'll toss you to make it two hours or nothing"—Cassell's Journal.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The local Union met 1st Friday at the Home for the Aged on Kendall street, thus giving the residents an opportunity to enjoy the meeting and the social hour that followed. Mrs. Henry E. Hodge conducted the devotional exercises and Arthur Lover sang two solos. After a brief business session light refreshments were served by a committee of the W. C. T. U. During the afternoon the members busied their fingers in hemming a set of napkins that was left at the Home as a souvenir of the meeting, members of the Union having provided them for that purpose.

The usual quarterly reports were given, showing the finances and work to be in a healthy condition. The president Mrs. Hamilton, spoke of the presidents' meeting in Newton which she attended and her success in obtaining signatures to the petition in favor of submission of the prohibitory amendment. Mrs. Daniel Kelley reported several sheets and towels as well as money given to the Frances E. Willard Settlement. Mrs. J. C. Adams spoke of the Easter box and the flowers sent to members who have been ill. The successful beginning of children's temperance meetings was reported and the "bar and bottle bill" was explained. Five dollars was appropriated to the World's W. C. T. U. work. Several new members have been added during the past quarter.

In the recent report of the Foxboro institution for the cure of inebriates the State records have been carefully analyzed by an expert in statistics and some of the results are extremely interesting. Not less than ninety-four per cent. of all the criminals in the State are habitual users of liquor. The greater number of crimes of violence are committed by people in a state of partial intoxication. The children of habitual drinkers who are themselves abstainers so often lack self control and balance that practically all criminals may be said to be tainted by the liquor habit. All these conclusions should make the man who "can drink or let it alone" pause while he asks himself whether he is ready to take the consequences.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

CAUGHT THE MOOD.

The Incident That Helped Verdi With His "Miserere."

Men of genius are confessedly creatures of mood. Grief and adversity have often been a real help to them rather than a hindrance. Poe, it is said, produced "The Raven" while sitting at the bedside of his sleeping but dying wife. Many similar instances might be cited, but an anecdote of Verdi, told by Carlo Ceccarelli, will suffice.

On one occasion when Verdi was engaged on his well known opera, "Il Trovatore," he stopped short at the passage of the "Miserere," being at a loss to combine notes of sufficient sadness and pathos to express the grief of the prisoner, Manrico.

Sitting at his piano in the deep stillness of the winter night, his imagination wandered back to the stormy days of his youth, endeavoring to extract from the past a plaint, a groan, like those which escaped from his breast when he saw himself forsaken by the world. All in vain!

One day at Milan he was unexpectedly called to the bedside of a dying friend, one of the few who had remained faithful to him in adversity and prosperity. Verdi at the sight of his dying friend felt a lump rise in his throat. He wanted to weep, but so intense was his grief that not a tear flowed to the relief of his anguish.

In an adjoining room stood a piano. Verdi, under one of those sudden impulses to which men of genius are sometimes subject, sat down at the instrument and there and then improvised the sublime "Miserere" of the "Trovatore." The musician had given utterance to his grief.

Tuberculosis Not Sufficiently Taught In Schools.

Definite instruction concerning the nature and methods of prevention of tuberculosis is being given to less than 6 percent of the public school children of the United States according to a bulletin issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Recent investigation has shown that in only nine cities, Washington, D. C., Dallas, Tex., Richmond Va., Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Detroit, Mich., Malden, Mass., Salem, Mass., Saginaw, Mich., and Knoxville, Tenn., are special text books being used or lectures being given about tuberculosis. In three states and one territory, Michigan, Massachusetts, North Carolina and Porto Rico, laws have been passed requiring that instruction about the nature and methods of prevention of tuberculosis be given in all public schools. In Tennessee, the State Department of Education has requested that such instruction be given, and has issued circulars for this purpose. In New Jersey and West Virginia wall cards giving instruction are hung in every school room and the attention of all the children is called to them. The actual number of children, however, who will this year be taught by their teachers that tuberculosis is a communicable, infectious disease, and that it can be prevented, will not exceed one million. If the state laws requiring such instruction were strictly enforced, at least 2,000,000 children would be reached.

While tuberculosis does not cause as many deaths among school children as it does among workingmen or among infants under five years of age, the National Association gives some figures to show how serious the disease is among this class. Based on the census of 1900, it is estimated that nearly 100,000 children now in school will die of tuberculosis before they are eighteen years of age, or that about 6,400 die annually from this disease. Estimating that on an average each child who dies of tuberculosis has had six years of schooling the aggregate loss to the country in wasted education each year amounts to $1,152,000. According to investigations made in New York, Boston and Stockholm, the percentage of children who are afflicted with tuberculosis is much larger than the death rate would indicate.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis declares that there are two ways of checking the ravages of tuberculosis among school children. The first way is to instruct every school child about the dangers of the disease, and to show them how they themselves may prevent tuberculosis in their homes. The second method is to establish open-air schools for all children who have tuberculosis or who are suspected cases, segregating them from the healthy children.

GOOD WORK.

1909-1910.

If some of our people could take the time to stop at the Offices of the Massachusetts Commission on Hospitals for Consumptives at 3 Joy street, Boston, look over the maps, reports, reprints and elevations of the State Sanatoria, they would understand better what it means to have a Local Tuberculosis Committee.

The formation of local classes, the establishment of open air camps for day and night, the supervision and instruction of home cases, is part of the great national crusade against this dread disease. In short it means being recognized social workers and educators.

We in Winchester are fortunate in having few cases of tuberculosis among the sick for whom we care and in having favorable conditions for the cases in the early stages of the disease. The class started in November, 1907, for this kind of case has been discontinued, as those coming to our care during this year have been advanced or Sanitarium cases. The State Sanitaria are four in number, Rutland, North Reading, Westfield, and Lakeville. Rutland is for those in the first stages without complications. The other three receive all but the hopeless cases which are cared for by various Institutions for chronic patients.

In 1907 three cases went to the State Sanitaria from Winchester at an expense of $105.22, met by the Association. One of these, a young man, a painter by trade, came to us from Boston; his family took a small house on the edge of the Fells, where he could have the best conditions. The Association bought a tent for his use, provided milk and eggs and the occasional visits of the nurse gave instruction to him and the family in the prevention of contagion, proper diet for the patient, and the planning of his day to his best advantage. His cure was completed by three weeks at Rutland.

In 1908 $112.55 was spent in maintaining our patients at the hospitals, all young men, who, with help, could be saved, we hope, for a life of usefulness. The year 1909-10 shows a slight increase in the number of cases. At present we are responsible for four; one at Rutland, one at the fine new hospital at North Reading, and one at Westfield and another awaiting admission at North Reading. When the committee is notified of one of these cases, either by one of our physicians or through the Headquarters in Boston, the patient is visited and accompanied to the Massachusetts General Hospital for examination. The work of the committee has been to take charge of that patient during the period awaiting admission to the hospital, to provide the best conditions under the circumstances, to furnish milk, eggs, and other proper nourishment if necessary, suitable clothing and the requirements for being out of doors for the greater part of the day. With the notice of admission for the patient into the hospital comes a list of articles necessary for him to bring. These have been solicited from various sources or taken from our own supply. The patients have been personally conducted to the station and remembered during their stay at the hospital, by letters, magazines, and such games and work as they could use and enjoy.

A case cared for in town, incurable when it came to us, has been satisfactory in that the patient has received in the home of a widow on the outskirts of the town, kind and intelligent care.

The money expended in the care of these patients the past three years has been $515.15. The benefit received has been deeply appreciated by the patients and has, we hope, been permanent.

Suggestion has been made us from the State Headquarters, that in combining our work with that of Medford, whose number and kind of cases are similar to those in Winchester, a small day camp might be started which would possibly be the beginning of a camp of a permanent nature. This matter is now under consideration by the Board, whose desire it is to further any part of the work of the Association as shall be of use to the community.

Respectfully submitted,
Cornelia M. A. Houghton.

Lenore P. Cummings, Chairman.

THAT RAILROAD CROSSING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A word from an interested citizen who has studied more or less, this very important question.

Taking up first, the plans which have already been presented:—Raising the streets would, forever, be an eye-sore to the artistic beauty of the centre of the town, neither would it eliminate the danger to life, for the reason that there are four approaches to that bridge, which, with electric cars, automobiles, teams and foot passengers, there would be more, or surely as much, danger of accident as at present.

The last one presented, would not mar the town centre so much, but would certainly be a very great inconvenience to the business. Take for instance, a person doing business on Pleasant street who wished to deliver goods across the square on Main street he would be obliged to go down Main street, over the bridge, down Church street to Main; and vice versa.

The plan the writer would suggest is the following:—Build an artistic iron fence on both sides of the railroad track, from the crossing down to, and beyond the station.

Have the gates at the crossing so constructed, that when closed, no foot passenger or team, could pass through.

These gates to be operated upon an overhead track, by an electric motor; many other ways might be suggested.

Have two subways for foot passengers, one at the crossing, the other at the station.

This plan, it seems to the writer, would not destroy the artistic centre of the town; this all citizens should guard against, in the solution of this important question.

First impressions are generally lasting; strangers entering the town would, no doubt, observe that safety and good taste were accomplished in the above mentioned plan.

In the question of protecting life and property, cost should not be considered of first importance, but this suggested plan, would cost much less than any that has been brought forward.

Citizen.

EARLY STORE CLOSING.

In view of the agitation over closing stores evenings, the following view from the other side is interesting:

Says the Parkhurst man: "In my opinion, if you want to kill a town close the stores nights. I know of a town where all the business places are closed at 6 p. m., and the town is dead for at least fifteen hours. Nobody goes there after dark, for they could not get in if they did. I went there a few weeks ago to attend a lodge; the town died at sundown and the solitary policeman bade me walk lightly and not disturb the sleepers. As I was creeping away to get home, I ran into a boy with a gun; I threw up my hands and said, 'I surrender.' 'You gosh durned fule,' said he, 'you scart my rabbit, he was right here by the postoffice and I came clear over from Limestone to shoot a grave-yard rabbit. Their hind feet are worth $10 apiece, boohoo.'—Brockton Enterprise.

First Class Work Done at Reasonable Prices

Home Course In Domestic Science

XII.—Hints on Home Laundering.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

TO many women the laundry is the least interesting part of the home, and often the weekly washing and ironing are the work most dreaded by the entire family. In fact, in many homes they prove to be the one insurmountable task, and because no other solution is found for the problem the washing is sent to the laundry or is done in any way and by any one so long as it is taken out of the house. Why the washing and ironing should prove such unpleasant work as to cause both mistress and maid to rebel against it has always been a mystery to me. I can explain it only by the natural supposition that neither knows how to do it well and that the possibilities for doing the work quickly, easily and thoroughly are few in most houses. We generally find that a properly equipped laundry is among the last things to be added to the house and that in the majority of cases a tub or two, perhaps a washing machine of possible merit and occasionally a wringer comprise the average washing outfit in private homes of moderate means. And, small as that equipment is, it can be made to give very satisfactory results if a little knowledge and intelligence are brought to the task. The trouble is most women do not like to wash because they have not been taught to do it properly and because they make extremely hard work of it. They appreciate to some degree fine fabrics and dainty clothing, but they do not, as a rule, appreciate these to the extent that makes them desirous of preserving materials and colors.

WASHING NOT UNATTRACTIVE.

While it is difficult at any time and in almost any locality to obtain well trained helpers for housework, it is often an easier task to get a good cook or housemaid than it is to find a first class laundress. Because of this it is all the more necessary that the mistress of the house should be familiar with fabrics and how to cleanse them.

The Modern Laundry Equipment.

Whenever possible the laundry should be a separate apartment in even small houses. It may be located in the basement or adjoining the kitchen; but, wherever it is, the room should be well lighted and well ventilated and should have a good floor and hard finished walls. There should be no soft or porous material used in the laundry to absorb moisture. For a small home laundry the following list of furnishings will be found sufficient:

Three or four tubs, stationary if possible, made of soapstone, enamel or porcelain; a good washing machine, clothes wringer, clothes stick, clothes boiler, tin or copper; zinc or glass washboard, clothespins (kept in box or basket), water pail, clothes basket, scrubbing brush, large granite spoon, galvanized iron clothesline, skirt, sleeve and bosom boards for ironing, ironing blanket, mangle and several good irons of different weights. An electric or even a good gasoline iron is such a valuable labor saving device that its first cost should seldom be considered, because it very soon more than repays it. Besides this amount of furnishing a number of common substances for removing stains of various kinds should always be on hand. Among those most frequently needed may be mentioned borax, ammonia, salt, vinegar, alum, naphtha, muriatic and oxalic acid. These should be kept in a closed box and out of the reach of children, as some of them are poisonous. Wax, blueing, starch, French chalk and javelle water are also often needed in the laundry, and if a supply of them is kept on hand time and effort may be saved on washing day. A valuable addition to this equipment would be an electric or water motor with which to run the washing machine, wringer and mangle. With such an addition it is possible for one woman to finish a large washing with comparatively little outlay of strength.

Removing Ordinary Stains.

Washing is the mechanical cleansing of clothes to remove all impurities and dirt. To do this four simple, short rules should be kept in mind—viz:

Get out all the dirt.

Keep all articles a good color.

Use nothing to injure the material either mechanically or chemically.

Have some definite knowledge of different fabrics in order to treat each in the way least likely to injure or change its character.

Unsatisfactory results in laundry work can often be traced to carelessness in preparing the various articles to be washed. Too often articles coarse and fine, white and colored, are put into the suds together without the slightest attention to such preliminary steps in the process as sorting, removing stains, temperature and soapiness of the water. After such indiscriminate preparation what wonder if fine muslins are soon torn or made yellow, if stains are made permanent and the entire washing takes on a dingy hue!

Before any article is sent to the wash it should be examined and all stains carefully removed. This requires care and some knowledge of chemicals and their action on fabrics and stains. All stains cannot be removed by the same substance or in the same way, and yet it is remarkable how many different kinds of stains may be removed by cold water alone. For this reason I recommend that all articles be soaked in cold water for fifteen minutes or longer before being put into the washing suds. The white pieces should, of course, be kept by themselves, and if there is any question about the fastness of any color a little salt and vinegar added to the cold water will help to set it. Alum added to the rinsing water will make the color still more permanent. The following are general directions for removing stains of various kinds:

Tea and Coffee.—Spread the stained part over a bowl and pour boiling water over it from a height.

Chocolate and Cocoa.—Wash first in cold water, then rinse and pour boiling water through it.

Fruit.—Many fruit stains may be softened and dissolved by alcohol. If heated the alcohol will be more effective. For peach stain it may be necessary to use diluted muriatic acid or sulphur fumes. Boiling water will remove fresh stains of small fruits.

Grass.—Alcohol will dissolve the green coloring matter. Washing with naphtha soap and warm water or spreading on a paste made of soap and baking soda will also remove grass stains.

Grease or Oil. Soak first in cold water, then wash with cold water and soap, then dry and if necessary use other agents. Chloroform or ether will remove grease from fabrics which cannot be washed.

Wine.—Put a thick layer of salt over the stain from red wine while fresh, then pour boiling water over it. If a yellow wine wash first with cold water, then with soap and water.

Ink.—If stain is on a white garment put to soak for several days in milk, changing frequently. Red ink poured over the black will remove the black stain. The red may be washed out in cold water and ammonia, then boiled. Equal parts of peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia may remove fresh stains. Oxalic acid will remove old ink stains from white garments. Salt and cold water may be used in fresh stains on delicate colors.

Iron Rust.—If fresh, lemon juice, salt and strong sunlight may remove stain, but generally it is better to use muriatic acid at once. Spread the stain over a bowl containing a fairly strong solution of borax and water or soda and water. Drop muriatic acid on the stain a little at a time until it darkens, then rinse thoroughly in the borax and water.

Mildew.—This is a mold growing on the fiber of the cloth. If fresh it may be removed by wetting in strong soapsuds or covering with a mixture of chalk and salt and bleaching in strong sunlight for several hours. Old mildew stains can rarely be removed without injuring the fabric.

Milk or Cream.—Wash out with cold water and later use soap and cold water.

Paint or Tar.—If fresh and washable use soap and water or rinse in turpentine, then wash. If not washable use gasoline. If dry soften with lard or oil, then treat as for fresh paint.

Perspiration.—Use cold water and soap and put the garment in the sun for several hours. The perspiration under the arms is different from that of the rest of the body and requires diluted muriatic acid to neutralize it.

Sugar or Gum.—Dissolve with warm water if washable, with alcohol if not washable.

Blood.—Soak in cold water, then rub out in fresh tepid water. If very dry soak and wash out or use peroxide of hydrogen or javelle water.

A word of caution is necessary when using acids to remove stains. These should not be used on colored fabrics, and after using on any white article always rinse thoroughly in borax and water or ammonia and water and afterward in clear water. Javelle water is an excellent bleaching agent which will often remove old stains. It is easily made and may be kept indefinitely in glass bottles in a cool, dark place.

Javelle Water.—Dissolve one pound of salsoda in two quarts of boiling water, then add one-fourth of a pound of chloride of lime. Stir with wooden stick until lumps are broken, then let stand several hours to settle. Pour off clear liquid and bottle for use. For bleaching purposes use one-half to one cupful to one pail of water. Always rinse thoroughly in ammonia water. To remove stains brush over with javelle water full strength, then rinse quickly in ammonia water.

Some practical suggestions for washing silks, woolens and laces, starching, etc., will be given in a later article.

FIRST STEP

Toward Creating a Greater Boston District.

The legislative committee on metropolitan affairs Tuesday unanimously reported the bill of Ex-Representative March G. Bennett of Boston for the creation of a metropolitan district council, or rather a metropolitan Boston council, as he calls it, by which it is proposed to have officials of towns and cities in the Greater Boston district co-operate and work for the common interests of the district.

Specifically, the bill provides for a council to consist of the boards of selectmen of towns within the area included within the metropolitan park, sewer and water districts, and such others as may be added later. This body is to serve without pay, and is to meet in Boston city hall the second Wednesday in January of each year, and at such other times as may be determined; is to be called together by the mayor of Boston, and is to elect a president, secretary and any other officers it may wish. It is to consider all legislation affecting the district and may submit reports to the legislature or its committees on such questions as it has considered. Each municipality is entitled to one vote, but upon proposed legislation, only those municipalities having a financial interest shall have a right to vote. It may call upon the metropolitan park, sewer or water boards to appear and furnish information, and it may spend $1000 each year, which sum shall be paid by the state, but later included in the assessment upon each municipality for metropolitan park, water and sewer maintenance. To allay the fears of the opponents of a "Greater Boston," as it has come to mean a single municipality, Mr. Bennett explains that his bill does not provide for annexation or for interference with local government, but merely for intelligent co-operation for the benefit of the whole district. In other words, the proposed council is to form simply a clearing house where communal affairs can be examined, compared, improved and brought into wholesome touch with one another.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Of all the sensational features which have been presented at Keith's during this season, probably there has been not one that will create more talk than LeCompte, who comes next week. He seems to be, and is, impervious to fire and heat. Le Compte takes two carbons at a white heat and bites off the ends of them with his teeth. He explodes Gunpowder with his bare hands, and chews heated sealing wax, and drinks molten metal, lead and solder, like water. He does all these things in full view of the audience. LeCompte himself refuses to explain, if he can, how he does these marvelous feats.

He will be a feature of an exceptionally strong bill, which will include "The Vital Question," a sketch that has an important bearing on the trust question and politics, similar to "The Man of the Hour;" Countess Rossi and Monsieur Paulo, in their singing sketch entitled, "During the Performance;" Cunningham and Marion in an acrobatic comedy the Three Leightons in a sketch called "A One Night Stand in Minstrelsy;" Charles Lovenberg's "Petite Revue;" one of the most ambitious song productions ever staged, employing a dozen people; and other big features yet to be announced.

BOSTON THEATRE.

With the biggest cast of stars that has ever been seen in one production, the latest Ziegfeld Revue, "Follies of 1909" will play an engagement here for one week only beginning Monday night, April 18. Miss Eva Tanguay, the highest salaried comedienne in this country, heads the list and is said to have the best songs of her career, which includes her famous "I Don't Care," specialty. Other prominent artists are Bessie Clayton, who is one of America's best dancers; Arthur Deagon, the robust singing comedian, Billie Reeves, the original inebriated swell; Josephine Whittele, who has another new creation, the "Beautiful Brinkley Bathing Girl," in which she is assisted by the famous Ziegfeld Beauty Girls; Rosie Green, another dancer of exceptional ability; Wm. Schrode and Evelyn Carleton; William Bonelli, Helen McMahon, Vera Maxwell, Gertie Moyer and Will Philbrick whose travesty on the Roosevelt Hunting Expedition in the African Jungles is said to be one of the funniest skits in the show.

I manufacture all kinds of good mattresses and sell them at retail. I find that among the best sellers, or those that are the most in demand are, first, my combination mattress, made of African and Poplar Fibres, with a good thick layer of clean cotton on the top and bottom, made up in the celebrated Webster ticking in two parts, and sold for

This mattress is made to sleep on and for wear, as well, and is the best mattress that can be made for the price.

Another mattress that is fast growing in favor is one that I make of Silk Floss, the same kind that is used in sofa pillows. Silk floss is a non-absorbent vegetable fibre which grows near the equator. It never gets lumpy, and is extremely light and fleecy. The strong points of a Silk Floss Mattress are its lightness and softness, great qualifications for a mattress.

The Price is $12.00

I use the best hair ticking on this mattress, and if you have one in your guest chamber, you need not hesitate to ask your guests in the morning if they rested well.

A mattress that has always proved satisfactory in every way, and has added more to my reputation for making first class mattresses than any other, is the mattress that I make of pure South American horse hair. This hair is taken from the manes and tails of live horses, and is thoroughly cleansed and purified, rendering it absolutely clean and wholesome. It does not absorb moisture, and will last a lifetime. It has great resilient qualities, and for sound sleep has no equal.

Made in best ticking, two parts, 5 inch box, and full weight.

IN BUYING GROCERIES

the careful housekeeper makes every cent count.

But she can't make the pennies count by trading at every store in town, spending half her time looking for the cent cheaper article.

She can save money only by searching out a reliable grocer and sticking to him.

The money is saved by trading with the groceryman who sells dependable goods.

Dependable goods are not to be obtained in every store.

Goodness and cheapness appeal to every condition of humanity.

There are no fancy prices here, and everybody is treated alike.

Our goods are cheap because they're good — it's not the price that makes them cheap.

Goods that are bought so cheaply that they have to be thrown away on account of poor quality are the most dearly bought goods.

Better pay a fair price in the first place and get the dependable kinds. You can't buy any other kinds here. We don't keep them.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. PURINGTON.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Purington Celebrate Silver Wedding.

About 100 persons called at the Purington homestead on Cambridge street last Saturday evening to offer their congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. George W. Purington, who on that evening reached the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Friends from Winchester, Somerville, Boston, Lynn, Woburn, Malden, Everett, Arlington, Medford and New Hampshire were present. The house was profusely decorated with pinks, sweet peas and palms for the occasion, and an orchestra of three pieces was in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Purington received their guests informally, being assisted by their four children, Mrs. W. H. Edwards of Lynn, Mrs. A. G. Keger, Miss Clara Purington and Mr. George Purington, Jr., together with Mrs. Purington's sisters, Mrs. S. W. Hoover of Woburn and Mrs. D. A. Thorne of Portland, Me.

During the evening refreshments were served by a caterer, and a most enjoyable occasion was spent by all.

They came to this town to make their home, living for the past twenty five years on Cambridge street, the first year and a half being in the same house in which they now reside. They have six children and three grandchildren. Mr. Purington is a member of the firm of J. Purington and Sons, market gardners, and of the firm of Purington and Brigham, commission merchants, of Boston. He is a member of the Calumet Club and the Middlesex Sportsman's Association, and is an Odd Fellow, affiliated with Bethel Lodge of Arlington.

Many handsome gifts of silver, cut glass and china were received by the couple, including a handsome buffet, the gift of Mr. Purington's Boston business associates.

METROPOLITAN FISHING AND HOW IT IS GOVERNED.

The State Board of Health and the Metropolitan Water and Sewer Board have issued this season a booklet containing rules and regulations governing fishing in the Reservoirs, lakes, ponds and streams embraced in the great metropolitan water supply. According to this authority, fishing from the shores or from boats and through the ice is allowed without special written permits in Framingham reservoir No. 1, Farm Pond, Whitehall reservoir, the Sudbury river above Framingham reservoir No. 2, Dudley pond, the Washacum ponds, and the Quinepoxet and Stillwater rivers and the ponds and streams tributary thereto. Restricted written permits are issued to fish from the shores and through the ice, but not from the dams, of the Ashland and Hopkinton reservoirs. Fishing by written permits is allowed from the highways bounding Framingham reservoir No. 2, also to riparian owners to fish from the shores. In the Sudbury reservoirs the inhabitants of Marlborough, Southborough and the whole metropolitan water district are granted fishing permits to fish from the highways, shores and through the ice at seven specially designated places. At lake Cochituate, fishing permits are granted to fish from the highways in all parts of the lake except from the northerly section and the bridge and highway between the northerly and southerly sections. The whole extent of the great Wachusett reservoir, many miles in extent is open to shore fishing by written permits, but fishing is not allowed from the dams or dykes. Fishing through the ice is allowed on the larger part of the reservoir. Lake Wachusett promises to be a great fishing place for the whole metropolitan water district and the inhabitants of Boylston, Sterling, West Boylston and Clinton are also included as participants in well regulated fishing privileges in the lake. Winchester not being included in the metropolitan water district and having a water system and large reservoirs of its own, stocked with fish, Winchester fishermen are not granted metropolitan fishing privileges as are our neighbors in Stoneham, Medford, Arlington and many other places, situated in the metropolitan water district. In addition to fishing and boating, ice cutting is allowed in many places in the great metropolitan reservoirs, lakes and ponds to inhabitants of the district but not to citizens of the state at large.

The booklet containing the above information has been received by Arthur E. Whitney, Massachusetts Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner, and may be consulted at the town library by all interested. Fishing in the metropolitan water supply is regulated under the same law as regulates fishing in the Winchester reservoirs, but in Winchester fishing is regulated out of existence by the water board as no one cares to promote contention with that board for the sake of fishing by appealing to the State Board of Health for a fishing permit. The State Board of Health is the final authority in granting fishing permits and the metropolitan water board consult with and work in harmony with the board of health in making rules and regulations governing metropolitan fishing. It is much to the credit of Winchester fishermen that they have preferred to suffer in silence and submit to the extreme views of the Winchester water board prohibiting any and all kinds of fishing rather than to appeal to the state board of health which has granted so many restricted permits to fish in water supply reservoirs under strict regulations in all parts of the state. The Winchester board of health and the state board do not seem to agree regarding the harmfulness of well regulated fishing any more than the Winchester water board and the Metropolitan Water Board agree on the same subject. One fact that seems to have been settled by the issuing of permits to fish in the metropolitan reservoirs that from lessons the Winchester board of health and the Winchester water board very much is the fact that water supply reservoirs situated partly in different municipalities can be protected from illegal fishing and illegal contamination by state law notwithstanding the selfish claims of towns within whose territory the reservoirs are situated.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The school committee will hold its regular meeting tonight and will then decide whether the High school will commence at 8 or 8.30. In view of the fact that 90 per cent of the pupils voted in favor of the change, it is probable that the school committee will decide to commence the morning session at 8 o'clock, beginning next week. Let us hope so.

The base ball team will play its next game tomorrow with the Tech Sophomores and on Thursday next will have Lynn English H. S. as opponents. The material is there but the team undoubtedly needs practice and coaching, the tendency to make errors at critical points must be overcome. The team played well in the Reading game but could not hit at the right time. With good stiff practice they should capture the next two games.

Rev. John R. Chaffee gave a short address to the school on Monday last on lessons to be drawn from the battle of Lexington and Concord.

The crew has been practicing daily under the careful eye of Capt. Hanson and Mr. George B. Smith. The prospects for a winning team [illegible] with four veterans and some good material [illegible] it seems [illegible] should come to Winchester this year [illegible].

The H. [illegible] always [illegible] Michael M. [illegible] wishes him success in his [illegible] Town Hall.

MAY PARTY.

The May Party [illegible] the auspices of the Ladies' Friendly Society will be held in the Town Hall Saturday, May 7th, at 2.30 p. m. There will be a Grand March, May Pole dance, and general dancing.

Special amusements for the little children.

GEORGE P. BROWN.

George Porter Brown [illegible] Bridgewater, Mass., [illegible]. His maternal great grandfather was Bartholomew Brown of Bridgewater and president of the Handel and Haydn Society, and noted in his day in musical circles. His maternal great grandfather John Porter of Sterling, Mass., was an officer in the Revolutionary War, having served on the staff of General Lafayette. His mother and father were friends of Daniel Webster and Mr. Brown has had for many years an autograph picture, which was presented to his mother by the great statesman.

When Mr. Brown was about twelve years of age his father moved with his family to Groton, Mass., when George, with his brother and sisters attended Lawrence Academy, in its day a noted preparatory school, comparable at the time with Philips Exeter and Andover.

At the age of seventeen young Brown finished his course at the academy and wishing to go into commercial life apprenticed himself to Mr. Henderson a then well known Boston grocer who did a large business in the vicinity of Beacon Hill.

The opportunity, however, did not seem to be exactly what he wished, and about two years thereafter he returned to Groton to assist his father temporarily in the publication of his newspaper, which was the local sheet for that vicinity. Mr. Brown wished however to be in business for himself, and the study of drugs being particularly attractive to him, about 1858 he started in this business at Groton Junction, now Ayer, Mass.

DR. GEORGE P. BROWN.

Desiring to transfer his business to a place of greater oportunity he inspected stores at various places from Portland to Springfield, and finally settled upon Winchester as a beautiful town, and one sure to grow in quality as well as quantity. In 1864 he moved with his wife and child to Winchester and since that time has lived continually within its borders. He early took a prominent part in affairs of the town and filled, at various times, a number of different offices, the most important of which, being town clerk and a member of the Cemetery Committee, in which latter work he took a most active interest, and was a member of this board at the time of his death.

In 1867 he became postmaster of Winchester, and served in that capacity until December 1885, when, due to change in administration he was succeeded by a Democrat.

Soon after its incorporation he became a trustee of the Winchester Savings Bank serving as such continuously up to his decease.

Mr. Brown, as soon as he moved to Winchester took an active interest in masonry, and was one of the first candidates raised in Wm. Parkman Lodge after it was instituted by the late A. K. P. Joy, and his contemporaries, and while he never held office in the Lodge, up to the time of his last illness was a regular attendant and took a keen interest in its affairs.

Soon thereafter, he, with other friends, was exalted in Mystic Royal Arch Chapter of Medford, and they desiring a more convenient place of meeting, formed a Royal Arch Chapter at Woburn, of which Mr. Brown was a charter member. Later he was admitted into Medford Council of Royal and Select Masters, and in May 1867 was knighted in Boston Commandery of Knights Templars, and at his death was one of its oldest members.

In 1880 Mr. Brown suffered from a long and severe illness and in 1882 by the advice of his physician sold out his business and since that time has held no regular occupation.

In religion Mr. Brown was a Unitarian, he having come of Unitarian stock from generations of that denomination. He and Mrs. Brown were of those who first met in the parlors of the late Frederic Winsor, for the purpose of worship in the Unitarian Faith, and later he was an incorporator of the Winchester Unitarian Society and at his death Mr. Brown, and one other, were the only surviving incorporators of that society.

In politics Mr. Brown was a staunch Republican believing in its leaders and principles. Up to about a year ago he was in exceptionally good health but at that time a slight indisposition occurred which it was hoped time would remedy. The decease however gained ground and in January 1910 it was found that his only chance for recovery was by means of a serious operation.

This he undertook with great fortitude believing in his ultimate return to health. A malignant condition however was found and although the operation itself was perfectly successful the disease progressed until he passed away peacefully on the 17th inst.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown had five children only one of whom, Harry W. Brown of this town survives.

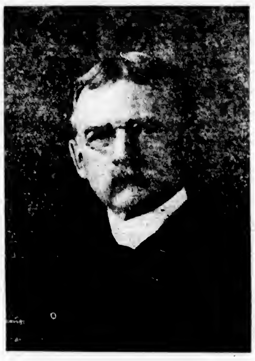
He leaves also a grandson Leland P. Johnson of Steelton, Pa., son of his daughter Grace, who before her marriage was well known in Winchester.

Mr. Brown is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. John H. Turner and Mrs. Samuel Farnsworth both of Ayer, Mass.

Funeral services were held at the Unitarian Church, Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock and were conducted by William Parkman Lodge of Masons. The interment was in Wildwood cemetery.

The bearers were Geo. F. Parker, representing Boston Commandery, K. T.; Nathan Shattuck, William Parkman Lodge; Henry J. Winde, Cemetery Commissioners; Preston R. Mansfield of Dedham and Arthur W. Rice of Stoneham.

The ushers were James H. Dwinell, C. A. Gleason, E. L. Homer and Fred Joy.



SAMUEL J. ELDER, ESQ

HONORS FOR MR. ELDER.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Doubtless many of the citizens of Winchester are unaware of the full measure of the distinguished tribute paid to our fellow townsman, Mr. Samuel J. Elder, through his appointment by the United States Government as one of the counsel to argue the North Atlantic Coast Fisheries case before the Court of Arbitration provided for by the Hague Peace Conference.

As the statement of the United States case is understood to fill five volumes of nearly twenty-five hundred pages, the merest outline of the facts and merits of the question would occupy columns of the STAR, it is, therefore, enough to say that this fisheries problem has existed ever since the close of the Revolutionary War in 1783, and for a good deal of the time since 1818 has been more or less acute. It has been the subject of several treaties, of numerous temporary arrangements and of a vast amount of diplomatic correspondence and negotiation. Some of the foremost men in the country have been engaged in its attempted solution, including James Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, William H. Seward, Hamilton Fish, William M. Evarts, James G. Blaine, Thomas F. Bayard, Elihu Root and many others. England has been represented by equally prominent statesmen. Diplomacy failed, and now arbitration is sought.

It is interesting and instructive to note that England and the United States have been the leading countries of the world in settling differences by arbitration; and it is safe to assert that the present case for many reasons, is one of the three or four most important ones that they have thus referred to arbiters, and certainly the most serious ones since the Alabama question of nearly forty years ago. The decision to be rendered in the fisheries case will be final, and will definitely settle the complicated long-standing controversy of a century or more. Under the circumstances one can readily understand that our Government would select from among the best legal talent in the country the ablest counsel to argue the case before the Hague Court. Winchester may well feel proud that one of her citizens is to share in representing the United States in so momentous a cause.

MISS FAY CORD
May 3rd

The Orchestral Society is fortunate in having obtained the services of Miss Cord for the Spring Concert and interest in the affair has been considerably increased since the announcement last week that she would participate. Miss Cord is well and favorably known to many people in Winchester and her presence alone will doubtless attract a large audience.

Seats for the concert are selling rapidly and many people who like to put things off to the last minute will find their favorite seats have been secured by some one else. He had not resided in Winchester for the past six months.

The funeral services were held at Everett on Thursday, the burial being at Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

COLLIDED WITH ELECTRIC.

Auto Badly Smashed—Man Injured.

On Tuesday afternoon a touring car collided with an electric car on Washington street near Oak street, throwing the three occupants out and badly wrecking the car. According to the driver of the auto, John Doucette of Stoneham, as he was passing the car the machine suddenly shot into the rear end of it in some unaccountable manner. The car was going towards the centre and the auto passing in the opposite direction, it striking the rear of the car. The force of the collision threw the auto completely around, it striking on a rear wheel, which collapsed.

In the auto were the driver and two passengers. Mr. George E. Kenson of Stoneham and Mr. W. H. Brittan of Winthrop. The car was owned by the Medford Garage Co., and was an old style Reo. Examination of the car after the accident revealed an old break of one of the front springs. The opposite spring evidently gave way when passing the car, causing the steering gear to break.

All of the occupants were thrown out, and Mr. Brittan received a broken collar bone and numerous bruises. The others were only slightly bruised. The auto was being demonstrated to the injured man, who contemplated buying it.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

A little five year old Winchester youngster, hearing his daddy say that a certain man was unable to "keep the wolf from his door," wanted to know why the man did not shoot it.

The Winchesterite who has no time for private improvement is not a safe guide for public improvements.

A prominent Winchesterite is of the opinion that it is not too early to call attention to the fact that a bald head is a fly's paradise.

The Spectator is glad to note that an increasing number of people appreciate the necessity of placing mail boxes on the outside of their houses. According to a recent report of the House Committee on post offices and post roads the average postman spends between 15 and 30 seconds at each house ringing the doorbell and waiting for a response. Only the other day The Spectator saw a carrier wait at a certain house here in Winchester four minutes before he got any response to his ring at the doorbell.

No good Winchesterite has any objection to any scheme for the beautification of the town. Winchester is a "town beautiful" already but there are still a great many possibilities open in this direction and they should be emphatically contended for by all good citizens.

Every tidy housewife in Winchester has at least two general "house-cleanings" each year, when carpets are taken up and scoured, floors scrubbed, windows washed, walls dusted, painted woodwork renovated and the house put in spick span condition of cleanliness from top to bottom. This custom is one of very great utility not only from an esthetic but also from a sanitary point of view, but it does not accomplish all that is essential at this time of the year to the end of promoting the health of the community and improving the appearance of Winchester. This object required something more comprehensive than the regulation "house-cleaning" and calls for a general purification of cellars and yards. Disease will be prevented and the fly pestilence diminished if every Winchesterite will at once turn in and cleanse his premises, purifying every nook and cranny indoors and out with soap and water and disinfectants. But to make this work effective as to sanitation it must be not only universal but it must also be thorough. It will not be sufficient to merely remove the dirt and the accumulations of rubbish that "show," but the hidden cubby-holes must also be cleared out and purified and every vestige of useless trumpery destroyed or delivered over to the town garbage collector. And now is the time to do this wholesome work, before the disease germs become active and the insect pests begin to hatch out under the stimulating influence of a heated atmosphere. Therefore let everybody clean up, do the work thoroughly and do it now.

A teacher in one of our Winchester Sunday schools had grown eloquent in picturing to her little pupils the beauties of Heaven, and she finally asked: "What kind of little boys go to Heaven?" A lively little four-year-old, with kicking boots, flourished his fist. "Well, you may answer," said the teacher. "Dead ones," the little fellow shouted at the extent of his lungs.

It has been said that men talk to conceal their thoughts. Do not believe it. Some men here in Winchester who talk most have the fewest thoughts to conceal.

"Be a good little girl," said a small miss of The Spectator's acquaintance to her younger sister; "you must not ask for a second piece of cake. It isn't good for little girls." "Besides," she added, "I want it myself."

The Winchesterite who is anxious for something to turn up can be accommodated by putting a glass of water under a [illegible].

A Pleasant street gentleman muses that a man cannot expect to find sunshine in the face of the Winchester madame who habitually carries a parasol.

Sunday afternoon in a field near the outskirts of the town a crowd of boys engaged in a game of base ball, so The Spectator is informed by an indignant citizen. The citizen would have done better to have notified Chief McIntosh instead of The Spectator.

SUCCESSFUL ROLL CALL.

The 11th annual roll call of the First Baptist Church was held last Thursday evening and was by far the most successful that the church has ever held. The roll was called by George A. Weld, clerk of the church, and as each one answered he or she quoted a verse of Scripture beginning with the initial of the person's given name. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presence of Rev. Joseph F. Fielden of Winchendon, a former pastor of the society, whose coming was unexpected. Mr. Fielden conducted the devotional exercises. Mrs. Granville B. Lentest contributed two soprano solos, "Show Me Thy Ways, O Lord," and "Jerusalem," by Parker. Miss Helen S. Palmer presided at the organ. The address of the evening was by Rev. James E. Norcross, New England secretary of the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, who gave a very practical talk on the duties of a Christian. After the exercises in the auditorium the gathering adjourned to the chapel, where refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the roll call consisted of Mrs. Williard A. Bradley, chairman; Mrs. Mott A. Cummings, Mrs. Arnold Whittaker, Mrs. West D. Eldridge, Miss Helen M. Palmer, Miss Bertha Waldmyer, Miss Elizabeth Winn and Miss Lucy Spaulding.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

BASE BALL.

Winchester 11 Roxbury Latin 8.

Winchester won its first base ball game last Friday with Roxbury Latin by the score of 11-8. Roxbury made ten hits to Winchester's 7, but hitting at the right time coupled with their opponents' errors gave Winchester the game. Goddu pitched the first seven innings and gave promise of making a reliable pitcher for next year, but he weakened toward the latter part of the game and Tuck finished in the box. Neither Winchester man gave a base on balls and but three assists were made in retiring Roxbury for full nine innings only four men being put out at first base. This is rather a remarkable fact and shows that the pitchers had Roxbury guessing on hitting the ball. Flaherty drove out two triples but otherwise the game was featureless.

Reading 6 Winchester 2.

Last Tuesday morning Winchester again suffered defeat by the score of 6 2. The game, although close was rather uninteresting and a Michelinis home run in the ninth with two men on bases, was the only feature of the game. In the fourth inning Winchester lost its best chance to win the game. With one out Flaherty doubled and Tuck, Mathews and Grant were all three passed by Fairbanks thus forcing in a run. Goddu lifted a high fly to right field and with any sort of base running, Winchester should have scored, but Mathews, thinking that there were two out started from second base and was easily caught on a double play. Abbot-Stratton to Temple. Winchester's only other score was in the ninth inning when Flaherty again doubled, was advanced by Mathews out and scored on an error of the short-stop. Winchester played a good fielding game but three hits was all they could get off Fairbanks and no team could win with this.

SUFFRAGE NOTES.

The anomaly of the position occupied by women in this so called democratic government is well illustrated by the following incident, given in a recent issue of "The Woman's Journal." Miss Jean Gordon, factory inspector of New Orleans, was one day discussing the assimilation of the immigrant, and related a conversation between a teacher in the public schools of New Orleans and an Italian.

The teacher was asking for a vaccination certificate and the Italian could not be made to undertsand. She asked him if he could read. He answered that he could; his American wife had taught him to read and speak English. "Do you vote?" He was asked. "Yes, every time I get a chance," he answered. "Does your wife vote?" was the next question. "No, she is a woman—she hasn't sense to vote," was the peculiar reply! Now this is the condition of our country. The Corporations bring in these immigrants in immense numbers, who can vote and help make laws under which American women have to live!

LADIES' NIGHT.

Ladies' night was observed at the Calumet Club on Tuesday evening, a large number of guests being present and enjoying an informal evening of bowling, games and dancing. This evening marked the first of the weekly ladies' nights which are to be held during the coming winter, when the house is to be opened informally, and tournaments in bowling, pool and other games enjoyed.

On Tuesday evening three tournaments were held, a ladies' bowling tournament, mixed bowling tournament and a bean bag tournament. The winner in the first event was Mrs. George E. Willey, who rolled a string of 93. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Miner won the Mixed tournament with a string of 91, and Mrs. Blank took the bean bag prize with a score of 150. A donkey party also furnished much entertainment, being won by Mr. Carlton.

FOLEY FOOLED THEM.

Barred from Race Because of Age, Shaved Off His Whiskers.

"Youth will prevail," is an old saying. Age prevailed Tuesday in the Marathon run of the B. A. A. On Sunday Peter Foley of Oak street, this town 52 years of age, received a very polite note, but it was easy to read between the lines. Peter was considered too old, and exertions, such as is called for in a Marathon race, was thought too much for him.

Foley had been a contestant in the last seven or eight Marathons and had always finished. He had his heart set on entering the race of this year and determined to be among the starters any way, order or no order.

So Peter shaved off his gray whiskers and in the hustle and bustle at the start escaped notice. He appeared to be one of the boys, and when the big bunch was sent away Peter was one of them.

What is more, he finished. It is true that he was not very well up, but he finished, and that is all that Peter Foley intends to do any year.

NEW PLAYGROUND.

Winchester, through the efforts of The Fortnightly Club, is to have greatly increased facilities for recreation. Manchester field will be fitted with athletic apparatus and tennis courts, and a supervisor secured to direct the work, so that the greatest advantage will be received from the expenditure.

The public playground is already one of the best in the vicinity of Boston. A large field near the centre of the town is provided with well laid out base ball and foot ball fields and encircled by a running track. A bandstand, bleachers, a canoe landing and sand boxes have also been built.

The field is to be fitted with two tennis courts, a basket ball ground, swings, bars, and other athletic apparatus at a cost of about $900. A graduate of the Springfield Training School will be secured to act as physical director. A young lady will also be secured to care for the younger children. If the town secures the purification of the stream, as it is now trying hard to do, a wading beach and swimming pool will be built.

The work will be started in the near future and the grounds put into use by June 1.—Christian Science Monitor.

GRADE CROSSING.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

THE GRADE CROSSING.—A PARABLE.

And it came to pass that a certain rich man, having been the cause of taking the lives of many innocent people, in an unguarded moment and while temporarily filled with remorse, bid his neighbors to partake of a feast. The guests were each invited to make their choice of food from an attractive menu.

Some selected the toothsome fillet; some chose the festive bird of which they were wont to regale themselves in times of Thanksgiving; others, believing all meat to be unclean said: "We will have none of it, but serve to us the gamey salmon from the Penobscot."

The rich man, thereat becoming much exultant, exclaimed: "Verily, I am sorely perplexed with your bickerings and diverse tastes. This is no Lucullan affair. Howbeit, I had expected the plebian sandwich and coffee would suffice, but you crave many choice viands with Burgundy. Moreover, you would expend too much of my treasure, thus bringing to me nothing but sorrow, for my children will have great needs for my coin.

"Have I not erred in asking you to eat, drink and be merry? Will it not be all sufficient if we nourish ourselves with that which was left from the morning meal?" So in Winchester, what at one time appeared to augur well for the abolition of our grade crossing, bids fair to result in nothing but a talk test, or, at most, a warmed up meal of husks.

Anent the eleventh hour or third suggestion (improved gates), contained in our esteemed committee's report, we can readily believe there will be unison of thought, and can hear the chorus shout of approval, on the part of all the tight wads, pessimists and advocates of the do-nothing policy, who have steadily been adding to their ranks while so many good people have been very busy in arrogating to themselves a duty clearly imposed by statute upon other tribunals. Another instance of "confusion worse confounded." Meanwhile, to prolong the official lives and compensation of an inefficient commission, thus postponing the abolition of the crossing, cannot some worthy individual trot out a new plan?

W. F. Prime.

TOWN WILL GET WHAT IT WANTS IF IT INSISTS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The communication from the Town's Grade Crossing Committee published in your last issue is certainly significant in several important particulars.

First, it indicates that this vexed problem is not impossible of solution, and that the solution is not necessarily so remote as might be inferred from the long delayed report of the Special Commission.

Second, it gives the town choice of two methods for abolishing the present dangerous condition, with a further suggestion, (which should not be taken seriously) of a fence with underpass footways which may be carried out at no expense to the town.

Third, it indicates that the railroad authorities agree with the enlightened opinion of the town that the bridge at the site of the present crossing is the only proper solution. It is impossible to draw any other conclusion than this when the railroad stands ready to assume $65,000 additional expense for carrying out this plan beyond what it would be required to pay in case the other plan were adopted. (See report of Committee).

Since an early stage in the protracted discussion, which I trust is now drawing to a close, there has been no secret in regard to the fact that all the parties to the controversy have agreed that the centre-bridge plan was the only right solution. I make this statement deliberately and advisedly. The only reason why any other plan has been seriously considered has been the question of cost. Those who were in a position to know have been aware all along that the railroad knew and admitted that this plan was the best.

They have known also that a majority of the Special Commission favored it. They have known that the "enlightened opinion" of the town favored it. There has been a small minority in the town, it is true, which has honestly believed that some other plan would be better—regardless of cost; but this minority has never taken the trouble to study carefully all the bearings of the case.

Now the railroad has signified its willingness to accept this plan and bear its share of the cost, if the whole can be done for $300,000. This is a most important step forward. The town should "get together" and see that nothing stands in the way of meeting the railroad fairly on this latest proposition. It is now solely a question of making equitable terms with property owners in the centre, and such terms surely ought to be possible in view of the fact that the estimates of cost, which were admitted by all parties to be liberal, showed that $20,000 would more than pay for land-takings, construction, raising all the buildings and refitting them, and leave a good margin besides for interference with business during construction. If, in the face of an improved instead of damaged condition of all the property directly affected the remaining $15,000 will not be enough to pay the property owners what they ask there is manifestly something wrong somewhere.

Once already the owners of the most important properties involved have agreed to accept terms which should still be acceptable, not only to them but to all others, and which should make it practicable for the town to conclude a bargain with the railroad.

With this encouraging prospect before us there is but one question in regard to the centre-bridge plan offered by the committee upon which I wish to take issue, and it is that of an overhead truss bridge, instead of a deck bridge with a row of supporting piers between the railroad tracks.

The committee states that "the Boston and Maine Railroad say they should object to this type of bridge" (with piers) and "should ask that the bridge, whether built at the centre or at the station, should be carried by overhead trusses similar to those which may be seen at Wedgemere and at other bridges along the line of the road," etc.

Now, of all outrageous abominations in the line of disfigurement this is the worst. The suggestion should not be tolerated for a moment. Imagine the Wedgemere bridge brought up to the centre. It immediately makes impossible any dignified or respectable treatment of the neighborhood. It is a hideous obstruction, impossible to cover up or to harmonize with the surroundings.

It was because of my fear that just such an outrage as this would be perpetrated upon the Town that I first took up the study of this problem; and it is now only to protest as vigorously as I am able that I again allow myself to be drawn into the matter.

If I were not convinced that the offer of the railroad, now brought forward by the committee is made in good faith, and with due appreciation for the welfare of the town I should be inclined to characterize this suggestion as a gratuitous insult to the intelligence and good taste of Winchester. It is, however, merely another of the innumerable efforts of the railroad to secure favorable terms; which will be carried through if the townspeople do not oppose it. If it is strenuously opposed the railroad will yield.

Between Winchester and Boston there are two bridges with rows of piers between the tracks, one near Winter Hill and the other at East Cambridge. There are quantities of others scattered throughout the Boston and Maine system. What is done in these cases should be done in Winchester. Incidentally it should be observed that the committee is most discreet in its language referring to this matter. It says that the railroad "should object" and that it "asks." The railroad will grant the Town what it wants if the town knows what it wants and will only say so and stick to it.

Yours very truly,
Irving T. Guild.

Not at Your Expense—But Mine

W. R. FOX, President,
Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of — compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

For One Year, the Winchester Star, $2.00, in advance.

A Man on trial for murder in New York repudiates his written confession as a statement wrung from him by abuse continued until he was willing to do anything for relief. It is unquestionably a fact that in some cases the police "third degree" is carried beyond all degrees of justice, and it is high time a stop was put to it.

Representative Fay of this district opposed direct nomination for State Senators and Representatives during the debate in the House last Friday. He believed the direct nomination system would lead to multiplicity of candidates, and increased expense to candidates. Probably the true reason for Mr. Fay's hostility to this measure is because he does not believe the voters are competent to make wise selections for these offices, or indeed any others.

The Brighton abattoir, is threatened with extinction. Its danger is twofold. First, there is pending in the legislature a bill for the taking of its territory for a further extension of the metropolitan park system. Second, Mayor Fitzgerald has said that the place is a menace to public health and has announced his determination to bring about the removal of the establishment to some other place. This will afford a good opportunity for Woburn to install a second slaughter house at the Stoneham—Winchester—Woburn line, and secure additional taxes regardless of public health, convenience and land values.

Gates Not Adequate Protection.

The STAR does not believe that gates at the centre will prove to be a permanently satisfactory settlement of the grade crossing question. At best the scheme can only be temporary, while the danger to life will be almost as great as at present. The only satisfactory and permanent method will be by a complete separation of the steam road from the public highways, and this can be done at less expense today than ten or twenty years hence. President Tuttle does not believe in iron gates, and he looks upon them in the nature of traps. He claims that the gates now in use are the best and least dangerous type of gates, yet he is willing, if the town so desires, to expend $20,000 in iron gates that will prevent access to the tracks when they are closed. To secure what President Tuttle is willing to give free of cost to the town, will no doubt, exact an agreement from Winchester that it will not for many years to come ask for any further changes in the grade crossing. As Winchester is extremely desirous of eliminating this constant and great menace to life, and is willing to spend considerable money to that end, the only thing to do is have it done right and for all time.

TOOK FOUR FROM LEADERS.

The Intermediates, in one of the best played games in the Junior League this year at Woburn took four points from the leaders and perhaps spoiled their chances in what they were so sure of, first prize.

Several weeks ago this team was recognized as probable champions of the state. But from the exhibition they put up against the Int's, shows that they have nothing on these lads from Winchester. As for an all-round bowling team this quintet is without an equal.

Tonight's game with the Incognitos winds up the schedule. As both teams are going some at present, a classy game is looked for. The Incog's, are tied for third honors and will finish a few points ahead of the Int's, win or lose.

The Incog's have as yet to take a game from the Int's who are now going at their best.

This lad Newell Purrington is some bowler as was seen in last week's contest. When Central's tally's looked dangerous, Newell came to the rescue with a rattling strike or spare which encouraged his team mates and they returning the favor turned what seemed like defeat into a well earned victory. Watch the Intermediates next year.

TOWNE—COBURN.

On Wednesday night, at the home of the bride's parent's, Miss Lillian Cameron Towne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleon G. Towne, and Mr. Ralph Coburn of Boston were quietly united in marriage by Rev. D. Augustine Newton in the presence of about 75 relatives and intimate friends.

The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock, the residence being handsomely decorated for the event, the young couple standing in front of a pier mirror beneath a canopy of roses and green.

Mr. Cimon Coburn of Boston was best man, and Mrs. Herbert W. Briggs, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bride wore a dress of white satin and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was gowned in white with lace embroidery, and carried pink roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held, the bride and groom being assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Towne and Mr. and Mrs. Coburn. The ushers were Messrs. Ralph Coburn and Frederick Carlton.

Many handsome presents of cut glass, silver, pictures, china, etc., were received by the couple from their numerous friends. They will make their future home in Brookline.

MRS. BRIDGET O'LEARY.

Mrs Bridget O'Leary, wife of Dennis O'Leary, died early Sunday morning at her home, 15 Cedar street, after a lingering illness.

She was 68 years old and is survived by her husband, two sons and a daughter.

High Mass was sung at St. Mary's Church, Tuesday morning Rev. Walter J. Roche, officiating. The pall bearers were M. McCarthy of Woburn, Jeremiah Sullivan, John Lynch, John Connell, Richard Connell, F. Tastach.

Interment was in Calvary Cemetery.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The only one of the plans submitted by the special grade crossing committee that should receive serious consideration by the town is plan two. Plan one will never receive any support for the reasons obvious to every one. Plan three is nothing but a bid for delay and would be pusilanimous to accept it. Plan two is a better offer than I thought could be got from the railroad, railway and Commonwealth and appears to be a pretty good proposition for the town, but of course we must have closer figures before we vote upon it, and if it will be necessary to get legislative authority to pay more than the statutory ten per cent. we will have plenty of time to consider it, as nothing could be done at the present session of the General Court.

Probably our Commoner will want the town to wait until a law is passed relieving the cities and towns of any part of the cost in the abolition of grade crossings, but he knows very well that the House was only jollying the dear people, knowing full well that the Senate will kill the bill. The reason the law provides that the other parties in interest besides the railroads shall pay a part of the cost is so that they may have more to say than they would have if they paid nothing. Mr. Fay is a good representative and voted accordingly, as he always does.

I saw that the Selectmen's notes last week said that the Board had approved the town engineers plans for Washington street retaining up to Swanton street. I trust that does not mean that the work is to be carried only to that point and no further. It was distinctly understood that that street was to be rebuilt to Forest street and it certainly needs it.

While the town as a whole looks well, considerable improvement might be made if some observant member of the Selectmen would ride over town and make memorandum of small things that need attention and which will not be reported otherwise. They would cost little to do and in the aggregate would count much toward the general improvement. These things are never reported by any of the department heads as they are looking after larger things. A number of street signs have been broken for months and it looks very shabby to let them remain so month after month. Several of the posts are also defaced, some right in the centre. Look at the one corner of Pleasant and Main streets.

After refusing even a roll call on the lobby bill in the Senate last week, its sponsor, Senator Nason, got the question of re-consideration of the vote on the bill put over for a week. The strange thing in connection with the action of the Senate on this bill was that the judiciary committee had reported it unanimously. The Boston papers cut out all reference or comment upon it, as they did on the free pass bill, and the reform orators of the G. O. P. who have spoken at dinners and meetings since have carefully refrained from alluding to it. It would seem as if their fools paradise was already large enough but they evidently don't think so.

The Fells line to Stoneham is a great thing for that town as well as for Boston people to reach the woods, but if the Metropolitan Park Board would put up more guide and sign boards so that people might know where and how to go in the Fells it would convenience and please all. Why try to keep this reservation a maze? More springs for the thirsty should also be dug out and made available.

Wednesday the G. O. P. added another nail for its political coffin by defeating the lobby bill for good. The Secretary of State's office says that the present law is not workable. Evidently the Senate does not propose to make it so. Our Senator Crosby voted against the bill.

SHAKESPEARE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If Shakespeare were alive today (23 April 1910) he would be just 346 years old, but he was born in Stratford-upon-Avon on the 23rd of April 1564 and died on the 23rd of April 1616, at the age of only 52.

To many in Winchester and Woburn, bearing the name of the writer of this article, it may be interesting to know that John Richardson Rychardson, together with one Fulke Sandells, at the time of Shakespeare's marriage to Anne Hatheway, were his sureties; entering into a bond for the payment of fifty pounds sterling, in case Shakespeare, yet a minor, failed to fulfil the conditions of his marriage license. But there is also a disagreeable feature connected with the transaction; viz. that both Richardson and Sandells (being described as agricolae or yeomen) were marksmen, i. e., were obliged to make their marks, not being capable of writing their own names. Shakespeare left school at the age of 15 to assist his father, who at the time was in embarassed financial circumstances; he was married at the age of 19 and before he was 21 years old, he had a wife and three children saddled upon him.

Shortly afterwards he was persecuted by Sir Thomas Lucy, who accused him of stealing a deer from his premises, and he left Stratford and went to London, where his dramatic career lasted for 20 years.

His eldest daughter, Susanna, married Dr. Hall; to them was born one daughter, Elizabeth, his sole grand-daughter, and the only grandchild the poet ever lived to see. She was twice married, the last time to Sir John Barnard. She had no family by either husband, so that at [illegible] death [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] descendants of this [illegible] [illegible] immortal Shakespeare, [illegible] [illegible].

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Everybody who saw "The Prisoner of Zenda" at the Castle Square this week will surely want to see "Rupert of Hentzau" next week. For it is a sequel to the famous play made from Anthony Hope's epoch making romance, and it was written by Anthony Hope himself. It contains the characters that gave diversity to "The Prisoner of Zenda," and its successive scenes continue its action with a variety of still more exciting and heart-appealing incidents.

"Rupert of Hentzau" will be acted at the Castle Square by the John Craig Stock Company, and Mr. Craig will of course appear in the dual roles of Rudolf Rassendyll and King Rudolf the Fifth, his success this week promising well for an equal triumph next.

FELLS ROAD OPEN.

Stoneham has Direct Route and Rapid Transit to Boston.

Facts and Figures in Connection with the New Line.

From the Stoneham Independent.

The new Fells road of the Boston and Northern Street Railway Co. is open, cars running from Central square to the Medford line last Friday for the first time. The regular schedule, with three cars an hour each way was instituted Saturday. For the past several days everything has been in readiness for the opening of the line to the public, the official inspector for the Massachusetts railroad commission having pronounced all details in order and acceptable to the state authorities.

Although a change will have to be made at the Medford line to cars of the Boston Elevated, it is expected that a satisfactory adjustment may be made between the two roads that will enable the cars to run through to Sullivan square without change.

WHERE TRACK LEAVES MAIN STREET AND ENTERS THE WOODS.

The construction and opening to the public of the new Fells line, so called, of the Boston and Northern Street Railway Co., which is joining the Elevated system at the Medford-Stoneham line, affords at last, to residents of Stoneham, the long awaited direct route to Boston. The Independent is enabled to present at this time, as a matter of general interest to its readers, authoritative facts and figures, which show the magnitude of the work involved in the building of the road, the cost of the construction of the completed line in detail, and the plans for adequate rapid transit service, as regards running time, equipment, etc., that have already been decided upon by the Boston and Northern officials.

The very interesting statistics embodied in this article have been obtained through the courtesy, and with the assistance of, several departmental heads of the road, Mr. H. A. Faulkner, passenger agent, having been of especial assistance.

THE DEEP CUT NEAR TRESTLE BRIDGE.

When the work of construction of the Fells line was begun early last summer, Lloyd Cutton, chief engineer and road master of the B. and N. St. Ry. Co., was given full charge. His representative in real active charge of the work has been Arthur W. Hodges, with J. W. Kenum as inspector. The work was also under approval of [illegible] R. Rablin, chief engineer of the Metropolitan park commission, George F. Swain, bridge engineer of the Massachusetts railroad commission and Dexter Brackett, chief engineer of the Metropolitan water commission. That these gentlemen have been painstaking [illegible] the duties imposed [illegible] supervision of details [illegible] work [illegible]

The construction work necessitated excavating and grading through the Middlesex Fells, a wild and diversified bit of country requiring frequent cuts and fills over a rough surface and presenting numerous difficulties in the way of blasting, bridge work, etc., from the Medford-Stoneham line to South street, a distance of about 6500 feet; and from South street to Marble street, about 3000 feet, this latter section being along the state highway. From the Medford-Stoneham line northerly, there has been built 1080 feet of double track, while from the end of the double tracking to Marble street, 8450 feet, a single track, with a turnout 930 feet long has been constructed. From Marble street to Stoneham square, a distance of 1700 feet, the line was double tracked. The roadbed throughout the entire distance has been built to accommodate a double track.

Michael McDonough, a Swampscott contractor, was awarded the contract for the work of grading, and this, before its final completion, necessitated the excavation of fully 13,000 cubic yards of earth and 17,500 cubic yards of rock, together with approximately 6,000 cubic yards of crushed stone ballast. But one serious accident occurred while the work was being done, that being due to an explosion of a dynamite cap, carelessly struck by the pick of an Italian laborer.

In grading, the maximum rock cut was about 28 feet, and the maximum fill 14 feet. The total cost of grading, it is estimated, will amount to $44,000.

Along the new line, two reinforced concrete bridges, of modern construction, over cross roads, each 43 feet span, excellent examples of what up-to-date methods of engineering can accomplish, have been built under the direction of E. E. Pettee of the well known firm of J. R. Worcester and Co. of Boston, consulting engineers. In addition there has been constructed one reinforced concrete "sheep pass," ten feet clear span, and a reinforced concrete trestle 275 feet long, with seven spans, and with a maximum elevation of forty feet. This work was done by John E. Palmer, contracting engineer of Boston, at an estimated cost of about $21,500.

The track work, recently completed, has been done by [illegible] Division Road master P. J. Forty of the Chelsea division. The rail used is what is termed an A. S. C. E. 75 lb. Tee rail, and the ties are spaced two feet apart. Steam railroad switches with spring frogs have been installed to permit high speed with safety.

C. W. Palmer, electrical engineer of the B. and N. Street Railway Co., assisted by W. J. Keating superintendent [illegible] has had charge of the overhead work. About 235 poles [illegible] and [illegible] feet [illegible] have been used. The approximate total cost of the track and line work exclusive of grading and bridges, will be in the vicinity of $70,000.

It is worthy of note that the trestle work over the gorge, already referred to, is considered an especially creditable feat of engineering, and it is said that there are only one or two trestles in this country of similar size and construction.

LOOKING ACROSS TRESTLE BRIDGE TOWARD MEDFORD.

The Independent is informed that, for the present at least, the B. and N. proposes to run the new type, big semi-convertible, easy access cars over the Fells line. There will be no change in cars from Stoneham square to Sullivan square. These cars are fitted with four 50 horse power or G. E. 90 motors, are equipped with exceptionally heavy and solid trucks, steel tired wheels, are operated by the multiple C. 25 C. controller and have the latest air brakes. The vestibules are large and subdivided, so that the motorman has a compartment for himself. The outer vestibule doors are opened and closed when the cars are at a standstill, by compressed air under control of the motormen, so that it is impossible to get on or off the car while it is in motion. The seats are [illegible] rattan, with eighteen cross seats and four longitudinal seats, two at each end. The seating capacity of this type of car is 52. The cars are 45 feet 10 inches in length over all, and have a width of 8 feet 5 inches. They stand 15 feet high from the rail to the base of the trolley stand.

A special feature of these cars is that the windows are larger than is usual in other types of car, and slide out of sight into the roof of the cars, leaving a wide opening for the circulation of air in warm weather, which will render them fully as comfortable as the familiar type of open cars, and much more so in case of bad weather as the windows may readily be closed.

Regarding the operation of the line, it is proposed at the start to run through cars between Stoneham square and Sullivan square. The cars it is planed, will leave Stoneham at 5.50 a. m. and every twenty minutes until 10.50 p. m.; and to leave Sullivan Square at 6.23 a. m. and every twenty minutes until 11.23 p. m. The run is to take 33 minutes; fare 10 cents, transfers to be issued in Stoneham.

SCENE FROM TRESTLE BRIDGE.

THE OVER-ZEALOUS ASSESSOR.

As the result of the very diligent search for personal property by assessors of Massachusetts during the past year, there is today a larger amount of Massachusetts capital invested in non-taxable secrities than at any previous time in the history of the state. This fact is to be regretted, especially in Boston, as it will result in a higher tax rate this year, which must fall on owners of real estate. Some assessors frankly admit that they carried the search for personal property entirely too far last year. They realize that they have killed the goose that laid the golden egg, as owners of personal property have taken unusual measures to transfer their property where it cannot be reached for taxation and to a large degree have bought tax exempt stocks.

Another factor which will cause a higher tax rate generally throughout the state this year is the lower level of security prices on April 1 last than on May 1 a year ago. Personal property is a very important item in determining the tax rate of Boston, as it represents about 25 per cent of total valuation of the city. On May 1, 1909, personal property valuations in Boston amounted to $244,4[illegible].

With larger appropriations necessary for schools, and a shrinkage in personal property subject to taxation, there will unquestionably be a tax rate in Boston this year considerably higher than the $16.50 rate for the past two years. The highest rate in the history of the city was in 1884, when $17 a thousand was reached, but this record will probably be exceeded this year.—Boston News Bureau.

THE COMET.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I am writing this as a little information to the readers of the Winchester STAR as follows:

Although we need not fear the comet we will go through its tail without any danger and still see it in the sky.

This comet before it finished its last orbit, was seen in 1835 and was seen in Winchester, March 3, 90[illegible], with the naked eye.

Persons desiring to see it now must get up at 4.30 a. m., and look over in the direction the sun rises in a clear sky.

Home Course In Domestic Science

XIII.—Washing Day Made Easy.

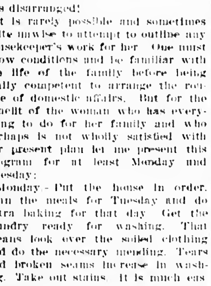
By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"BLUE Monday" might lose some of its terror for the average family if the weekly washing were changed to some other day. Steam ladened rooms, odor of boiling suds, an untidy house from kitchen to attic and "pickup" meals all day, combined with the accumulation of duties and cares since Saturday, make Monday a disagreeable day for every one. Whoever established the custom of setting Monday aside for a "wash day" made life just a little harder than necessary in scores of homes. And yet so firmly established has the custom become that it takes genuine courage to break away from it and wash on Tuesday instead. When you think about it, how much more suitable Tuesday is for the work than Monday, which, following a day of rest, finds the whole house more or less disarranged!

It is rarely possible and sometimes quite unwise to attempt to outline any housekeeper's work for her. One must know conditions and be familiar with the life of the family before being really competent to arrange the routine of domestic affairs. But for the benefit of the woman who has everything to do for her family and who perhaps is not wholly satisfied with her present plan let me present this program for at least Monday and Tuesday:

Monday.—Put the house in order. Plan the meals for Tuesday and do extra baking for that day. Get the laundry ready for washing. That means look over the soiled clothing and do the necessary mending. Tears and broken seams increase in washing. Take out stains. It is much easier to do this before washing than after, and there is more time the day before than when the washing is in process. Soak soiled clothes. See that tubs and other things are ready for an early start; also be sure that soap, bluing and other supplies are on hand.



HANDY LAUNDRY STOVE.

Tuesday.—The special work for this day will be the washing, but it should not be carried on to the complete disarrangement of the family life. Good, substantial meals should be served promptly, as on other days, and the wife and mother should not be so enslaved by the washtub and wringer that she has no thought or attention for husband and children. There is no reason why she should be if the washing has not beyond all reason piled up her work so that it requires almost superhuman effort to accomplish it. While preparing breakfast the laundry fire may be started and the water heated. After breakfast and after the dining table has been cleared the washing can be commenced, and if it is performed in an intelligent way from start to finish it ought not to interfere to any great extent with the ordinary comforts of the day. The clothes were sorted and some of them put to soak the day before. That means a long stride toward an early completion.

The Order of the Wash.

One reason why there are so many indifferent laundresses and so much inferior laundry work is because little or no attention has been given to difference in fabrics. Cotton, linen, silk and wool are practically treated in the same way. The same kind of soap is used for all. They are washed in water of the same temperature. Sometimes they are washed in the same water. They are given the same amount of rubbing and equally indifferent rinsing.

In sorting the clothes arrange them in five piles as follows:

Table linen and fine muslins.

Bed linen, towels and handkerchiefs (previously soaked in ammonia and water if used for a cold).

Flannels.

Colored cottons and stockings.

Soiled towels and cloths.

No one questions that soaking the clothes loosens the dirt and makes the washing easier, but only white clothes or fast colors can be treated in this way, and it is not well to soak all kinds of white clothes in one tub. After soaking in cold water to which a good naphtha soap or washing powder has been added little or no rubbing will be necessary before putting the clothes in the boiler. Kerosene used in small quantity in the cold water in which clothes are soaked makes the washing easier. The success of laundering also depends on the kind and amount of soap used. For wool and silk articles use only a good white soap containing very little alkali or acid. Both these chemicals have an injurious effect on silk and wool. Salsoda makes woolen garments yellow, makes the fiber harsh and less elastic. The fiber of wool is composed of numberless sections, or sheaths, each with more or less jagged edges and each one growing out of the other. These sheaths form a tube which, with its ragged edges, explains the reason for shrinking. Diluted acids roughen the wool fiber; strong acids disintegrate it. Choride of lime injures the fiber even if cold; used hot, the fiber is destroyed. Ammonia has the least injurious action on wool, therefore is the most satisfactory agent for cleansing it.

Silk is a strong, elastic, lustrous durable fiber. All alkalies act upon it, according to the kind, strength and temperature of the solution and the length of time the silk is left in the solution. The luster is first lessened, and the fiber is finally dissolved. Dilute acids roughen silk and strong acids ruin it. Thus it will be seen that all garments of silk and wool should be washed with only the mildest soap. This should be made into a solution by cutting the soap into thin slices, dissolving in hot water and adding to the suds in which the garments are to be washed. This method is much better than rubbing the soap directly on the garment. Both silk and wool are injured by dry heat. Silk first stiffens, then breaks, so that the water in which it is washed should not be hot. Flannels should be washed in water of the same temperature throughout the process and should be hung to dry in a temperature the same as the water. The expansion and contraction of the wool fibers, caused by change in temperatures, make flannel thick. Tepid water and a moderate temperature for drying and the best white soap added to the washing water are simple rules to observe in washing woolen garments.

The vegetable fibers, such as cotton and linen, are of a woody nature, tough, strong and not so easily affected by chemicals. For this reason cotton and linen materials are not so soon spoiled by careless washing as either silk or wool, and yet too much soap, prolonged boiling in dirty water, indifferent rinsing and inattention to stains soon make the best cotton or linen dingy and unattractive. One of the commonest neglects in ordinary washing is that the water is not changed often enough. Garment after garment is washed in water so saturated with dirt that it is impossible to make it remove any more. This washing is followed by careless rinsing in only one water, which does not begin to take out all the soap. If the bluing follows, as it too often does, this rinsing in soapy water, the clothes are very liable to be stained with iron rust. This will almost certainly be the case if Prussian blue is used. This substance is a salt of iron, and with an alkali such as there is in soap changes to iron rust. A simple experiment to determine whether or not you are using Prussian blue is to heat a little of it in a strong solution of salsoda. If Prussian blue the mixture will turn yellowish red, and iron rust will settle in the bottom of the vessel.

Simple General Directions.

It is more often neglect of little things than carelessness about big main points that makes washing an unsatisfactory task. Attention to these details may lighten the work for some women and bring them better results.

Remember to make fresh suds whenever necessary. It is a mistake to think you can make clothes clean in dirty water.

Put the clothes to boil in cold water and heat slowly. The best results are obtained when there is a large quantity of water and the boiler is but half full of clothes. Each boilerful of clothes should be put on in clean, cold water.

Rinsing is very important. The clothes must be free from soap before bluing. Use soft water for first rinsing, then hard water if color of soft is not good.

Hard water may be softened by boiling, then cooling before using, or a solution of salsoda may be added. This ought not to be too strong or the salsoda will injure both the fabric and the hands.

In bluing shake out each article and drop it into the bluing water, rinse carefully through the water, then wring out at once. Do not allow clothes to stay in bluing water for any length of time or they will be streaked.

Thick starch is made by mixing one-half cup of laundry starch and one-quarter cup of cold water, then add one-quarter teaspoonful of white wax or lard and one quart of boiling water. Put over the fire and boil for several minutes, stirring constantly. Uncooked or partly cooked starch will stick. Thick starch may be diluted, or if a thin quality is desired use twice as much water.

Ironing is the completion of good laundry work and the test of the laundress. It requires a good thick ironing blanket tacked securely to an ironing table or board, clean irons, an iron stand, a piece of beeswax tied in a cloth on which to clean the irons, a bit of old cloth on which to wipe them and a piece of paper folded several times on which to try the irons. This is the necessary outfit, but in addition there must be practice, care and skill to insure complete success.

METROPOLITAN COUNCIL.

The committee on Metropolitan Affairs has reported unanimously the following bill:

AN ACT

To define Metropolitan Boston and to create a Metropolitan Boston Council.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows:

Section 1. The cities and towns which are now included within the metropolitan park district, or the metropolitan sewer district, or the metropolitan water district, or in all of them, and such other cities and towns as may hereafter be joined to either or all of said districts, shall constitute a district which shall be known as Metropolitan Boston, and the mayors of said cities and the chairman of the boards of selectmen of said towns shall constitute a body which shall be known as the Metropolitan Boston Council.

Section 2. Said council shall serve without compensation, shall meet in the city hall in Boston on the second Wednesday in January in each year and at such other times and places as it may by vote determine; shall be called to order at the first meeting each year by the mayor of Boston, and shall elect by ballot from its membership a president, a secretary and such other officers as it it may deem necessary, and shall adopt suitable rules for governing its deliberations.

Section 3. It shall be the duty of said secretary to procure and lay before said council copies of all petitions, bills, resolves and reports concerning matters affecting said metropolitan Boston that are submitted to the general court for consideration, and said council shall submit to the general court or to committees thereof, from time to time, either orally by duly authorized representatives, or in writing, reports of such action as said council may take upon such petitions, bills, resolves or reports, or other matters concerning said district, together with the vote, both affirmative and negative, taken upon such question. All votes shall be taken by municipalities, and each municipality shall be entitled to one vote: provided, however, that in voting upon proposed legislation only those municipalities which have a financial interest in a question shall be entitled to vote upon it.

Section 4. The board of metropolitan park commissioners and the metropolitan water and sewerage board shall, when so requested by said council appear before said council or committees thereof, and furnish such information as said council may require concerning the maintenance and operation of their several departments.

Section 5. Said council may employ such clerical assistance and contract such contingent expenses, not to exceed one thousand dollars in any one year, as it deems necessary for the proper conduct of its business, and the cost thereof shall in the first instance be paid by the commonwealth, when authorized by a two-thirds vote of said council, and shall be included in the annual assessment of the cities and towns comprising said district, in proportion to the amount assessed upon each city or town for metropolitan water, sewer and park maintenance.

Section 6. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

BOSTON THEATRE.

"Three Twins" the musical adaptation of the time mellowed farce "Incog," returns to the Boston Theatre Monday, the 25th instant. It has the backing of clever complications of the original plot, a jolly impostor making up as an extra twin, and of the singing and dancing of a capable company. Heading the cast is Clifton Crawford, who keeps the fun in motion throughout the two acts of the beach at Sea View and at Doctor Hartman's sanitorium, and the monologue which is introduced hints at his lateral abilities as an actor outside the role of "Tom Stanhope". Brilliant Mayme Gehrue, of musical comedy fame, is the "Yama" girl. The music was contributed by Karl Hoschna, is bright and tuneful, well suited to the hilarious mood of the piece.

Arrangements have been made whereby the attaches of the Boston Theatre box office will have the opening performance of "Three Twins" on the 25th instant for their annual benefit.

THE MAY STRAND.

The Strand Magazine for May makes a very handsome appearance in its new "all over" cover in three colors. The design is a brilliant one, in which peacocks predominate. The contents are equally attractive. Stories by A. E. W. Mason, W. W. Jacobs and H. G. Wells will ensure popularity for this number apart from the highly valuable articles on "Color-Blindness and Its Dangers," "The Detection of Blood Guilt," and "The Beauty of the Pollen." The color section on "The Art of the Dancer" will appeal to all who admire the beauty and grace of stage dancing. "Some Unrehearsed Stage Effects" are amusingly illustrated and described by the famous Punch cartoonist, Harry Furniss.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The greatest of the legitimate stars to appear at Keith's is Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the English emotional actress who comes to Keith's next week for an engagement that will probably mark the height of a remarkable season at this house. Never before in the history of vaudeville has there been so many big attractions offered as Mr. Keith has provided during the winter and now when the warm days are coming he is capping the climax with a world wide celebrity who has made one of the greatest hits of her career in a one-act play. It is called "Expiation." She will be surrounded by an exceptionally strong bill, a comedy feature of which will be Bowers, Walters and Crooker, "The Three Rubes." Another is Warren, Lyon and Myers, who will make their first appearance in Boston. Other features will be the Flying Banvards, a big aerial acrobatic act; the 3 Vagrants, European street singers; Hilda Hawthorne, the female ventriloquist; Brady and Mahoney in a comedy sketch; the Daleys in a roller skating specialty, and others.

A mattress that has always proved satisfactory in every way, and has added more to my reputation for making first class mattresses than any other, is the mattress that I make of pure South American horse hair. A Home Is An Interest Paying Investment

Ever look at it in that light?

Leave other arguments out of consideration if you will, such as the added comfort your own home would afford you, and consider the matter on its merits only as a downright business proposition. By a simple problem in mathematics we can show you how, by placing your money in a home of your own you can make it earn you a net income of six per cent.

Do you lack the necessary capital to buy outright a place to your liking? Then we can assist you in making a buy that will only require a moderate payment down.

You might try in vain all your life to save enough to buy a home spot cash. Pay for it by degrees as you now pay rent and you will soon have it for your own, title clear.

IN BUYING GROCERIES

the careful housekeeper makes every cent count.

But she can't make the pennies count by trading at every store in town, spending half her time looking for the cent cheaper article.

She can save money only by searching out a reliable grocer and sticking to him.

The money is saved by trading with the groceryman who sells dependable goods.

Dependable goods are not to be obtained in every store.

Goodness and cheapness appeal to every condition of humanity.

There are no fancy prices here, and everybody is treated alike.

Our goods are cheap because they're good — it's not the price that makes them cheap.

Goods that are bought so cheaply that they have to be thrown away on account of poor quality are the most dearly bought goods.

Better pay a fair price in the first place and get the dependable kinds. You can't buy any other kinds here. We don't keep them.

REV. MR. LAWRANCE RESIGNS

After a Pastorate Extending Over Eleven Years.

The announcement of the resignation of Rev. William I. Lawrance, minister of the Unitarian Church, came as a great surprise to the people of Winchester. Mr. Lawrance had been contemplating taking this step for some time, and a few of the members of the church becoming aware of this, tried to persuade him from giving up church work here. This was futile, however, as he had decided to devote his time henceforth to Sunday school work, in which he is greatly interested. He will succeed Rev. Edward A. Horton as president of the National Unitarian Sunday School Society, and his duties will take him to all parts of the United States and Canada.

During his pastorate of eleven years in Winchester, the local church has grown and prospered to a remarkable degree under his wise, able and enthusiastic leadership, so that today it is one of the leading churches in Boston's suburbs. While his parishioners deeply regret losing him, they are not the only ones who will miss him, for Mr. Lawrance was a broad-minded man and a scholar who had endeared himself to scores of people outside of his church.

Rev Mr. Lawrance is peculiarly fitted for the duties which he is about to enter upon as he has always been deeply impressed with the importance of Sunday school training, and his word on that subject is counted authoritative. He is a graduate of the Harvard Divinity School in the class of 1885 and was pastor of the church at Meadville, Penn., also teacher of the Sunday school. He also spent several years in Japan in religious work.

The 11th anniversary of the dedication of the new Unitarian Church and the installation of the pastor, William I. Lawrance, was observed with appropriate exercises Wednesday evening. At that time the resignation of the pasor was presented.

Pastor's Study,
Winchester, Mass.,
April 27, 1910.

To the Winchester Unitarian Society, through Mr. Charles A. Baldwin,
Chairman Standing Committee,

Brethren:—On this, the eleventh anniversary of my installation as your minister, I resign that charge. The date at which this resignation shall take effect I leave for the Society to determine, but suggest that if it is agreeable to you I might continue in charge until the last of June, thus bringing the church year to a close.

These eleven years have been the happiest of my life. The beautiful structure in which we meet, the splendid equipment of all departments of the work, the thoroughness with which all business affairs are conducted, the never-failing courtesy and generosity of the people toward my family as toward myself, the unity existing between members of the congregation, the quick response to and the steady support of every reasonable attempt to enlarge the usefulness of the church, and, perhaps most of all, the warm personal friendships,—coextensive, if I am not deceived, with the entire constituency,—that have been established between pastor and people, all these have been a constant source of delight, are today causes of a tender sorrow, and will ever remain a sacred memory.

It was a rich inheritance into which you invited me, now just eleven years ago. Five earnest men had preceded me in the sacred office, chief among whom, as all we who have come later heartily agree, must ever stand the first, Richard Metcalf. Into his labors we his successors as well as you his people have entered; and if the efforts of more recent years have sustained and carried forward his work, those efforts have not been in vain.

The inheritance into which I came was that, also, of a loyal congregation, old enough to have an established life, and young with courage and hope. The struggles of the formative years, the brave and successful efforts attending the building of the first church, dedicated "to the glad worship of God," the fiery trial, the rallying to the task of building our present splendid sanctuary, had left their impress upon the people in a strong sense of loyalty and a firm bond of unity. As we entered together into this latest stage of the church's history, we were met by a growing constituency, due largely to the fact that the town was increasing by the arrival almost daily of new families. Thus our task was not to be a struggle for existence, but that of assimilation. How well we have succeeded in this task, our present great prosperity bears witness. It remains but to keep the church true to its highest ideals and a noble future is assured.

I beg that it be well understood that I withdraw from so delightful work under no less worthy impulse than a sense of duty. Considerations of financial betterment or less exacting duties have not entered, for it is to less income and more etxended labors that I go. The change misses being a sacrifice by being a privilege, as it is always a privilege to be called to a place of greater responsibility. I cannot believe that you, collectively or singly, can miss as much in the parting as I do. But you know that you retain, and I know that I carry with me, an affectionate interest that has matured through eleven sacred years, and that will endure through life. As I shall ever treasure your memory and follow your history with an unchanging affection, so I am assured that you will follow me with your blessing.

Faithfully yours,
William I. Lawrance.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The annual guest day on Monday was enjoyed by many club members and guests from neighboring clubs.

The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Fay Letavour chairman of the music committee, who presented a very pleasing program given by the choral class of the club, assisted by Mrs. Evangeline Hiltz soprano, and Mr. Albert E. Brown, baritone. Mrs. Brown accompanying.

Mrs. Hiltz is an unusual colaratura soprano, whose charming bird like quality of tone was heard to great advantage in an air from "Linda di Chamounix" and a group of modern songs. Mrs. Letavour accompanist.

Mr. Brown sang two songs written by Mrs. Harriett B. Wills a member of the club, by request "Danny Dever" and as an encore, "Tom the Rhymer." Mr. Brown as director and as soloist gave great satisfaction and we hope to be fortunate enough to secure his services next year.

It has long been a dream of the musical faction of the club, that "The Fortnightly" should have the advantage of a choral class, and this year when the experiment of free class work in some direction was decided upon, through the energy of Mrs. Letavour chairman of the music committee, the dream was materialized. The club has a right to feel a sort of family pride that this newly organized class under the able tuition of Mr. Albert E. Brown was competent to present to its guests a program of good music, sung in a delightfully artistic manner. The following is a list of the names of members of this class: Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Blank, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Caldwell, Mrs. Downer, Mrs. Dunning, Miss French, Miss Foltz, Mrs. Gilpatric, Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Herrick, Mrs. Leland, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Mead, Mrs. Miller, Miss Miller, Mrs. Symmes, Mrs. Trott, Mrs. Tufts, Mrs. Tuck, Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Whitney and Mrs. Wills.

A reception followed the musical program. In the receiving line were the president Mrs. E. L. Dunning, vice presidents Mrs. Mable G. Nichols, and Mrs. Edith H. Sache, recording secretary Miss Maude Foltz, Mrs. Hiltz and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brown.

Refreshments were served by the social committee, Mrs. Addie G. Phippen, chairman, ably assisted by club members.

At the short business meeting we were asked to consider the advisability of a "Gentlemens' Night" and take action at the next meeting.

The dramatic committee asked for discussion, at the next meeting, upon the question of an evening dramatic entertainment. The chairman of philanthropy committee gave notice that at the next meeting an appropriation would be asked for in aid of the vacation playroom. Miss Grace Chamberlain has been secured for the meeting of May 9, subject to be announced next week in the STAR.

The club bids its president Mrs. Dunning and former president, Mrs. Wheeler "bon voyage," on their journey west to the biennial at Cincinnati, as they will start on May 9 before the last meeting which will be in charge of the 1st Vice-President Mrs. Mabel G. Nichols.

ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY CONCERT.

The last concert of the Orchestral Society for the season will take place in the Town Hall next Tuesday evening beginning at eight o'clock. This concert will be the best effort the orchestra has made so far and the program will undoubtedly interest a greater number of people than did the first two on account of its greater brilliancy.

The soloist of the evening, Miss Fay Cord, is a great favorite among music lovers in Winchester and vicinity and her wonderful voice and charming personality will delight everyone who hears her next Tuesday.

Another interesting feature of this concert will be the playing of Mr. F. E. Burgstaller on the zither. Mr. Bergstaller is considered one of the best if not the best performer on the zither in greater Boston and out of courtesy to Mr. Bicknell he has kindly consented to do the zither parts in the Strauss Waltz at this concert.

Following is the programme:

Mendelssohn,
Overture "Son and Stranger"
Bizet, Recitative and Aria "Carmen"
Miss Cord
Johann Strauss, Waltz, "Voices from the Vienna Forest"
Intermission
Edward German, Incidental Music, "Henry VIII"
Bizet, Duo, Suite 2," Le Petit Mari et La Petite Femme"
Reinecke, Prelude Act V "King Manfred"
Geo. H. Clutsam, Song, "I know of Two Bright Eyes" from songs from the Turkish Hills
Laugdon Ronald, Song, "Sunbeams"
Miss Cord
Gounod, Selections from "Faust"

One of the most enjoyable smoke talks of the winter was held at the Calumet Club last Saturday night, when Mr. W. H. Bain spoke upon "The Islands of the Pacific." A large audience of club men greatly enjoyed both the entertaining talk and the numerous fine views shown in illustration of the subject.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Next Monday morning school will commence at 8 o'clock as decided by the school committee. This will bring almost all of the school work in the cool part of the day, will give more time for recreation in the afternoon and bring the noonday meal at a much better hour. When the new schedule goes into effect this change will also be made. Hereafter the classes when passing for recitations will carry with them books, etc., for the next period so that they will not be obliged to return to the home room between recitations.

At a meeting of the class of 1910 last Friday plans for graduation were discussed and some of the class day officers elected. It had been suggested that the class day exercises be held in the Assembly Hall; but it was decided that it would be more agreeable to have them in a private home as in previous years. Frances Noonan and Warren Taplin were elected as class prophets.

The following change has been made in the lineup of the ball team and found to be a big improvement. Hurd goes from third base to short stop, Donovan or Pierce to third base and Mathews has changed to the outfield, which now looks 50 per cent. stronger. The team has got lots of time yet to round into shape and may win the more important games. Don't give up yet!

Maynard Wheeler, '13, is suffering with a severe case of scarlet fever. At first it was thought that the school would be obliged to close Thursday while the building was fumigated; but by the prompt work of the authorities everything was ready Thursday morning to carry through the regular program.

At a meeting of the class of 1913 Wednesday, the resignation of Oriana Wingate as president, was accepted and it was decided that the vice-president fill out the unexpired term. The class then voted for a new vice president but no decision was reached.

Some of the bating averages of the ball team for the first five games are Flaherty .480, Tuck .428, Grant .238 and Hurd .236. Capt. LeDuc who was easily the best batsman last year, has a bad slump at the present time hitting at the rate of .091.

This evening at 8 o'clock the girls of the High school gymnasium class will give their second annual gymnastic exhibition. The admission will be by ticket only and these will be given to their friends by the members of the class, each one of whom has been supplied with several for distribution. It will be worth while to come.

SAMUEL W. TWOMBLY

SAMUEL W. TWOMBLY

Passes Away in his Eighty-Eighth Year.

Samuel Walker Twombly, Winchester's grand old citizen, passed away at his home at the corner of Cambridge and Wildwood streets, Wednesday morning, after an illness of about two weeks. He had, however, been in failing health for the past year, and his death was due principally to the infirmities of old age. He would have reached his 88th birthday next July.

Mr. S. W. Twombly was born in Tamworth, N. H., July 31st, 1822. Five years later his family moved to Dover, where his mother died in 1829. Samuel, then a boy of seven and a half years, was bound out on a farm until he was sixteen. He then bought his time and for the next two years worked on a farm and in a factory at Milton, N. H. At the age of eighteen Mr. Twombly came to Boston and landed at Wilds Tavern on Elm street, with no friends and not much money. A year later he went into the baking business and worked so hard that his health gave out and he was obliged to give up. Now at the age of twenty he sold out his share of the business for eight hundred dollars in cash. This money he invested in fifteen acres of land in Winchester, then Woburn, at the corner of Wildwood and Cambridge streets.

In 1843 Mr. Twombly built the house where he died and had lived most of his life. When twenty-one he married and settled down to hard work, trying to regain his health and make a living.

Winchester was then a small village of a few hundred inhabitants, mostly farmers. The streets were narrow and there were no sidewalks. Since it became a town Mr. Twombly had taken a great interest in its development and hardly any improvements have been made but what he had been one of the leading spirits in them.

He was a leading worker in the widening of Cambridge, Church, Main, Mt. Vernon and Pleasant streets, and to his active interest in these improvements is the town indebted in a great measure at the present time for these beautiful thoroughfares.

Mr. Twombly was one of the original members of the Village Improvement Association, and served as its president for six years. The work of this Association during its lifetime in beautifying the town can never be measured in dollars and cents. Take the Common, the refreshing plot at the junction of Main and Washington streets; these are two of the creations of the Association. The plot at the corner of Wildwood and Willow streets was given to the town by Mr. Twombly. The Common was his pet, however, and for years he carefully watched over it and tended to it. When Wildwood street was laid out, he gave a strip of land five feet wide for its entire length and furnished and set out all the beautiful maple trees seen on the street at the present time.

In 1865 he was elected one of the selectmen with O. R. Clark and D. N. Skillings. Then the selectmen were highway surveyor, and overseers of the poor. He served as selectman eight years and then as assessor and has been in some manner connected with the town most of the time since. At the time of his death he was chairman of the cemetery commission and superintendent of the cemetery.

He has long been a member of the Calumet club and likewise a member of William Parkman Lodge of Masons.

Mr. Twombly served the Legislature in 1871 and again in the years 1900 and 1901, and was dean of the House at the latter period.

He was one of the original Free Soilers who voted for all the candidates of that party, and was present at the Buffalo convention in 1848 when the Republican party was born. He had been a staunch Republican ever since.

From President Grant down to President Roosevelt he had personally presented to each a bouquet of flowers on the occasion of their inaugurations.

In 1907 Mr. Twombly lost his wife after more than 63 years of happy married life. In 1868 they celebrated their silver wedding in a tent in the field adjoining his house, and in 1893 their golden wedding was observed in the Calumet Club house, it being an event long to be remembered.

He leaves three sons and one daughter.

Funeral services will be held at the Unitarian Church, tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at 3 o'clock.

SALE AND DRAMATICS.

Two attractive posters designed and drawn by Barbara Pratt were the forerunners of the successful sale held on Friday afternoon and evening, April 22, in Metcalf Hall under the auspices of the Metcalf Union. The tables were prettily decorated, pink being the color scheme, and consisted of a candy table in charge of Miss Ethel Pierce; fancy table, Carline Gleason, Hannah Lock, Emma Farnsworth, Esther Somes; apron table, Ella Emerson, Mary Whitten, Josephine Woods, Miriam Foster, Ellinor Soutter; flower table, Mabel Wingate, Barbara Wellington, Ora Wingate; lemonade, Beatrice Tuck, Anna Tindall, Pauline Sweetser.

In the evening two short farces were given, Hiring Help and The Dumb Waiter. In the former Mrs. Merwin, who had advertised for a girl and is rather chary of such privileges as gas in the girl's room and a rocking chair in the kitchen, was ably taken by June Root as was Emma her daughter by Miriam Foster. Rachel Ayer as Bridget Rooney the first applicant, kept Mrs. Merwin busy answering questions, having been over long enough to know the ropes. Anna Tindall as Nora McCarthy was greenness itself even to her willingness to pay a trifle to buy experience in house work. Eunice Homer as Ellen Flynn was in very truth the work lady who had made up her mind to live in no place where she couldn't have the chance to play the pianny. Doris Goddu as Joanna O'Neil created great merriment with her carpet bag, who never did any thing common and thought more of herself than to carry her character round in a dirty piece of paper that was liable to be torn up any time. After this quartet from Emerald Isle, Angelina Simper impersonated by Dorothea Chase glided into the room with her ideal method of house keeping, making it one grand poem. Lastly came the modest country girl, Mary Ames, played by Marion Hazelton, who was only to glad to get a good situation and be done with sewing in the shop.

In The Dumb Waiter Rachel Ayer played the part of Mrs. Segsbee the prim and proper principal, to the life, as did Dorothea Chase the teacher of elocution whose curiosity lead to her slipping down, in the dumb waiter. Sally Vernon an old pupil, Marjorie Root, Lucy Dering and Hatty Mason, new pupils, Marion Hazelton and Doris Goddu, brought to their parts the enthusiasm and lightheartedness so characteristic of the boarding school girl.

A large and appreciative audience set their seal of approval upon the performance and remained to enjoy the social hour and informal dancing that followed. The plays were coached and staged by Miss M. Alice Mason and to the untiring efforts of the president Miss Frances M. Dadmun was due the success of the whole.

REAL ESTATE.

Deeds have gone to record conveying cottage house and about 10,000 square feet of land from Kate C. and William G. Hill of No. 4 Wollcott Terrace to Theodore Price Wlson, jr., of Winchester. Also new house and about 11,000 square feet of land No. 12 Ogden avenue, built and owned by Geo. C. Ogden, to Everett Curtis, Esq., of Winchester.

Through the same office Catherine J. Fraser of Winchester has sold to Raymond Merrill also of Winchester a lot of land containing about 4500 square feet, situated on Crescent road.

SCARLET FEVER.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Dear Sir,—In view of the epidemic of Scarlet Fever now prevalent in Greater Boston, a few words as to the situation in Winchester may not be out of place.

At the present time (Thurs. Morning) five cases have been reported to me and three others are under observation. They are all mild cases. In its early stages the disease is not very contagious but nevertheless should a case appear in school the room will be promptly fumigated. In towns like Winchester an epidemic of Scarlet Fever can best be controlled by keeping the schools open. The teachers are alert to note and report every case of illness, the school nurse is especially active at such times and the school physician is given the opportunity to examine every pupil who shows any signs of indisposition. Further a list of absentees is left with me each day and I see that every case is investigated and the reason for the absence ascertained. If the pupil is ill and no physician has been called, an examination is made sufficiently thorough to determine the presence or absence of Scarlet Fever.

By following this plan during the last epidemic I discovered and isolated nine cases of the disease that were being concealed. Had these cases gone on to the stage of desquamation without being isolated the chances of spreading the disease would have been multiplied many times, for in some instances the mothers were working out by the day and could easily have taken the infection into the homes where they were employed. In veiw of what is being done I fully believe that if parents will send their children to school every day, there will be fewer cases than if the schools are closed. This belief is supported by the teachings of the highest modern authorities on Sanitation

Respectfully yours,
Clarence J. Allen, M.D.
Sec. Board of Health.

Above letter has reeceived the endorsement of Dr. Ralph Putnam, School Physician, Schuylor F. Herron, Supt. of Schools and Prof. Charles F. Currier, Chairman of School Committee.

The members of the Circle have been working for this for some months and have been looking forward to it with great interest.

Sunday afternoon, the service is to be at 4 o'clock instead of at 5. It will be a special Missionary Service for children. The service itself to be specially arranged and the address to be by the Rev. Mr. Ballard of Lexington. It is hoped that all the children of our parish will be there. The Sunday Schools of the neighboring parishes have been invited to attend.

Next Thursday, May 5, will be Ascension Day. There will be the service of the Holy Communion at 9 a. m.

The Rector and wardens wish to announce to the congregation that the Rev. Mr. Mills has been asked to respond to any call from any of the people for special services, and has kindly consented. Such services are in his charge.

ELLA L. COOK.

Miss Ella L. Cook, daughter of Moses B. and Emma Cook of No. 30 Irving street, died at her home on Monday of tuberculosis after an illness of some months. She was in her 14th year, and was born in Flushing, N. Y., being one of six children.

Funeral services were held from the residence Wednesday, conducted by Rev. William D. Johnson, and Rev. Wm. H. Smith. The services were largely attended by friends of the deceased. The burial was in Wildwood cemetery.

METCALF UNION DRAMATICS.

Last Friday evening at Metcalf Hall in the Unitarian Church two very interesting little plays were given by the Metcalf Union, some nine young ladies taking part. A large attendance witnessed the efforts of the young people and their work was heartily applauded, it being especially meritorious.

The first play was entitled "Hiring Help," eight of the young ladies being included in the cast. This was followed by "The Dumb Waiter." Both plays were in one act and scene, and provoked gales of laughter from the audience.

Following were the casts.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The condition of Winchester's educational system is most gratifying. The Spectator without hesitancy maintains that there are few towns in this Commonwealth of ours where the public schools have accomplished such excellent results as they have in Winchester. Few of our citizens are aware how much earnest work has been given to educational matters by the school committee men and what liberal and foresighted plans have been made for the development of our public school system. The Spectator is very proud of Winchester's schools and about every representative townsman with whom he has discussed the situation is proud also.

There are few things in this world that wealth cannot procure, but those few are the most indispensable to human enjoyment or comfort. One thing that riches cannot buy and without which life is scarcely worth living is health. The Spectator has been told by a Winchester gentleman who is possessed of means that he will give all his money in exchange for a sound stomach. John D. Rockefeller is unable to eat and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt cannot sleep. Money can secure many delights that can not be obtained without it, but even poverty is preferable to chronic dyspepsia or insomnia.

A prominent Winchester gentleman gives The Spectator to understand that he ate no fleshmeats for a whole year, walked at least ten miles every day, and took a twenty mile tramp once a week, and then broke his fast on an endless chain of sausages for which his soul had thirsted. The champion long distance runner or walker two or three years ago in Europe, covering over a hundred miles along country roads was an abstainer from flesh foods. A Winchester medical gentleman informs The Spectator that if people generally would get free from the meat superstition they would bring down high prices with a bang. Flesh foods are a very nice luxury but not a necessary food, he says.

One of our Winchester grocers is afflicted with a class of rather undesirable customers. In the neighborhood where he has his place of business there are a number of people who will enter the establishment, run their fingers into a barrel and lap up a couple of ounces of sugar, nibble at the back of a herring, eat a handful of nuts, cut off a slice of cheese, just to taste, then eat a few crackers, and perhaps before they have made up their mind to buy a bar of soap they have eaten up the profit of a dollar's worth of groceries, and to wind it up they have it charged, and leave the store munching an apple. This is no dream, but a stern reality, except sometimes they do not make a purchase of soap.

The other day The Spectator was at Winchester Highlands in the vicinity of the railroad and saw a very pathetic spectacle. A young foreign woman was gathering coal along the tracks and she was wretchedly clothed and barefooted. The Spectator never believed there existed such a case of destitution in Winchester although as she was headed toward Woburn it may be that she lives in that city. Let us hope so.

The good housewives of Winchester, for the preservation of the health of the members of their households, should exercise extreme caution when they place pitchers or kettles near an open window. In certain sections of the town the air is more or less laden with dust and other things and on account of this too much precaution cannot be taken. The one important thing to be looked after is—well, to keep from contracting illness.

The other day two small girls, neither over six years of age, made The Spectator's hair stand on end by repeatedly crawling under a wagon which was standing on Main street. Had the equine become frightened at some object, which was not an impossibility, there might have been a very serious accident and perhaps a fatality. The Spectator regrets that he finds occasion to caution the parents of these children.

There is one practice The Spectator would like to see broken up and that is the use of profanity by men and boys. Perhaps Chief McIntosh can do something in this direction. In one or two sections of Winchester a woman or girl is unable to pass groups of men and boys without hearing vile language. This is one of the evils that needs to be broken up in this town.

The Spectator would like to see a town ordinance to the effect that no hat pin projecting more than half an inch beyond the crown of the hat can be worn. The eye balls of The Spectator have been seriously menaced on several occasions of late and no doubt there are plenty of Winchesterites who can say the same thing.

"What has become of that Y. M. C. A. project?" a correspondent asks. Yes, what about it? Why are not the "Boosters" up and doing? The proposition needs the help of every good townsman. If you cannot assist it in the way of dollars, help it along in the way of kind words of encouragement. That will count for a great deal in the end.

The Spectator.

TWO DOCTORS MEET.

Two autos owned by Doctors Stevens of Woburn and Church of Winchester crashed into each other shortly after noon last Saturday near the junction of Montvale avenue and Walnut and Everett streets, Woburn.

As a result of the accident, Stevens' Ford runabout was badly wrecked, while Church's Maxwell runabout is only slightly damaged.

Dr. Stevens had been making a visit on Walnut street and was turning into Montvale avenue at a good rate of speed when the Church auto came down the hill from the Armory also at a fair rate of speed. There was no chance of seeing the other machine on account of the high wall and a collision was inevitable.

Dr. Stevens was thrown out of his car but not seriously injured. Neither the chauffeur or Dr. Church in the other car was injured.

BAD APPEARANCE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Much has been said about keeping our streets clean and free from litter, but in spite of it all the ideal condition has not been reached here. I had about reached the conclusion that it was impossible to keep our streets clean. During the past week I had occasion to visit the town of Westwood and was much impressed with the neat appearance of its streets and yards. No litter or refuse of any kind was to be seen either in the streets or yards about the homes and I was led to ask why Winchester could not have equally clean streets. I did not learn the special cause of the tidy appearance at Westwood but the condition was especially noticable to one interested in this subject.

AUTOS AND THE ROADS.

Colonel William D. Sohier of the Massachusetts Highway Commission has an interesting article in a current magazine showing the effect of automobiles on our highways. He says in part.

"Everyone admits that the motor vehicle has come to stay. Its importance is constantly increasing; its' use is developing large sections of country, not only near our cities, but in rural communities in territory that heretofore has been inaccessible. Its rubber tires, speed and the active force it exerts on the roads are forcing road engineers throughout the world to seek methods of construction which will withstand this traffic.

"Not only is the use of the automobile increasing as a passenger carrier, but the use of the motor truck and the long distance motor express wagon, with their heavy loads and solid tires, is raising new problems in road building, which must be met and solved in the near future if we are to maintain good roads.

"This large amount of automobile travel has a very destructive effect on our macadam roads. In Massachusetts, however, the automobile owner is paying a substantial sum of money for registration fees, and this money is all used for repairing state highways. It is estimated that in 1910 the fees will probably amount to about one half the money it is necessary to spend for maintenance of the [illegible] miles of state highways.

"Traffic does, however, require new methods of construction and of maintenance. The rubber tires and their tractive force tend to ravel the macadam roads and to suck out the binder. The roads must be adapted to this new mode of travel.

"Various methods have been tried to keep the surface of the roads from being torn up. On old roads this has usually been done by treating the surface with oil, tar or some dust layer. In the building of new roads some bituminous binder has been used. This has either been spread upon the top of the stones, or the stones have been coated with the material before being spread upon the road.

"It is possible that some entirely new materials and new methods of constructing roads will be discovered.

"Any method that is used will undoubtedly increase the cost of construction and maintenance in the first instance, at any rate, but it may be found that the use of such binders results in longer life for the road and a consequent decreased yearly maintenance cost.

"It certainly seems probable that the use of these binders and dust layers, which are made absolutely necessary by the large amount of automobile travel, will result in making more and more miles of road dustless and conditions more comfortable for the other users of the highways as well as the people who dwell upon the roadsides. It is probable also that while the automobile will undoubtedly, for the time being at least, increase the cost of road building, the influence of automobile owners will lead to a great demand for better roads and better methods of construction, as did the bicycle, and will result in doing good to the community at large."

A FIND IN A BOOK.

One afternoon last week a young lady, a patron of the town library, took a book from one of the stacks and proceeded to glance through it, as is frequently done before deciding to take it. On turning over the leaves out fell a $5 bill much to her surprise. She notified the Librarian, who on ascertaining the name of the book, remembered who it was that had the book last, and thinking that this person might be the one who lost the bill, called the lady by telephone and asked her if she had lost a sum of money. She replied that her child had lost $2. It seems that the lady had given her offspring the money to make some purchases at the Centre and also commissioned her to take a book to the library. That the money might not be lost, the child placed it between the leaves of the book, and then forgot that she had done so.

W. P. Fox & Son are making a very large power installation for which arrangements have been made with the Edison Elec. Ill. Co. to furnish the service. One hundred and fifty Horse Power will be used to operate the Currying Shop and Tannery machinery. This total of horse power will be divided into several units so that the operation of the machinery can be carried on most efficiently and without any loss of power due to running unused shafting or because of a friction of useless belting.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

As the [illegible] Mr. Keith is playing at his Boston theatre a number of unusually important headline features, such as Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Gertrude Hoffmann, Denman Thompson, and others who have made the season a memorable one, the bills have really been noteworthy for the excellence of the all round vaudeville and it is remarkable that during the entire season not more than two or three acts have been repeated and then only because of the great demand for them on the part of the public.

The principal feature of the show for the coming week is not yet announced: but the surrounding bill is one that in itself would attract attention.

It will include Mary Norman, Tom Waters, a new comer, World and Kingston who have made a reputation as entertainers, Trovollo, the ventriloquist, the Gasch Sisters two of the most accomplished lady acrobats that have ever come to this country, Cotter and Boulden, and Dick Lynch.

QUEER JEWELRY.

Telegraph Wire Necklaces and Insulators as Earrings.

The aesthetic and decorative uses to which barbarians will turn objects which to civilized races are things of the humblest utility are amusingly illustrated by this "fashion note" from West Africa taken from an Italian newspaper:

For some time the officials of the German colony in Southwest Africa noticed that the telegraph wires and other accessories of the electrical plant disappeared as by magic immediately after they had been put up. The most diligent inquiries remained fruitless.

From other parts of the German possessions came reports of strange predilections for articles of German commerce, as, for example, rubber heels, garters, buckles and such things which the natives of those countries do not generally use.

The governor of the colony gave an entertainment one year in honor of the emperor's birthday and invited the chiefs of the different tribes to it. What was his surprise when he saw these native gentlemen appear with his stolen telegraph wires twisted round their illustrious necks. The higher the dignity the more rings of the wire were round the neck.

Inquiries were soon started in the outlying villages, and it came to light that the white china insulators of the telegraph poles had become earrings. A young lady of the highest distinction in native society wore a rubber heel hanging from her nose, and a young man who was a well known dandy wore dangling from his ears a pair of beautiful pink silk garters.

ABOUT MILK.

Source from Which Many Winchester People Receive Supply — Purity and Cleanliness Prime Factors.

No argument is needed to prove milk one of the most important articles of diet. It is found in every home; it is extensively used in cooking, and as a beverage, and is the principal food of infants and invalids; containing fats, carbohydrates and proteids, the three great elements required for the nutrition of the body, milk is recognized as a balanced and a scientific food; all of milk is easily digestible. it has no waste; its cheapness as a food is acknowledged.

The purpose, however, of this story is to present a modern method of handling milk and to emphasize the importance to the householder of a proper milk supply. Simple as are the principles involved to secure good milk, viz., cleanliness in production and maintenance at a low temperature, their application involves a very large measure of knowledge, capital, painstaking and persistent effort. A description follows of the handling of our milk from cow to consumer and an invitation is extended for inspection at any time of the dairies, of the methods surrounding the production, care, bottling and delivery of our milk, and of our New Sanitary Receiving Station.

SOURCE

Our supply of milk is from farms in Massachusetts and states adjoining. Nearness of production is not the most important requirement of a milk supply; more important is the cleanliness of its production and the thoroughness of its cooling. Moreover, milk produced in towns adjoining Boston (with a very few exceptions) cannot be delivered with greater despatch than milk from our territory. Furthermore, in nearby towns, cows cannot graze on hill pastures as in the country. The inspection, too, of dairies near at hand supplying individual dealers (a few excepted) is not maintained at so high a point as by a business highly organized. Cows kept in a large city are liable also to the unfavorable condition of being fed on fermenting brewer's grains or on other undesirable city products.

DAIRIES

Our dairies are under the frequent examination of our own inspectors. The cows are of mixed breeds, which are the most desirable for a general milk supply. The cow stables are clean and well lighted. Each producer is supplied with ice and a tank for the cooling of milk. Cans in which milk is shipped to us are sterilized in extensive apparatus in our city plant. The transportation of the milk to Boston is in iced refrigerator cars, mainly by express trains. In the supply of some large cities of the United States all transportation is by freight and no refrigeration is maintained in transit.

RECEIVING STATION

Upon arrival in Boston the milk cars are placed alongside our Receiving Station. This is of great advantage since it makes possible the rapid transference of the milk from car to building without rise in temperature of the milk. Our Receiving Station is new and is completely equipped for the sanitary handling of milk. For each department of the business a separate room is provided and study has been made to substitute, so far as possible, machine for human handling of milk.

The full cans taken from the cars are conveyed to the Receiving Room where the milk is inspected. This inspection is made without any possibility of contamination and after acceptance the milk is conducted to a room for temporary holding. The milk is there passed over extensive cooling coils to be reduced to a still lower temperature, and then to large metal receptacles in which the milk is refrigerated (and agitated by mechanical means to prevent the rising of cream). This room is kept for the exclusive purpose of storage and only the attendant has access to it.

Our milk is not submitted to the process of Pasteurization. We believe in the principle of securing milk clean, of keeping it cold, and of maintaining healthy employees, and not in the principle of attempting to purify a supply through Pasteurization.

CLEANSING OF CANS

The empty cans returned by the city delivery wagons are deposited in the can cleaning room, a room exclusively used for this purpose. The cleaning is done in an extensive apparatus in which the cans are carried inverted by a power conveyor over a line of sets of water forced at high pressure by pumps. The jets are, in order, cold water to rinse the cans, hot alkaline water, clean hot water, steam, and finally air to remove the steam and moisture from the cans. The cans emerge clean, dry, hot sterile. All cans sent to the producer for conveyance of milk to the city are submitted to this process.

CLEANSING OF BOTTLES

The empty bottles collected are delivered to the room set apart for the operation of their cleaning. The bottles and cases in which the bottles are packed are cleansed and sterilized by apparatus similar to that used in the treatment of cans. By employing machinery of this sort, the water can be brought to the boiling point, a temperature far higher than that tolerable in washing by hand. Then, too, the use of caustic alkalis is permitted which could not safely be touched by the hand. The bottles are delivered from the washer sterile and dry (not containing a residue of rinse water). The final inspection of the bottles is made by illuminating them with electric light.

BOTTLING

From the bottle washer the bottles emerge into the Bottling Room. Here the milk is drawn from the receptacles above into the bottle filler, an ingenious apparatus by which the bottles are filled automatically with milk. This system replaces filling by hand and eliminates to a great degree the personal factor. Instead of being handled individually the bottles are passed under the filling valves in cases of twelve. The cases of bottled milk are then run on a slide directly to the refrigerator in which the bottles are covered with cracked ice. In a similar manner and by similar apparatus the cans are filled and conveyed to refrigerators.

CREAM

Our cream is produced by modern methods in our own creameries in the country. Milk delivered at the creameries from the farms is at once passed through centrifugal machines revolving at very high speed, by which process the fat or cream is caused to rise to the top and is thus separated from the skim milk. Our cream is free from all thickeners, preservatives, or other forms of adulteration. It is supplied in three grades Light, Medium, and Heavy.

BUTTERMILK

The manufacture of butter is carried on in our Boston factory and can therefore be offered to customers direct from the churn.

Buttermilk can be supplied in the freshest condition possible in the city of Boston. For cooking, for a beverage, and for the feeding of infants or invalids by physicians' prescriptions, this supply is brought to attention.

MODIFIED MILK

Modified Milk is prepared for the feeding of infants. Normal cows' milk is not adapted for the feeding of infants under one year of age. In Modified Milk the percentage of sugar is increased and the percentage of proteids is decreased, and lime water is added so that its chemical composition shall conform to that of mothers' milk, which is the ideal food of infants. Our Modified Milk is prepared in three formulas.

No. 1 contains Fat 2 per cent., Sugar 5 per cent., Proteids .5 per cent., Lime Water 5 per cent.

No. 2 contains Fat 3 per cent., Sugar 6 per cent., Proteids 1 per cent., Lime Water 5 per cent.

No. 3 contains Fat 4 per cent., Sugar 7 per cent., Proteids 1.5 per cent., Lime Water 5 per cent.

Any of the above formulas is supplied in pint or in quart bottles. The milk at the base is produced under careful conditions. The cream is secured by gravity process. The best of milk sugar is used, and the preparation is made under the direction of our Laboratories (since much of this milk goes into homes not provided with refrigerators, this milk is Pasteurized).

CHEMICAL LABORATORY

The milk and cream distributed by us are subjected to the constant oversight of both Chemical and Bacetriological Laboratories. In the Chemical Laboratory analyses of all dairies are made to maintain milk up to the desired richness of Solids and Milk Fat. The work of the Chemist is furthermore a safeguard against forms of adulteration.

BACTERIOLOGICAL LABORATORY

Our Bacteriological Laboratory is provided with a microscope, a centrifuge, with apparatus for the sterilization of materials used in analysis, and with all the other accessories of a well equipped milk laboratory. By this analysis the cleanliness and safety of our milk supply are guarded. Repeated examinations of dairies are made to prove the cleanliness with which milk is secured, to test the temperature to which the milk has been cooled, and to control the number and species of bacteria present.

HEALTH SAFEGUARDS

The condition of the cows of our milk supply is under the control of our inspectors. Our contract with producers demands that no milk be shipped from farms at which any infectious disease exists. This protection is supplemented by co-operation with the Boards of Health of the towns in which our milk is produced. In the handling of milk in our city plant, every skill has been employed to reduce to a minimum human contact.

To get all possible protection all employes in the milk department have been examined by a physician and a system is in force for the report of any unfavorable symptoms—All men in our building are supplied with white suits washed and sterilized in a steam laundry operated by us in our building. Before beginning work each man puts on a clean working suit kept in his own locker. Lavatories and shower baths are provided.

Milk, Cream, Modified Milk, Certified Milk, Buttermilk are promptly delivered in wagons clean inside as well as outside in Boston and in all of its suburbs.

Fox Let Me Send A Typewriter for Free Trial
Not at Your Expense—But Mine

W. R. FOX, President, Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of — compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man — just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

You have no risk, assume no obligation, and I thank you before hand for the privilege. Just write me, personally.

W. R. FOX, PRESIDENT,
FOX TYPEWRITER CO.,
GRAND RAPIDS, - - - MICHIGAN.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The filibustering tactics of the legislators controlled by the liquor interests in their opposition to the "bar and bottle" bill, have made many who were formerly indifferent strong protagonists. While the opposition claims that it will not diminish the amount of liquor sold and will have no effect on the amount of drunkenness, they "do protest too much" their enthusiasm to put money into the city treasury which according to their argument is the only thing to be affected. A city official who is one of the Mayor's appointees came out in a long article in opposition to the bill which is, according to his story a most peculiar one since it will result in a great increase in the number of places where liquor is sold and a great decrease in the revenue accruing from license. The average person is not so able to be on both sides of the fence at once and may readily believe that it required considerable sampling of the goods sold at bar or in bottle to inspire such cogent reasoning.

Mrs Edith Smith Davis, national superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, has just completed a very successful round of the colleges and secondary institutions in this section. Her new magazine, the "Temperance Educational Quarterly," is a notable addition to the periodical literature of the temperance reform and is a good thing to put into the hands of the rising generation.

The Italian Congress against Tuberculosis has the subject of tuberculosis and alcoholism down on its program for the next session, recognizing the importance of the connection.

Mayor Gaynor has proved very clearly that there is a right and wrong way of enforcing the laws and great is the consternation in New York City at the new order of things which it is hoped will last.

Fine Job Printing AT STAR OFFICE

FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1910.

SINGLE COPIES, FIVE CENTS.

Reading and Wakefield had a "Clean-up Day" last Saturday. But why only one day once each year? It should be done as often as necessary.

Gov. Draper has proclaimed April 30 as Arbor Day. In view of the expensive pests a person must be gifted with courage to do much in the line of setting out new trees these times.

Thirteen dollars and sixty-two cents were collected by the manager of the local base ball team at the game played last week on Manchester Field,— not enough to pay actual expenses. Of course, if the spectators are not willing to pay the necessary expenses of games, the players, who furnish the entertainment, will not give their time and money. To bring a good team here requires that their expenses be paid, also that balls be provided. Therefore if we are to have games this summer the spectators will have to be more liberal.

Congressman McCall.

About this time, as the Almanac would say, look out for reports that Congressman McCall is to have serious oppositions to his return to Congress. We have heard this for quite a few years, and each year he is unanimously renominated, and also elected by an overwhelming vote. What little opposition that arises comes from a few Republicans who would like to succeed Mr. McCall and a few Democrats who are willing to seek notoritey by having their names placed upon the ballot; The Republican leaders in the district are for Mr. McCall, so, too, are the rank and file. His standing today was never higher, and he will again receive a unanimous renomination this coming autumn.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It is somewhat suspicious that two important fishing questions should appear upon the first page of the STAR of the same issue and inclines me to the conclusion that after brother Elder has settled the one he is now on he will be called upon to settle the other. Which is the more difficult problem is questionable.

Did you read the scorching article in last Saturday's Transcript on our legislators? It is a corker, timely and true and should have some effect for good. Representative White of Brookline brought it up in the House Monday on a question of personal privilege, but the body did not care to do anything about it. They knew it was true.

Although our polls were no greater last year than five years before, the valuation has increased over twenty per cent. in that period. It is evident we will not gain much in population by the census now being taken, judging by our assessors' poll list.

Probably the School Committee can explain it, but it seems strange that with almost no increase in the school enrolment in the last five years, the expenses have increased nearly tweny-five per cent. As this board is very fond of making figures and comparisons, possibly it might like to answer this.

The Senate rejected the grade crossing bill on Tuesday by a vote of 19 to 12, with several "duckers," after having ordered it to a third reading last week by a vote of 20 to 14. The bill was a bad one, our Commoner's opinion to the contrary notwithstanding.

How long will it be before we tackle seriously our pond problem? This is the greatest problem before this town and we ought to be doing something more than talking about it now and then in a desultory way. Committees report and disappear. Others are appointed, report after awhile and are discharged. But nothing is done. Not even a beginning made. Can nothing be done until the grade crossing question is settled.

Under Chapter 383 of this year a fee of five dollars may be charged for innholders and common victualler licenses, which have always been exempt from any fee heretofore, but the law does not take effect till June 12.

Chapter 141 prohibits the sending off of fire balloons, with a penalty up to $100 fine or imprisonment for a month or both.

Chapter 130, An Act Relative to the Appointment and Duties of Advisory or Finance Committees in Towns and to By-Laws concerning Such Committees.

Section 1. A town may by by laws provide for the appointment and duties of advisory or finance committees, who may consider any or all municipal questions for the purpose of making reports or recommendations to the town. Said by laws may provide that such committee appointments may continue for a term or terms not exceeding three years from the date that their appointment takes effect.

Section 2. By-laws relating to advisory or finance committees heretofore adopted by towns, concerning which no action has been taken by the attorney-general, shall take effect upon their approval and publication as provided by law.

Section 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

It would seem desirable to make a by-law at our coming town meeting prescribing the duties of our Ap. Com. and how it shall be selected. We certainly should have a printed report for the annual town meeting, which we did not have this year.

The absence of the lobby leader this session of the General Court has not been all to the good by any manner of means. There are many representatives who may be depended upon to vote on the wrong side unless they are put right and others do not know which is the right side until told.

The Suffrage movement is growing in Massachusetts as everywhere. One striking evidence of this is the many thousands of Massachusetts names on the mammoth petition presented to Congress last week. Another is the great interest shown in Springfield during the week's meetings recently held there by talented members of the Massachusetts and Boston Associations.

Workers in factories and stores, the Board of Trade and the Woman's Club listened, many most earnestly, to the principles for which the Associations stand, presented in many different ways by many speakers. The attitude of the leading papers of Springfield was sympathetic the most influential papers giving the fullest reports.

The literature freely circulated was gladly taken. All such presentation induces thought, which is the end sought, as the so-called arguments against women's voting so easily fall before the Democratic ideas—a government of the whole people by the whole people, not by one class, sex or race over another.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

As a citizen of Winchester I would like to say a few words in behalf of our Special Officer, Hugh Donaghey, whose duty as patroling the Plains each Sunday has been much regarded by me for his great bravery and faithfulness to duty, regarding his work last Sunday in bringing to justice three infuriated Italians. I hope that in the near future that Special Officer Donaghey will be respected for the faithful duty he has done.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Winchester Union next month completes its thirty-fourth year of existence as a live factor in the improvement of the community. It is to celebrate the occasion by a meeting at the home of Mrs. Jane Herrick of 22 Herrick street, who has been identified with the Union from its early days and is still actively interested in its work.

Owing to the fact that the president, Mrs. Hamilton, is to sail from New York May 14, for Glasgow where she is to represent the State Union as a delegate at the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union, the anniversary meeting to be held a week earlier than usual to enable her to be present. Members and friends are asked to remember the date, Friday, May 6, 3 p. m. The speaker of the afternoon is Mrs. Clara A. Hogan, president of the Watertown Union and county superintendent of scientific temperance instruction. Mrs. Augusta J. Brigham of Malden, the county secretary, will conduct the devotional exercises. It is hoped every member will make an effort to be present or send a word of greeting.

The United States is to be well represented at Glasgow this year, an unusually large number of delegates having planned to go, many of them also taking in the great missionary meeting at Edinburgh. The president of the Massachusetts Union, Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, is to be there on her homeward way from a world circling W. C. T. U. missionary tour, nearly two years in length.

BASE BALL.

Tech. Sophomores 8 Winchester 7.

Last Saturday afternoon the High school lost another game through errors and inability to hit at the right time. Their opponents, the Tech. Sophomores, did not show much speed, and the victory should have been an easy one for the local team. Goddu started in the box for Winchester and held the Sophomores safely while his team mates scored six runs during the first three innings. Then Winchester's infield started to accumulate some errors, thereby presenting the college boys with three runs. In the sixth three more runs came across and Tuck relieved Goddu as pitcher. Winchester scored one in the seventh and their opponents two in the following innings, leaving the score 8-7 for the Tech. Sophomores. In the ninth Winchester had a fine chance to win the game, but failed to do so. Hurd got a safe hit, stole second and was advanced by LeDuc's hit. Flaherty came to bat with two out and the chances for a run looked good, when he sent up a weak fly which the first baseman easily captured.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

It was in "The County Fair" that Neil Burgess made his greatest success as a female impersonator, and John Craig may be expected to make no less a hit with that play when he produces it at the Castle Square next Monday. "The County Fair" is the work of Charles Barnard, a well known journalist and writer of books, and into it he has put an ingenious plot and a collection of quaint and eccentric rural New England characters. The first act shows the interior of Aunt Abby's home in winter, with every detail minutely and realistically carried out, while the acts that follow show the exterior of the farmhouse, the third act the interior of a barn, and the fourth the county fair that gives the play its name, with the famous horse-race scene.

All the characters will be well assigned to the different members of the John Craig Stock Company.

POLITICAL DRIFT SEEMS CHANGED

Better Outlook For Republicans Is Predicted

DEMOCRATS ARE HOPEFUL

Plenty of Evidence of Fight Between Vahey and Foss For the Democratic Nomination For Governor—Interest In Report of Living-Cost Commission

There has been quite a deal of interest in the various measures pending in the state legislature affecting the New Haven railroad. Now that the attorney general has decided that it would be unconstitutional to exempt from taxation the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding company, Governor Draper has asked the great and general court to consider what it is possible to do in order that the New Haven may be permitted to make extensive improvements on the line of the Boston and Maine which have been contemplated for so long. It is, at present, uncertain what the legislature will decide to do about the matter, if anything.

There seems to be a distinct change in political feeling here in Massachusetts in the last few weeks, and the situation, certainly to Republicans, seems brighter. The Republican leaders recognize that it will be necessary to make an extremely wise and energetic campaign this fall in order to carry the state ticket to victory. They say, however, that there will be a large vote, owing to the fact that congressmen are to be chosen as well as state officers, and that many who do not usually take a strong interest in political affairs, except in presidential elections, will see the necessity this year of going to the polls and voting, in order to protect their own interests as wage-earners, manufacturers, and business men.

The leaders seem to believe that Republicans will hesitate long before casting their votes for the Democratic ticket when they realize that by so doing they may precipitate another industrial crash, such as threw hundreds of thousands of able-bodied men out of work in 1893 and 1894. At the same time, there are others who feel that only such a lesson as was given the people in those disastrous years of Democratic administration will bring them to their senses. These men feel that the minds of the people have been so filled with misrepresentations as to the reasons for the high cost of living, that only a practical demonstration in the way of hard times will convince them of their present welfare.

Foss Forges Ahead In State

The prediction is now freely made in Democratic circles that Congressman Eugene N. Foss of Boston will be their candidate for governor this fall. The Democratic state committee and the Democratic machine in the city of Boston are both practically solid for his nomination. It is inconceivable, under these circumstances, that Ex-Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown, who has been the standard bearer of the party for the last two years, could possibly put up a successful fight. It is generally admitted that Mr. Vahey, during his two years' candidacy, has made a great many friends and attracted to himself a large personal following. That he came so near winning last fall was a surprise in a great many quarters. With the single exception of the Douglas year of 1904 no Democratic candidate made so strong a run as Mr. Vahey since the days of William E. Russell in the early '90's.

Some of the friends of Mr. Vahey already see the handwriting on the wall, and realize that he is to be forced off the ticket in order to make a place for Congressman Foss. They believe that Mr. Vahey's chief fault is the fact that he is not as well equipped with the sinews of war—in other words, is not so plentifully supplied with the almighty dollar as is his opponent. It takes money to run a campaign. It takes a great many thousand dollars to run such a canvass as the Democratic party conducted in Massachusetts last fall, and Mr. Vahey has no money. In a general way, perhaps, this is not so grievous a fault, but in a political campaign it is not regarded as a virtue by the Democracy.

The Living-Cost Committee

It is quite likely that the commission appointed by Governor Draper to investigate the high prices in the cost of living will be ready to report early in May. The committee has made an exhaustive study of the situation, has conducted investigations into prices of commodities, into the question of the law of supply and demand regulating these prices, and has tried to get at the bottom of the whole question, so far as it was able to do so. The commission has summoned a large number of people to appear and give evidence before it in relation to the subject under investigation, and has aimed to secure accurate and authoritative information from every source available. Men of the highest ability in business, finance, manufactures, labor and economics have gladly given their views on the matter, and the report of the commission should be one of the most interesting made by any investigating body in this commonwealth in a great many years.

It is well known that political economists throughout the country are pratically unanimous in their opinion that the enormous increase in the production and mintage of gold is almost wholly responsible for the present high prices. In the last fifteen years, according to the reports of the United States treasury department, the gold supply of the world has more than doubled, and as a result the purchasing power of the gold dollar has greatly decreased. Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks of the department of economics and politics at Cornell university in a recent article declared that the increase in prices is due neither to the tariff or the trusts.

Whether on not the state commission to investigate the great rise in the cost of living will agree with the conclusions of the economists cannot, of course, be known, and for that very reason its conclusions are awaited with interest.

Thayer's Position Is Uncertain

There are conflicting reports regarding the position of former Congressman John R. Thayer of Worcester. He has been credited with a willingness to run for congress against Congressman Charles G. Washburn in the Third district, but he declines to affirm or deny. There are some who suspect that he would be better pleased to run for governor than for anything else, and that he has no wish to go to congress again. The Third district is believed by the Democrats to be pretty surely Republican, under any ordinary circumstances, and it is not so tempting to Mr. Thayer, perhaps, for that reason, although he may finally decide to run if nothing better is in sight.

Ex-Representative Ames of North Easton is said to be a candidate for congress in the Fourteenth district, and he may figure in the nominating contest with Judge R. O. Harris, Dr. Wheatly and other Republican aspirants there.

A RAP AT THE DOCTORS.

DIRTY MILK AND THE DOCTOR.

Dear Doctor:—Do you fully appreciate your responsibility as a factor in the milk situation? During the past ten years, owing to the efforts of the State Board of Health, some local boards of Health, certified milk commissions, individual milk contractors and associations for the prevention of infant mortality, the general standard of milk furnished to the people of the State has been considerably improved. Conditions are, however, still far below what they should be, and the consensus of opinion is that little change for the better can be expected until the consumer becomes more fully educated as to the great importance in its relation to health, of the purity of his milk supply. In this education the physician can exercise an influence equalled by no other agency. It is a fact to be regretted that physicians themselves, as a class, do not take the trouble to investigate the conditions under which the milk they drink is produced and the manner in which it is subsequently handled. The medical profession is, therefore, much at fault and can be blamed rightfully for a considerable portion of the large infant mortality due contaminated milk.

It is time that the doctors awoke to a proper sense of their responsibility in this most important matter. If you will take the trouble to make a personal investigation of the dairy which supplies you with milk; or, if this is not possible, if you will take the trouble to investigate the reputation of the milkman who supplies you with milk; or, if you will take the trouble, as you undoubtedly should in every instance, to investigate the milk supply which is to nourish your infant patients, and if, having made this investigation, you will recommend only those dealers who exercise a reasonable degree of cleanliness in their business, you will perform a duty which has long been neglected.

If, in carrying out this suggestion, it appears that increased cleanliness can be secured only by paying an increased price for milk, do not let this fact be a cause for discouragement, but be yourself willing to pay the increased price and advise your patients to do the same, in order that the infant mortality in this State, which is high and without justification, may be reduced to its proper figure.

Yours very truly,
Mark W. Richardson,
Secretary.

Just a Fit.

In the Ex-Libris Journal an amusing anecdote is given of a man anxious for a coat of arms and fortunate in finding one. A secondhand bookseller bought at a country sale some 300 volumes of handsome but unsalable old sermons, books on theology and the like.

He placed a number of these outside his shop. Soon afterward a well dressed man entered and said, "Have you any more of this kind of books with this shield on them?" pointing to the bookplate attached, which bore the arms and name of a good old country family.

"That box, sir, is full of books from the same house," answered the bookseller.

"What do you ask for them?" inquired the man. "I'm going back to Chicago, and I want to take some books, and these will just fit me, name and all. Just you sort out all that have that shield and name, but don't you send any without that nameplate, for that's my name too. I reckon this old fellow with the daggers and roosters might have been related to me some way."

Picking a Horse.

A British cavalry officer, speaking of horses, said:

"Give me a free hand and I should pick a roan—that is, for good temper and quick learning. Dark grays and blacks are mostly strong and hardy, and so are dark chestnuts. As a general rule, light chestnuts and light bays are nervous and delicate. A rusty black's a sulky pig nine times out of ten. Then again, there are 'white stockings,' as they call them. You know the old saying, 'One white leg's a bad un, two white legs you may sell to a friend, three white legs you may trust for a time, four white legs you may lay your life on.'"

This does not agree with an old Yankee saying:

One white foot, buy him.
Two white feet, try him.
Three white feet, look well about him.
Four white feet, go on without him.

Now, however, the American idea is similar to that of the sergeant, and they say, "Four white feet you can stake your life on him."—London Spectator.

A Soldier's Beginnings.

We were visiting at Sandringham. Sir Evelyn Wood, who is very deaf, crept up as near as he could to the musicians, and in one of the pauses he said to me, "Are you fond of music?" I answered, "Yes." "Do you play anything?" I said, "No." "Well," he went on, "I am so fond of it that, would you believe it, I began to practice scales at twenty-four. But one day my sister came up and put her hand on my shoulder and said, 'My dear boy, you had better give that up,' and so I did." He also told me that he began life as a sailor, then went to the bar and finally entered the army. The only profession he had not tried was the church, and his enemies say he would have tried that, only he did not know what church to choose.—"Life of Sir William Broadbent."

The Falling Branch.

In the grounds of Dalhousie castle, Scotland, is said to be a famous example of the sympathy of the vegetable world with human death. It was anciently believed in the neighborhood that a branch always fell from this oak when a member of the family died. Apparently the fall of the original tree early in the eighteenth century did not break the sympathy, for a new one sprang from the old root, and it is upon record that as lately as 1874 an old forester, seeing a branch fall from this on a still day, cried, "The laird's deed noo!" News of the eleventh Earl of Dalhousie's death soon followed.

"Mistah Howjames, may I ahsk yo' to point out de distinction 'tween a Roman stoic philosophah an' a metrical narration in lofty an' impressive style of some great historical event, de same being a paht of de scholastic co'se prescribed in our institutions of learning?"

"No, Mr. Ticklowell; I confess my inability to discern the points of differentiation. Will you set forth categorically the reason or reasons why a Roman stoic philosopher should not be confounded with a lofty and impressive metrical narrative of some great historical, mythological or imaginary event, legend or tradition, et cetera?"

"Yes, suh; de one am Epictetus, an' de uddah am an epic taught us."

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have the pleasure of announcing that the renowned scholar and essayist, Professor Wendell Osgoodson, will recite at this stage of the proceedings his celebrated monologue on 'The Apotheosis of the Ephemeral.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Two Battles.

Porfirio Diaz gained national prominence and won his spurs at the battle of Puebla, where the Liberal forces made a gallant but ineffectual stand against the French, who had invaded Mexico for the purpose of erecting a throne for Maximilian. Notwithstanding the fact that the Mexican forces were defeated, their defense against superior numbers was so gallant that the anniversary of the battle of the 5th of May became a national holiday in Mexico.

A brusque American once asked Diaz, "Why do you Mexicans celebrate a defeat when you know that the French took Puebla?"

President Diaz, with a twinkle in his eye, replied, "Perhaps we have imitated the Americans even to the extent of celebrating our defeats, for I have been told that the British defeated the colonists at Bunker Hill, and yet you built a monument to commemorate the event."

Danger of Poor Teeth.

Just what effect on the stomach is produced by the constant swallowing bacteria and pus from diseased teeth, mingled with decomposing particles of food, we are unable to determine, but it is reasonable to suppose that gastric disturbances are greatly aggravated if not induced by so doing. In every community there are those who are enthusiasts on the subject of pure air and wholesome food, but whose mouths are in such a neglected condition that the air which passes through them is almost as polluted as that of a crowded tenement, and every mouthful of food swallowed carries with it to the stomach millions of bacteria. The almost entire futility of sterilizing articles of diet for patients in whose mouth chronic abscesses exist or whose teeth are covered with tartar mixed with mucus and food in a state of decomposition need hardly be mentioned.—Boston Herald.

Would Be Taken Care Of.

"I fear I am not worthy of you."

"Never mind about that," responded the young lady with the square jaw. "Between mother and myself I imagine we can effect the necessary improvements."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Home Course In Domestic Science

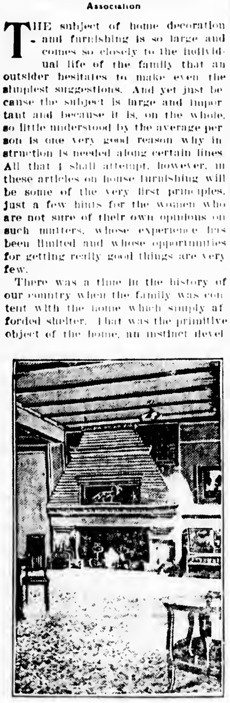
XIV.—Principles of Home Decoration.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

THE subject of home decoration and furnishing is so large and comes so closely to the individual life of the family that an outsider hesitates to make even the simplest suggestions. And yet just because the subject is large and important and because it is, on the whole, so little understood by the average person is one very good reason why instruction is needed along certain lines. All that I shall attempt, however, in these articles on house furnishing will be some of the very first principles, just a few hints for the women who are not sure of their own opinions on such matters, whose experience has been limited and whose opportunities for getting really good things are very few.

There was a time in the history of our country when the family was content with the home which simply afforded shelter. That was the primitive object of the home, an instinct developed from early ages, when caves, rocks and later mounds of earth and wood furnished the dwelling place for the family. Undeveloped were the instincts which prompted primeval man to seek a place of shelter for his own little circle of human beings. They were, however, the beginning of the highest and strongest social institution in the world, that of family life and the private home. Now conditions have changed, people have developed and the home must be something more than a place of shelter. It is still the keystone of the nation, the place where those qualities which make for good citizenship are developed, and therefore it is worthy of all the thought, all the intelligent planning and the noblest feelings that can be brought to it. The true home should reflect the character of the people who inhabit it, and above all else it should be of such a nature as to bring out the best there is in each individual beneath its roof. And a home in the true sense of the word can and does do this.



COMFORTABLE LIVING ROOM

Things Not to Do.

Some of the most glaring faults in home furnishing are the commonest, those committed thoughtlessly or perhaps, to be more exact, those prompted by the dictates of fashion. It is so much easier very often to put into our homes and wear on our persons, even to put into our manner, those things which fashion says are right rather than to adopt those things which suit our own individuality, environment and needs.

Just because fashion states that a certain kind of wall paper, a certain color in carpets or certain styles in furniture are the "latest" and "newest" is no reason in the world why they should be put into your homes unless they will be suitable there. Yet very many times the decree goes forth and is followed blindly, with the result that beauty, harmony and repose are qualities totally ignored in many homes. Some one has said: "The world is full of beautiful things if one has money to buy them. The world is also full of ugly things—things false in art, in truth and beauty. They are things made to sell with only this idea behind them." So do not be tempted by the too common expression, "It is the very latest style," when buying furnishings for your home or wearing apparel for yourself unless the "very latest thing" has beauty and suitability to recommend it.

To have something like every one else is also another fault made in house furnishing. That is one reason why so many country houses try to reproduce on a cheaper scale the city home and why there are so many unattractive homes in smaller towns and country places. Ignorance of or indifference to color and color harmony is another cause for lack of beauty in furnishing.

Again, pictures, furniture, ornaments and everything else are brought into our home without a thought of articles already there. The new and the old are combined without questioning whether one suits the other or not, and in consequence both are spoiled.

Some Rules to Follow.

To furnish a home satisfactorily one must always consider the style of house, its location, the use to which it is to be put, as well as the cost of its furnishing. Not a single piece of furniture should be bought without some thought as to whether it is suitable for the home and its use; also whether it will be in harmony with furniture already in it.

When a woman has sufficient money at her command and can furnish the house completely from cellar to attic it is an easy matter to give the contract into the hands of a professional, occasionally with good results, sometimes disappointment. But when one must consider dollars carefully and furnish one room at a time possibly only getting the absolute necessities for that room at first, it is a harder problem to solve. The latter woman, however, is the one whom I should like to help. Remember, then, in the first place not to buy anything unless it is appropriate to the use for which it is intended as well as for the completeness of the room. Remember to always select the real and substantial in preference to the showy imitation. If it is a question of tables, buy the simplest form, made of perfect wood with best finish, rather than the elaborately carved, showy piece flimsily put together. A good enameled iron or plain brass bedstead will be infinitely more satisfactory in the end than one of cheap inlaid wood.

A large expenditure of money does not always imply a satisfactory home. Truth and harmony, the elements of beauty, may be secured in the most inexpensive cottage as well as in the palace.

The ideal country house is built on broad, generous lines. Never should it have the high, narrow, cramped roof frequently seen on crowded city streets, where space is at a premium. It should have also roomy verandas and porches, low ceilings, wide, low windows and hospitable looking doors opening into comfortable, homelike rooms. Such a house should be sincere in its furnishings, should not suggest imitation in any way. This impression of genuineness can be given by inexpensive material, even by homemade furniture, very much better than by showy workmanship carelessly performed.

Treatment of High Ceilings.

Some of the houses built forty or fifty years ago have ceilings too high to express real comfort. A room 10 by 12 feet with a twelve foot ceiling has the appearance of being extremely narrow, while a room the same size with a nine foot ceiling may give a real cozy effect. What is to be done with the high ceiling? The simplest way out of the difficulty is to cheat the eye into forgetfulness of those extra three feet. This can be done by using horizontal lines in the wall decoration. Either the ceiling paper can be brought down on the wall to the distance of three feet, the upper part of the wall may be finished with a frieze, or three feet at the base may be covered with canvas or wood paneling, then six feet of figured paper, finished with a narrow picture molding and joining the ceiling paper which has been dropped three feet. Any of these methods will give the impression of a lower ceiling.

Borders have their place in wall decoration, but they should not be used in rooms with low ceilings. Such a room should be decorated with striped paper and have the wall covering extend close up to the angle formed by the ceiling, and here the picture molding is put on. Never use wide stripes or large designs of any kind on a small room, and bear in mind that simplicity in design and color is a good rule to follow in wall decorations as well as in any part of house furnishing.

Good and Bad In Wall Covering.

The owner of a new house is inclined to leave the walls undecorated for the first few months at least after the house is finished. His reason may be the added expense of decoration, or he may think he prefers the plain white wall just for its simplicity and because it is sanitary. If the walls have been finished with a smooth white surface it is more than likely every one will weary of them in a short time. Plain white walls give the feeling of being shut in a box, as if there were a limit to space. A smooth white surface also tires the eyes. Not so the rough plasters, which are quite generally used nowadays. And if to the plaster has been added a little color, a hint of gray or deep cream, the effect is satisfying for a long time. Indeed, for almost any room in the house, with the possible exception of the reception room or parlor, this rough surface simply tinted makes a most desirable wall finish. The smooth wall may be decorated in almost any color with calcimine or muresco, giving a pleasing background for pictures. Whatever the wall decoration, it should be chosen with relation to the lighting of the room; also to the furnishings.

If the floor covering has considerable design and color, then the wall should have but one tint, and if the draperies are figured again be careful to select a flat color for the walls. Among the chief objections to wall paper are the exaggerated designs and too conspicuous colors, which are common in most of them. The size of the room and the kind of floor covering should largely determine whether the wall should be decorated with a paper having a pattern or a plain design. It is so much easier to err on the side of too much design than too little that unless you are sure of your knowledge of color combination it is generally better to keep to plain effects.

HOME THE PLACE TO SPEND MONEY.

If Jim Billson is your neighbor and a good, hardworking man; if he does his best to live here on an honest, up-right plan; if his wife and yours are friendly and his lads play with your boys, don't you think you ought to help him through the world's turmoil and noise?

If he's fixed it up to serve you with the goods that you require; if his prices are but fair ones and are not a penny higher than the prices in the city, do you think it's fair to him, to be sending out of town for goods instead of helping Jim?

Don't you know the trade that stays here is the thing that helps the town, pays the taxes and expenses, keeps the cost of living down? Think it over, turn it over in your own fair reasoning mind, and if tempted to trade elsewhere, why, just put the thought behind!

Help the town that you reside in! Thus is your plain duty shown. The big city doesn't need you half as much as does your own. Join the boosters' club and help us build it up and make it grow. All it needs is lots of workers who will give it half a show.

Keep your cash a circulating where it brings the best return (that's unless you have enough of it to throw away or burn,) for the dollar in the home town is the one that does the work while the one that's sent away from there is nothing but a shirk.

Yes, the catalogue's enticing that mail order houses send but you'll find there's nothing really cheap about it in the end. The closer that the dollar sticks the farther will it go. Just try spending it at home and give your merchant friend a show.

Every bit you help your neighbor takes the burden off your back, for it helps him to repay in kind, when your affairs are slack. It's a mighty sorry business saying "howdy do" by mail to the man who can't repay you with a smile for every sale.

When you're tempted by the bargains that are spread out to your view, and it seems so very easy just to "send your order through," take a minute to consider if your neighbor cannot sell the same goods or just as good ones for a price that suits as well.

"Boosters" that's are all the "go" now in the towns throughout the land and there's praise for the uplifting for the willing, working hand. Why let's [illegible] doing half so lifting half so helpful or so strong as the hand of him who's willing to assist his town along.

BOSTON THEATRE.

A glorious welcome was given to Jos. M. Gaites' musical comedy offering, "Three Twins," which on last Monday night came back to Boston beginning the second engagement of the season at the Boston Theatre where last fall it gained such a large measure of success during its first presentation in this city.

Clifton Crawford heads the cast of players and is a capital comedian. His inimitable fun making and singing and his dancing command to get him the heartiest praise which he was first seen in the character of "Tom Stanhope." [illegible], who has the role of the laughing, romping, care free "Molly" is one of the best dancers of the day and has a particularly pleasing singing voice. Jos. Allen, Ralph L. Locke, W. H. Vedder, Hugh Fay, Daisy Leon, Della Niven and Elsie Mynne are other favorites. The chorus is as large as ever and as pretty and dances and sings with vim and effect. Matinees are being given on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

I manufacture all kinds of good mattresses and sell them at retail. I find that among the best sellers, or those that are the most in demand are, first, my combination mattress, made of African and Poplar Fibres, with a good thick layer of clean cotton on the top and bottom, made up in the celebrated Webster ticking in two parts, and sold for

This mattress is made to sleep on and for wear, is well, and is the best mattress that can be made for the price.

Another mattress that is fast growing in favor is one that I make of Silk Floss, the same kind that is used in sofa pillows. Silk floss is a non-absorbent vegetable fibre which grows near the equator. It never gets lumpy, and is extremely light and fluffy. The strong points of a Silk Floss Mattress are its lightness and softness, great qualifications for a mattress.

The Price is $12.00

I use the best [illegible] on this mattress, and if you have one in your guest chamber you need not hesitate to ask your guests how they rested.

A mattress that has always proved satisfactory in every way and has added more to my reputation for making first class mattresses than any other, is the mattress that I make of pure South American horse hair. This hair is taken from the manes and tails of live horses, and is thoroughly cleansed and purified, rendering it absolutely clean and wholesome. It does not absorb moisture, and will last a lifetime. It has great resilient qualities, and for sound sleep has no equal.

Price $20.00

Made in best ticking, two parts, [illegible] box, and full weight.

FIRE PROTECTION.

Taking other countries, more advanced in that line, as standards, America has much to learn regarding fire prevention.

Improper building ordinances, faulty laws and lack of fire prevention are among the chief reasons given why the fire waste in this country is far in excess of that of other countries.

In the meantime the fire insurance business is growing, for foresighted people will have protection.

This agency's business has been built up by the fair treatment it accords to the public and the promptness with which the companies it handles meet their fire losses.

Come in and be insured.

IN BUYING GROCERIES

the careful housekeeper makes every cent count.

But she can't make the pennies count by trading at every store in town, spending half her time looking for the cent cheaper article.

She can save money only by searching out a reliable grocer and sticking to him.

The money is saved by trading with the groceryman who sells dependable goods.

Dependable goods are not to be obtained in every store.

Goodness and cheapness appeal to every condition of humanity.

There are no fancy prices here, and everybody is treated alike.

Our goods are cheap because they're good — it's not the price that makes them cheap.

Goods that are bought so cheaply that they have to be thrown away on account of poor quality are the most dearly bought goods.

Better pay a fair price in the first place and get the dependable kinds. You can't buy any other kinds here. We don't keep them.

WINCHESTER'S HOME.

A Report of the Work for the Past Year.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Home for Aged People in Winchester was held in the Town Hall Monday evening. The work of the past year showed but little variation from other years, the affairs moving along in the usual systematic and orderly condition. During the year there has been a loss by death of ten members of the corporation, with an accession of but few members. President Hall urged those present to make an effort to increase the membership so that its enrollment would reach the one thousand mark. This he believed could be easily done, and the running expenses of the Home assured.

Mr. Hall, on his re-election to the presidency, was given a vote of thanks upon motion of Mr. Prime, for his long and untiring interest in the Home. The following is the report of the directors:

DIRECTOR'S REPORT.

To the Corporation of the Home for Aged People in Winchester:

The Directors of the Home present their seventeenth annual report.

The year which has just closed has been an unusually quiet one, still we can look back on a record of considerable work accomplished. The Home has now been in existence so long that its machinery runs easily and smoothly, and one year's record differs but little from another. This year it has been necessary to make a good many repairs and considerable time and thought, as well as money, have been spent in making the building comfortable and attractive. It has been freshly painted outside and refurnished to some extent within, much to the pleasure of those who make it their home. The number of inmates remains the same as last year. For a short time during the fall, Mrs. Raiche made her home with us, but she left in October to live with a niece in Canada.

The Home has been generously remembered by the people of the town as in years past, and we gratefully acknowledge the contributions of fruit, flowers, food, etc., which have added much to the pleasure and comfort of the inmates.

We have had but four additions to our corporate membership during the year, and, on the other hand have lost by death ten, of whom several have been strong supporters of our work during its entire existence. We are desirous of increasing our membership if possible, thereby increasing our income and at the same time broadening the influence of the Home. We urge that every member make an effort to interest others in the work which we are carrying on. There have been several changes in the make-up of the Board during the year. Owing to a long continued absence from Winchester our Treasurer, Mr. Ordway tendered his resignation last fall and his work has since been carried on by Miss Helen Hall. Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Rich were unable to give as much time to the work as they felt was necessary, and therefore handed in their resignations. Mrs. Barta was chosen to fill Mrs. Johnson's position, but owing to the fact that only a short time remained until the annual meeting, Mr. Rich's position has not been filled.

In closing we again acknowledge the support and interest of the people of the town, without which it would not be possible to carry on this good work, which we feel stands nearly at the head of the town's philanthropies.

Respectfully submitted,
H. C. Sanborn, Secretary.

TEACHERS' CLUB.

The members of the Teachers' Club will hold one of their social meetings Friday evening, May 6th, at the High School Hall. One of the pleasant features of the evening will be the presenting of a farce entitled "The Man From Brandon."

The cast is as follows:

Mr. Thompson of the High School takes the part of the captain of Brandon football team. Mr. Frank Davis will assist the members of the club by taking the part of an M. D., from Kirby Insane Hospital. Mr. Hetflon of the Wadleigh School appears as a student of Brandon, and nephew of Miss Janet. The part of this maiden Aunt is taken by Miss Davis, of the Washington School. Miss Jepson of the Gifford, takes the part of Miss Janet's niece, while Miss Pierce of the Wadleigh School is her friend. Miss Janet's maid will be Miss Harriman of the High School, and last, but not least, comes Fido, who will be appreciated by all.

This will be the last indoor meeting held by the club this school year. A large attendance is expected.

CASSIDY CASE

Jury Awards Him the Sum of $5,000.

A jury in the third session of the superior court at East Cambridge Wednesday, judge Dana presiding, awarded the full amount in the suit of Mark H. Cassidy against the town of Winchester. He was employed as a laborer by the town. On July 14, 1900, while at work on Highland avenue for the sewer department, a blast was discharged, and he claims that he was injured by flying stones and other debris. The amount awarded was $5,000. This case has been before the courts several times, and each time Mr. Cassidy has been given damages. Twice the award was set aside as being excessive, the last time it being for $4,000. It is understood that the town will file a motion for a new trial, claiming that this latest award is excessive.

UNITARIANS CONFERENCE

The spring meeting of the South Middlesex conference of Unitarian churches opened in the Unitarian church Wednesday morning. This is the 130th session of the conference, and delegates were present representing many churches in this vicinity.

The morning session opened at 10.30 with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. Marion F. Ham of Reading. This was followed by a business session and an address on "The Present Crisis of the Christian Religion" by Rev. Ambrose W. Vernon of Brookline.

The afternoon session was devoted to the work of the Woman's alliance under the direction of Mrs. Prescott Keyes of Concord. Rev. Loren B. Macdonald of Concord delivered an address. The closing devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Charles A. Allen of Waverly.

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

The club will hold its last meeting of the season on Monday afternoon when Miss Grace Chamberlain will recite "The Taming of the Shrew." Mrs. Gilpatrick will sing. This will be an open meeting, anyone, not a member, being admitted for twenty five cents.

Club members are reminded that all dues must be paid "at or before the first meeting in May, or membership shall be forfeited."

MIXED TOURNAMENT CLOSES.

With the postponed game between teams 4 and 5, the mixed bowling tournament at the Calumet Club closed on Tuesday night. The teams participating have been composed of three ladies and three gentlemen and the games have been very popular, occupying three nights each week since March.

The first team prize was won by team 4—J. H. Gerlach, capt., Mrs. Gerlach, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Farmer. This team won 30 and lost 10 points.

The second team prize was won by team 8—Dr. H. J. Olmsted, capt., Mrs. Olmsted, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Flanders, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Wilson Jr.

The first individual prize was awarded to the lady making the greatest number of strikes during the tournament, and Miss Elinor Barta and Mrs. J. H. Gerlach tied for the honor, each making three strikes. Miss Barta held the first position alone until Tuesday night, when Mrs. Gerlach made one more strike, tieing her.

The second individual prize was won by Mrs. B. F. Miner. This prize was for the greatest number of spares, and Mrs. Miner had eight to her credit.

Following are the scores of the final games, standing of the teams and individual strikes and spares.

GIRLS GYMNASTIC EXHIBITION.

Last Friday evening the girls of the two gymnasium classes in the Winchester High school gave their semi-annual exhibition in the gymnasium. A large number of friends and parents were assembled and had the seating capacity been greater, doubtless many who could not be accommodated, would have been present. The exhibition showed the nature of the work that the girls have been doing, twice a week, throughout the year, and reflects great credit on the teacher, Miss Adeline Tripple, through whose conscientious efforts, the success of the evening was possible.

The first event on the program was a marching and wand drill by the second class which was precisely and accurately carried out by the various members.

This was followed by asthetic dancing by both classes.

The pursuit relay race was won by the first class, consisting of the juniors and seniors. Their opponents, while almost as fast in the straight stretches, had difficulty in rounding the corners, several slipping, and through this they lost the race.

The flag relay race and the goal relay race were both won by the upper classes, but in the former event three trials were necessary to decide a winner; while in the latter, the junior and senior girls, several of whom have played on the first basket ball team, had less difficulty in caging the ball.

Then came the apparatus work, consisting of work with the horse, jumping with rings, and a drill on the parallel bars.

In the running high jump, three feet seven was cleared by all the members of the first class, but some of the more ambitious girls have previously done four feet five.

Two special features were furnished, in the work of Madeline Little with the travelling rings and Agnes Murphy with the double rings.

Two dances, "Maid of the Mist" and "The American Beauty" followed and the evening closed by a basket ball game between the first and second teams, won by the former 34-10.

Those who took part were: Dorothy Wellington, Lillian Winn, Eunice Homer, Esther Somes, Marguerite Waldmyer, Gladys Spaulding, Esther Parshley, Mary Flinn, Constance Lane, Dorothy Nash, Annette Symmes, Agnes Murphy, Irene Casler, Helen Sweeney, Ebba Mortensen, Rachel Emery, Esther Ayer, Barbara Wellington, Helen Rowe, Lillian Knapp, Madeline Little, Theresa Murphy and Ethel McEwen.

MRS. MARY R. SIMONDS.

Mrs. Mary R. Simonds, passed away Friday, April 29th, in her eighty-second year, after an illness of several months.

She was born in Albany, N. Y., the daughter of Nathaniel and Mary Robie Griffin.

In 1852 she was married to William Simonds of Billerica and came to Winchester where she has resided ever since. Two children survive her William B. Simonds of Hollis, N. H., and Mrs. Benj. T. Morgan of this town.

Funeral services were held at her late residence Monday, May 2nd, at 3 o'clock, attended by Rev. D. Augustine Newton. At sunset she was laid at rest in Wildwood.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe recently initiated and has presided over a series of three symposiums at her club, the general topic being: "Economic Conditions affecting the daily Life of Women," regarding her interest in this practical [illegible] as a growing effort of [illegible].

At the last meeting Wednesday Mrs. Geo. H. Hicks was one of seven club members to whom parts were assigned.

The gradual change in the standard of living and consequent disturbance of Supply and Demand, as shown in several practical ways, the latter leading presumably to present high prices, was the outline of the fifteen minute paper.

Such attempts on the part of women to strengthen the thrift habit are altogether wholesome and encouraging.

ITALIAN STRIKE.

The laborers employed by the various contractors about town struck on Monday morning for more pay and shorter hours. They have been receiving $1.75 for a day of nine hours and demanded $2 for eight hours. This was refused and in most cases the men left their work.

The most of the laborers started for work in the morning as usual. The men employed by Thomas Quigley starting the trouble by making their demand at the stable, and on being refused quit and started around the town to induce the others to leave. Below Symmes Corner a large force was employed on the tract of land which is being opened by George C. Ogden. They joined the ranks of the strikers and proceeded across Bacon street to the west side of the town. Here several were engaged by James J. Fitzgerald and George B. Whitehorne on Yale St. and Foxcroft Rd. Some of them quit but the majority of Mr. Fitzgerald's men remained. Where men were found the strikers tried to induce them to leave, and in most cases they were successful.

About 10.30 the strikers got back to the center of the town and by that time their numbers had increased to about 150. They had covered the west side and were on their way to the east and north parts of the town, where they had hopes of increasing their ranks by more laborers who are engaged in small numbers on scattered work. The men as a whole were peaceful and gave the police little trouble in keeping them in order. Some of them were inclined to make a noisy demonstration of their strength, but the better element prevailed.

A census of the Italian population taken by Chief of Police McIntosh a few months ago showed about 250 men in the town, and as many more women and children. This number has been increased in the past few weeks, since outdoor work became more general. Most of the men live in town, but some come from the neighboring places. To grant the demands of the strikers would mean an advance of about 50 cents a day, or more than 25 percent over the present cost of labor.

The contractors have made their plans for a great deal of the season's work on the basis of the present wages, and to increase that now would mean a large financial loss to them.

Employers of farm hands report that they are turning away men every day—that they cannot find places for the large number that are looking for employment. The hope of the contractors lies in engaging these men to fill the places of the strikers.

On Wednesday morning shortly after five o'clock the Italians around Irving, Harvard and Florence streets were awakened by a bugler, all of the big boarding houses being visited. The crowd of foreigners increased to a mob by six o'clock, collecting on Swanton street. The police were on hand and made them move, which they sullenly did. About seven o'clock five of the ring leaders were arrested and taken to the police station. One of these men was found to have a loaded revolver in his clothes. The men were charged with threatening other Italians with harm for working for the contractors boycotted. This action of the police intimidated the rest of the foreigners and no further trouble was experienced.

The Italians attempted to stop the working of a gang of laborers on the Parkway, but a squad of Metropolitan police under a sergeant were sent here and they decided to attend to their own affairs.

During Wednesday both contractors—Quigley and Fitzgerald had teams going, and it was a novel sight for this town to see loaded dump carts passing through the centre with a policeman seated beside the driver. All of the teams were amply protected by the police.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The bar and bottle bill finally succeeded in getting over the line although too late for effect this year. Meanwhile there will be time for both sides to draw a good long breath and make ready for the next year. The probabilities are that in Boston at least, there will be some strong pressure brought to bear on the Licensing Board which is plainly anti reform, not only on the liquor question but in other ways as instance its action in the W. E. and I. Union case.

A WISE COURSE.

School Department
Winchester, May 4, 1910.

Editor Star

At the regular meeting of the School Committee held this evening the proper course to pursue in connection with the present occurence in town of several cases of scarlet fever was given careful consideration and it was voted to approve the action of the Superintendent of Schools in keeping the schools in session. This decision was based on the following facts:

1. There are at this date, Wednesday, sixteen pupils sick from scarlet fever distributed as follows: High School 7; Wadleigh Grammar School 1; Prince 1; Gifford 1; Highland 4; Wyman 2;

2. The total number of cases reported to the Board of Health to date is 38. None of these has contracted the disease in school and all are quarantined.

3. The teachers, the principals, the School Nurse, the School Physician and the Secretary of the Board of Health are exercising all possible vigilance in detecting and quarantining all cases. Every pupil about whom there has been any question has been excluded from school and investigated.

4. By keeping the schools in session this work of the health authorities is rendered possible as it would not otherwise be.

5. This course of action has been approved by substantially all the physicians in the town.

6. Children who have been kept out of school have in very many instances been known to associate with other children on the streets and elsewhere quite as much as if in school.

7. It is admittedly within the rights of parents to keep children out of school but, if this is done, they should, also, be kept strictly at home.

We are vitally concerned for the welfare of our own children and of all the children of this community and we are in duty bound to take such action as seems most likely to control the spread of this disease, and to prevent its becoming really prevalent. In our judgment we would be shirking our responsibilities, if we were to order the schools closed and we have acted accordingly.

Yours very truly,
CHARLES F. A. CURRIER,
MARCUS B. MAY,
EDWIN J. RICH.

TEA ROOM.

Y. M. C. A. WORK.

An organization that has ministered during a single year to 8711 different men and boys, can certainly be said to be meeting their needs and exerting a wide beneficent influence in the community. Such is the record of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association in 1909.

But this was not the limit of its usefulness for many thousands more, whose names are not on its roll of membership, were in various ways benefited.

The annual report, which has been delayed by the recent fire that destroyed the Association's main building, has just been issued and is an attractive and impressive publication, setting forth in graphic form the remarkable work that the Association is doing in its city, railroad, army, navy, college, and outing departments. There was an attendance of 11,857 at its several men's and boys' Bible classes and services; 64,562 was the aggregate attendance at the gymnasium and over 85,000 aggregate attendance in all educational classes covering 120 courses of study, 89,431 meals and luncheons furnished and paid for by men and boys, 20,716 temporary beds furnished and paid for by men, 17,904 persons attended the various socials and entertainments, 1,532 men and boys furnished employment, representing $140,000 in wages for a year. These figures show somewhat the variety and extent of work undertaken.

The great event of the year was the New Building Campaign, resulting in the raising of over $400,000 in fifteen days, a very remarkable achievement. Among the other developments was the part a working out of the new building plans, the establishment of a Vocation Bureau, the opening of a day School for Boys, the establishment of a Savings Department, the rendering of valuable service to the Laymen's Missionary Movement and American & Boston Federations of Men's Church Organizations.

Undaunted by the loss of the main Association building, [illegible] the management quickly got the work under cover at 2[illegible] and in Ashburton Place, and has outlined a policy for the coming year that will [illegible] the efficiency of the work and in the meantime the new [illegible] just as speedily as is practicable the erection of the new building on [illegible] street.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The Spectator knows at least one bill collector here in Winchester who wishes he could apply the absent treatment in getting in the accounts.

The Spectator agrees with that Winchester clergyman who in the course of his sermon a couple of Sundays ago said, "one of the heroes the world pays but little homage to is the country pastor, who labors on, confronted daily with one omnipresent fact, which is that his salary is small and generally in arrears."

It is not a safe plan for a young Winchesterite to pick out a wife by the sort of clothes she wears. The gowns may not be paid for.

One of the Winchester pastors spoke a plain truth when he said that "total abstinence from intoxicants is a distinct asset for any young man. Whether they like the sentiment or not, young men will find that they must adjust themselves to it if they wish to get the best places in the gifts of the big employers in these days. PLAN FOR GREAT DOCKS.

Mr. E. L. Burwell of this town had a lengthy and interesting article in the Boston Journal of Tuesday, advocating the construction in Hull harbor of a mammoth dock and railroad terminal of international importance. He has worked long and painstakingly on the matter, and his knowledge of harbor conditions, as well as transportation needs, makes this plan well worth considering.

Mr. Burwell, who first thought of this progressive plan for a mammoth railroad and steamship terminal at Hull, knows Hull harbor thoroughly, for he has been sailing yachts in and out of that harbor for fifteen years. At one time he was a member of no less than eight yacht clubs on the North and South shores of Massachusetts. He has been a member of the Hull Yacht Club for many years and for three years was chairman of the regatta committee which laid out the racing courses.

He comes of a family of seafaring men, inasmuch as his father, the well known Capt. Albert A. Burwell, for years sailed in and out of Boston on ships owned by Isaac Rich, and Mr. Burwell's brother, Capt. Albert H. Burwell, was commodore of the Warren line fleet of European steamships.

STATE POLITICS AROUSE INTEREST

Legislature Enacts the Columbus Day Bill

GOV. DRAPER EXPLAINS STAND

His Sincerity In New Haven Case Proven by His Statement—Fight Against Congressman O'Connell Fails—Democrats Divided Over Gubernatorial Nomination—Fear That Next Congress May Be Democratic

The legislature is endeavoring to put on speed in order to secure an early prorogation this year. One of the important acts which became law last week was that making Oct. 12 a legal holiday to be known as Columbus Day in recognition of the discoverer and discovery of America. There was quite a strong opposition to this bill from manufacturers and business men, who made the point that there are too many holidays already. Governor Draper signed the bill, however, evidently taking the ground that it would do no harm to have another. Several other states have a Columbus day already, so that Massachusetts is not the first to adopt it.

The governor gave out a statement during the week in justification of his recommendation that the bonds of the Boston Holding company be made legal investments for the savings banks, and in support of his appeal to the legislature to grant some relief to the New Haven in order that the contemplated improvements on the Boston and Maine may be entered upon and completed. It seems to be admitted that he made an excellent case and proved at least his own deep sincerity in wishing to promote the railway improvements which the state so much needs for its prosperity and advancement. It seems to be a mooted question whether the legislature will take any action along the lines recommended. The governor takes the ground that, having advised the legalization of these bonds as investments for savings banks and the legislature having decided against such action, it is now up to the legislature itself to find a way to do something which will bring about the desired result.

O'Connell Again a Candidate

One of the election contests in the national house which concerned Massachusetts has been decided in favor of Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of the Tenth district. Mr. O'Connell, according to the returns, was elected by four votes over J. Mitchell Galvin, the Republican nominee. Mr. Galvin claimed that a number of defective ballots were counted for Mr. O'Connell and made a contest for the seat. The committee of congress having the matter in charge has now decided that Mr. Galvin was not elected. Congressman O'Connell is a candidate for renomination and he has against him Councillor Curley of Boston, who is making a strenuous contest. Mr. Galvin declares his intention of again seeking the Republican nomination and says he feels very confident that if he receives it he will be elected by a substantial plurality. The district is evidently closer than was supposed, and with the dissension which is brewing in the Democratic ranks there is a possibility of Republican success.

The Nomination For Governor

Democrats are a good deal disturbed just at present over the gubernatorial nomination. Congressman Eugene N. Foss has been regarded as a strong candidate to head the ticket, but ex-Senator James H. Vahey refuses to accede to the demands of the party leaders to withdraw, declaring his intention to remain in the field and secure the nomination for governor if possible. Within the last few days there has been a good deal of talk along the line of Mr. Foss being a candidate for re-election in the Fourteenth district. Undoubtedly this would please the Democrats of that district, but it would disarrange a good many plans now in sight. Mr. Foss was the financial mainstay of the state campaign last year, having contributed a very large amount of money for that purpose, and if he should be a candidate for re-election it is very doubtful if he would again finance the state fight. That would be a disastrous matter for the Democratic party under the circumstances. A good many people feel that it is going to be rather difficult to collect campaign funds this fall owing to the uncertainty which surrounds the business outlook and the caution with which manufacturers are making their plans for the future.

The Next Congress

There is a feeling abroad that the next national house may be Democratic. If this should turn out to be so it is quite within the bounds of possibility that the house might enact a tariff bill and send it to the senate. With so many insurgents in the senate possibly a moderate reduction of the tariff might even be passed by that body. Nothing but the veto of the president would then stand between the bill and its becoming a law. A good many question whether, if a moderate tariff bill were put up to the president, it might not receive his sanction. These are some of the causes which make manufacturers [illegible] feel their way cautiously in regard to future operations. The unsettling effects of tariff agitation and possible tariff changes are well known to all observers of economic phenomena. There is [illegible] some curtailment of production during such tariff agitation and this of necessity would lead to a greatly restricted employment of labor. Most industries have been very active since the panic of '07 and the market is now quite well supplied with a considerable amount of goods in the storehouses, so that a temporary slackening of production would not be apt to produce a scarcity of goods in the market for some time.

Cookbooks as Campaign Documents

There is a good deal of activity among the Democrats of the Ninth congressional district and the friends of Congressman John A. Keliher are hustling in his interest. The opponents of the congressman are backing Councillor Wm. F. Murray of Charlestown, who is the choice of the Boston machine. It seems rather early to open a political canvass, but this has been done in the Ninth district. One of Mr. Keliher's acts was to send out to thousands in his district one of the cookbooks published by the department of the interior and furnished free to those who desire it. It is not impossible that this may have the effect of making some votes for Mr. Keliher, but the activities of Mr. Murray and his friends are beginning to show results already, and the fight promises to be one of the most vigorous ever waged in the district.

THE REGULARITY OF McCALL

The Boston Herald, which has been publishing a series of reviews of conditions in the various congressional districts of the state, tells us that Congressman Samuel W. McCall, while practically assured of a renomination, is one of those who is in danger of defeat at the polls next fall. This will be news, we take it, to most of the residents of the eighth Middlesex district. It certainly will be news to Cambridge voters. It is true, of course, that Mr. McCall has been one of the right hand men of Speaker Cannon in his rule over congress which has been so sadly shaken of late. It is true, also, that Mr. McCall has been one of the staunchest defenders of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which he helped to frame as a member of the ways and means committee. It is probable that in both these positions he has not been in entire accord with his constituents.

The fact still remains that Congressman McCall, unlike many of the other representatives who have remained regular during the strife within the ranks of the Republican party in congress, is conceded to possess both commanding ability and absolute integrity of purpose. His party regularity on the tariff bill and on the war against Speaker Cannon is conceded to be the result of honest conviction and not of mere time serving subserviency actuated by the hope of future preferment. The congressman has surely had the full courage of his convictions. He openly and publicly defended the new tariff bill last fall when it was made the object of the most bitter attack and when silence was the part of prudence. He published in the most widely read weekly magazine in the country an article in defense of Speaker Cannon and the house regulars from the hostility of the nation. If he has acted in contravention of a spirit in his whose existence he must know, it will be taken as but another instance of that well-known independence of character which will not brook dictation or control from any source. There is sometimes independence in regularity, and in the face of a storm of popular disapproval the truest courage may consist in acting with the majority of one's party associates. If Mr. McCall has voted according to his conscience, which no one has risen to dispute, the eighth district is the last one to vote to lose his admittedly valuable services because of a difference of opinion in matters of policy.—[Cambridge Chronicle.]

A WESTERN EDITOR'S LAMENT.

The editor of a leading newspaper published in North Dakota gives vent to the following:

"It is reported that one of the fastidious ladies in a neighboring town kneads bread with her gloves on. This incident may be somewhat peculiar, but there are others. The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on. He needs bread with his shirt on. He also needs bread with his pants on and unless some of the delinquent subscribers to this 'Old Rag of Freedom' pay up before long, he will need bread without a blamed thing on and North Dakota is no blooming Garden of Eden in the winter time."

Let Me Send A Fox Typewriter for Free Trial
Not at Your Expense—But Mine

W. R. FOX, President, Fox Typewriter Company.

The reason is—I want you to know how good and how different the Fox Typewriter is.

That's why I'll send a Fox Typewriter to your office absolutely at my expense, prepaying all charges.

Give it every hard test you can think of—compare it with any and every other machine.

Maybe you've had typewriter troubles.

I spent years perfecting my invention so as to avoid every flaw and weak point in other typewriters. And I did avoid them all.

That's why the Fox, with the hardest Trust competition, is making good everywhere with keen-thinking business men—and selling all over the civilized world.

It is one typewriter that is absolutely right in those vital parts — the typebar and hanger.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

WOMAN'S PART IN CLEANING UP DAYS.

(From the Christian Science Monitor.)

Town cleaning-up days seem to be quite in fashion this spring, and women's organizations are taking an active part in the matter. Wakefield had its renovation on the nineteenth; down in Georgia, the twentieth was chosen by Atlanta; while Wichita in Kansas has set hers for the twenty-seventh. There are many others. In Atlanta the day was appointed by the Federation of Women's Clubs, each member taking it upon herself to see that her own immediate premises were made scrupulously clean and agreeing to cooperate with neighborhood committees to the end that housewives who are non-members might likewise be brought into the crusade. In Wichita, also, the Federation of Women's Clubs engineered the plan whereby a real city cleaning will take place.

It is certainly to the credit of the women that they are manifesting such a spirit of public enterprise. It speaks well for them as housewives, and in a city, as in a home, the character of its inhabitants is in a large measure indicated by its neatness.

Although a periodic cleaning-up may be called for in a majority of places, why would it not be better to keep things neat all the time? The good citizen will not throw waste paper about. Nothing does so much towards creating an untidy condition as the tossing of loose paper upon a city's thoroughfares. And right here is a hint for the economical: save your old papers and sell them; you may be surprised to see what a snug little sum will be the proceeds of such a collection.

Fine Job Printing AT STAR OFFICE

FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1910.

SINGLE COPIES, FIVE CENTS.

The farmers are getting wise and as a result it will in time mean ten cent milk.

When a person can leave Stoneham square and reach the heart of the shopping district in Boston by trolley in forty minutes, it is rapid transit worthy of the name.

When in doubt, blame the milk. When not in doubt, blame the milk. For any ill that flesh is heir to, blame the milk. The milk can't talk back.—[Charlestown Enterprise.

The Woburn Journal says, in writing of our grade crossing abolition: "It will be some time, though, before the matter is suited." Good heavens, we knew that some three years ago!

It is said that a genuine tariff commission will be given the country by the present session of Congress. There is a ray of hope for the people in this report. The tariff has for years been a sectional issue in which true reform has been lacking.

A reporter recently called up ex Representative Luce of Somerville to obtain an interview on the "bob veal" charges. "Is this the Mr. Luce who is the chairman of the commission investigating the cost of high living?" asked the scribe. "No," answered Luce, genially. "Not the cost of high living, but the high cost of living."—[Boston Journal.

In commenting on an article in the STAR regarding slaughter houses at the Woburn Stoneham Winchester line, the Woburn News says: "Woburn would be only too glad to have the abattoir installed here and give employment to many local men regardless of the inconvenience to the sleeping population of Boston business men who claim a residence in our adjoining town."

Charlestown wants to keep "Old Ironsides" tied up at the wharf in the navy yard, while South Boston wants to have the old frigate moored off City Point. At the former place but few people now see the ship, while at South Boston thousands will view it daily during the summer months, and by just the class of people who are likely to derive patriotism from the deeds of "Old Ironsides."

President Tuttle announces that fares on the Boston & Maine Railroad are to be increased. Suburbanites, will not however, be affected. President Tuttle truly says: "The dear public that applauds raises in wages and is constantly dwelling upon the high cost of living as a reason for giving higher wages, has got to pay for the additional money given the men. The company has got to raise the money somehow. The increases in wages which we have agreed to make will cost the company at least $1,500,000, if not $2,000,000. The only way we can see to secure this additional sum is through putting the passenger rates back to where they were before the last reduction."

No Need for Alarm.

The scarlet fever epidemic seems to be under control as there have been no new cases since Tuesday. So far, thirty eight cases have developed and there is one under observation. This number is not greatly in excess of the epidemic of two years ago. Practically all the cases are mild.

Citizens have been unnecessarily alarmed by all sorts of wild rumor, both as to the severity of the disease and the number of people ill.

The plan adopted for controlling the epidemic included keeping the schools open. So far as we can learn, this meets with the general approval of those who are in a position to know about such things. If children were kept carefully at home during an epidemic of this kind, it might be wiser to adopt a different plan, but when they are allowed to gather in the play grounds, ball fields, etc., the chances of infection are but little lessened and all opportunities for inspection are lost.

Further it must be remembered that in every community there must be expected a certain number of cases, the origin of which it is impossible to ascertain.

We are informed that in all but two or three instances, the victims of this epidemic had been using the same kind of milk.

MEETING OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Members present: Mr. Charles F. A. Currier, Chairman Mr. Marcus B. May and Mr. Edwin J. Rich with Sup't. Schuyler F. Herron, Secretary.

The records for the meeting of April 22, 1910, were read and approved.

The report of the Sup't. of Schools for April was received and ordered filed.

The pay roll for April, 1910 amounting to $4686.20 was presented for inspection.

Bills amounting to $305.26 were approved and ordered paid.

The financial statement for May 4, 1910, was received and ordered filed.

The scarlet fever situation was discussed at some length. In view of the various considerations and of the fact that the School Physician, Dr. Ralph Putnam, the Secretary of the Board of Health, Dr. C. J. Allen, and substantially all the physicians in town believe that the schools should be kept in session it was voted that the School Committee formally record its approval of the action of the Superintendent of Schools in so doing.

After a prolonged discussion of other school matters the Committee adjourned at 12.01 a. m.

SECOND CONG. CHURCH NOTES.

The illustrated lecture by Rev. George M. Chamberlain of Turkey, entitled "The Dawn of a New Era for Turkey" was both interesting and instructive. The excellent views and the significant pictures left the attentive audience pondering the fact of the great price which the Turks have paid for such freedom as they now possess.

The first of the monthly meetings of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, was held last Saturday night, and brought forth many sane suggestions for increasing the efficiency of that organization.

A special feature of the Sunday morning service was the baptism, and the reception into church membership of the following young ladies on confession of faith: Irene Anderson, Alice Bowser, Helen Marshall, Constance Park and Alberta Seagraves, and by letter, the reception of Mrs. Nellie Smalley Ray.

At the evening service Mr. Joseph Davidson of Winthrop gave a very helpful address.

On Tuesday forty five ladies assembled at the church for the all day meeting of the Bethany Society. At the business session it was decided to hold the annual sale of fancy articles, ice cream and cake at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nugent on June 15.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

The petition of the women citizens of Massachusetts for equal representation with men in government met the fate accorded it for the last fifty years by the Legislature, in March. The Springfield Republican says:

"It must be evident to the statesmen on Beacon Hill that the old order is changing among the people at large and that the old body of prevailing sentiment in hostility or indifference to woman suffrage is being shaken as by an earthquake. The present movement for the removal of sex discrimination in the suffrage is no longer confined to a small number of strong minded spirits working under the handicap of an indifferent sisterhood. It is now embracing representative women of all classes and a correspondingly growing number of representative men. At Thursday's statehouse hearing, there were women who spoke for the so called leisure class of the sex on behalf of a larger field of activity in public causes; for the women unrepresented by husbands or fathers or brothers at the polls; for the women in the professions; for the tax paying women; for the women among the socialists; for the great army of women in the trades and wage earning classes.

The remarkable spread of this movement among the latter classes is alone a fact which should be of disturbing significance to legislative members. To appreciate the force of this observation one should read Edith Abbott's recent book on "Women in Industry." The list of occupations in which women now work is almost or quite as long as that of men. In manufacturing they constitute about one fourth of the total working force and are numbered in the millions. . . . .

In mercantile lines their number is legion and the proportion to men very high and increasing. In professional services their relative number has increased within 30 years from 2 per cent to above 10 per cent. And so it goes along the whole line of bread earning activities.

And woman in self supporting industry how differently does she stand in relation to political rights and obligations. If the ballot is needed for the protection and help of the one, as all will admit, why is it not just as much needed for the protection and help of the other . . . But in the present stage of society it is becoming [illegible] to make contentions among such ones. These questions answer themselves. The patriarchal or paternal order in human affairs is passing never to return. It is giving way to democracy [illegible] guarded in the final sum [illegible] will no [illegible] refuse to recognize any distinction of sex.

M. E. Allen

This Friday noon at 1.15, Charles A. Lane's annual spring fishing trip will leave town, bound for the head waters of the Kennebec. The party is composed of some thirteen gentlemen and a week will be spent in the woods fishing for trout and salmon. Among those who will enjoy the sport are Charles A. Lane, Pete A. Downs, James H. [illegible], Frank H. Adams, Charles A. Gleason, [illegible] Farnsworth, George A. Fernald, [illegible] Brown, Frank W. Pray of Newton, William H. Woodman of Wakefield, Edward H. Kitfield and son of Swampscott and Charles B. Goss of Melrose. The party will make their headquarters at the well known Mars Camps.

CLOSING CONCERT.

"An excellent programme and excellently done", Ernst Perabo.

"The success is not due to me as to the orchestra. The public does not realize how good this orchestra is; with the exception of the Boston Symphony and the Festival Orchestra it has not its equal in all New England."—John Little.

The size of the audience which attended the Orchestral Society Concert last Tuesday evening was disappointment. The programme had been arranged with care and was performed with splendid feeling and technical skill and it was a great pity that more people did not avail themselves of such a musical treat.

The Society lost money on the concert and there is some doubt as to whether the few men, who are doing all the work to give Winchester a musical organization that any city would be proud of, will care to continue their efforts if they have to meet a deficit every season.

But the audience, small as it was, was most appreciative and made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers and so delighted was it with the charming "Henry VIII Music" that it insisted on having the last movement of that suite repeated. That seemed to be the most popular number of the evening though many were heard to express a preference for the Overture to "Son and Stranger"; others voted in favor of the Strauss Waltz "Voices from the Vienna Forest," a number which was greatly enhanced by the wellnigh perfect zither work of Mr. Burgstaller. But the gem of the evening was the Reinecke's number, Prelude, Act. V "King Manfred." This exquisite bit, for strings only, was performed with more perfect technique and with greater delicacy of feeling than anything the orchestra has ever done. It was a piece of work worthy of any organization in the country.

The soloist of the evening, Miss Fay Cord was received with genuine enthusiasm. Her voice is a true soprano, not large, but very lovely in quality and she used it with much skill and intelligence. Her singing of the beautiful and difficult aria from "Carmen" was always of the concert rather than the operatic stage but she gave vivid expression to the emotions of Micaela venturing alone into the mountains to rescue her lover from the brigands.

The songs were not, in themselves, of great interest but Miss Cord gave them charm and distinction by her graceful interpretation and in response to the enthusiastic applause she sang Liza Lehmann's "Cuckoo" with a delightful appreciation of its delicate humor.

At the close of the concert an additional number was performed on the stage behind the drawn curtains. Mr. W. H. W. Bicknell who originated the Society and who from its inception has been the Head, the Heart, the Hands of the organization was presented by the members of the orchestra with a beautiful souvenir of the occasion,—a cut glass cigar jar filled with a silver cover on which was inscribed "Presented to W. H. W. Bicknell, May 3rd, 1910, by the Members of the Winchester Orchestra in recognition of his untiring and successful work in promoting that organization".

BASE BALL.

Lynn English H. S. 5 Winchester 4

In a ten inning game last Tuesday afternoon, Winchester was defeated by Lynn English High school, by the score of 5-4. The day was rather cold for base ball and this materially affected the playing. Tuck, pitched the whole game for Winchester, allowing Lynn only ten hits, but his passes gave Lynn their start. Again Winchester had a good lead 4-2, when they weakened and their opponents came through and tied the score. This was due to several infield errors and the misjudgement of a fly by Mathews, playing centerfield. In the tenth, Sutar was passed, stole second and Brown brought over the winning run by a clean single over second.

The features of the game were Flaherty's three bagger with two men on in the first inning, and Saltmarsh's beautiful throw to the home plate in the fifth, nailing his man by yards. Green of Lynn pulled off a double play unassisted. Other than these the game was void of interest.

Winchester 5 M. A. H. S. 3

Winchester defeated Mechanic Arts High school on Manchester Field, last Saturday by the score of 5-3. The game was fast, snappy and clean, requiring but one hour and fifteen minutes from start to finish. Goddu pitched for Winchester and held the opponent's heavy batters down to six hits while Winchester accumulated eight hits. The game was decidedly the best of the season and showed what the team can do when they are playing at their best. The features of the game were two fine catches in left field one by Rhonda of the visitors and the other by Saltmarsh the local's star left fielder.

Woburn 4 Winchester 3

Woburn defeated Winchester at Woburn Wednesday in a ten inning game featured with fast playing and sensational catches with but few errors, Woburn putting out ahead by a [illegible] Winchester has shown remarkable improvement in the last two games and should they continue to play the game displayed yesterday, will be a hard team to beat. Woburn, undoubtedly is one of the strongest teams in the state, and the fact that a ten inning game was required showed what kind of ball Winchester was playing. Winchester got a poor start and Woburn, scored two runs in the first inning and had the lead until the 6th when Donovan's hit and Crocker's three errors tied the score. Winchester took the lead by three straight singles in the seventh but Woburn came back in the eighth on Roche's single and a double by Conlon which was foul by three feet. The umpire broke into the error column in the ninth and deprived Winchester of a possible run and the game. In the tenth Donovan's poor throw to first gave Woburn a hit and Kenney's bat scored the winning run.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A farce and the cleverest of its kind. That is the best description that can be given of "My Wife," which is to be the play at the Castle Square next week. It is a clever piece of work, laughable and entertaining from beginning to end, and it promises to rival in laugh-giving qualities, both "Are You a Mason?" and The Marriage of Kitty.

In the Castle Square production John Craig will play the leading role of Gerald Eversleigh in which John Drew made an emphatic hit, and the heroine, Beatrice Dupre, will be made lovely and merry by Mary Young who is especially clever at the interpretation of such roles. The entire John Craig Stock Company will fill out the other roles. "My Wife" will hold the Castle Square for only a single week.

In this article of less than a hundred pages Dr. Grenfell gives a graphic [illegible] dangerous night spent [illegible] with his dogs on an ice pan. Besides furnishing an impressionistic picture of Newfoundland's shore and the islands of snow covered slabs or pans which furnish temporary safety to one caught in the lake of mush it is also a human document that reveals the unafraid determination with which a strong man uses every device to prolong life. A brief sketch of Dr. Grenfell's life written by Clarence John Blake prefaces the volume.

Higginson, Thomas Wentworth. Carlyle's laugh and other surprises. 1332.35

The little essay "Carlyle's laugh" occupies only ten pages of this volume while the "other surprises" bring it very nearly to the four hundred page mark. Of the laugh the author says: "After the most vehement tirade, Carlyle would suddenly pause, throw his head back, and give as genuine and kindly a laugh as I ever heard from a human being. It was not the bitter laugh of the cynic, nor yet the big-bodied laugh of the burly joker, least of all was it the thin and rasping cackle of the dyspeptic satirist. It was a broad honest, human laugh.

TRANSPORTATION

Fagan, James O. Labor and the railroads 913.14a

A vitally important contribution to economic history in which the author treats of the relations between organized labor movements and employers, turning the force of his arguments into concrete railroad problems. His point of view is that of a former employee who believes that the railroad employees are the most important factors in the situation from every point of view. "Their opinions, their policies, their behavior, are the great topics to be considered, socially, financially and industrially."

McCook, Rev. Henry Christopher. Ant communities and how they are governed; a study in natural civics. 742.10

A distinctly informing work that covers mainly those phases of ant life that are developed around ants' behavior as social animals. A secondary feature of the book is the indication of parallels, more or less distinct, between the communal actions of ants considered simply as natural history, and the communal actions of man, considered in their relations to the highest welfare of the race.

Packard, Winthrop. Wildwood ways. 732.24

Sewiss, Garrett Putnam. Curiosities of the sky: a popular presentation of the great riddles and mysteries of astronomy. 721.39

A clear, authoritative description of heavenly bodies in which the treatment is as scientific as plain language will permit. The chapters give the latest information on such topics as the coming and going of comets, the origin and career of meteors, the aurora borealis, the corona and spots on the sun, the surface of the moon, the zodiacal light, star clusters and the discovery of new stars, nebulae, and constellations and how the constellations change.

Wright, William Henry. The grizzly bear, the narrative of a hunter naturalist, historical, scientific and adventurous. 734.31

An autobiographical chapter enables the reader to reach the author's state of interest in grizzly bears that led him to devote twenty-five years to the study of them. He traces the history of grizzlies, gives numerous experiences and adventures in hunting them and minutely discusses their character and habits.

Gladden, Rev. Washington. Recollections. 655.37

The author announces at the start that his story is simply that of an average American, that its interest will not be found in any exploits of the narrator but in whatever power he has possessed of looking sympathetically at the things he has seen and of accurately reporting them.

"While many knew Jefferson as Rip Van Winkle [illegible] a few among theatergoers were privileged to share his personal acquaintance [illegible]. Fewer still knew his intimate life. Naturally among these was his daughter-in-law, the author of the present volume, in which she represents the actor when he has thrown aside the mask and sock of comedy and is taking the air at Buzzards Bay or Palm Beach, or on his Louisiana plantation. Here we find him as an author at his desk, as a painter at his easel, as sportsman at his reel and rod."

McCormick. Casson, Herbert Newton. Cyrus Hall McCormick, his life and work. Gift 675.2

A life of the master builder of the modern business of manufacturing farm machinery. His life, coincident with the pioneer era of replacing muscle with machinery, has been devoted to inventions that have revolutionized farm labor, and it is one of those "rare life-histories that blazon out the peculiar genius of the nation under the stress of a new experience.

Everett, Charles Carroll. Religions before Christianity, a manual for Sunday schools 514.7

Foster, George Burman. The function of religion in man's struggle for existence 541.3

Cleaving to the "sunnier side of doubt" the author addresses principally people who have outgrown the traditional church faith, and who for various reasons have given up church going. He shows that in the history of the doctrine the soul there have been three epochs, in each of which the psychology of of the period has assimilated itself to the method and controlling concept of the natural science of the era, and that in turn the thought of God has been determined by the psychologist.

Five lectures delivered on the Nathaniel W. Taylor foundation at Yale university. Five lectures whose aim in a broad sense is that of contributing toward the final emancipation of the fundamental beliefs of Christianity from the cycle of signs and wonders. The author says: "I am concerned to show that where miracle has ceased to be regarded as true, Christianity remains in its essence entire, that the fortune of religion is not to be identified with the fortune of miracle; that the message of Jesus Christ to this world is independent of miracle."

The temple is the temple of the living body wherein dwells the spirit, concerning which the author aims not to expand the philosophies of either psychologist or physiologist, but to describe human experience as it is and as it ought to be, to interpret the laws both of the body and the spirit, to describe human nature.

Call, Annie Payson. Nerves and common sense. 412.5a

The author who has delivered numerous helpful messages to nervously tired people has gathered into this volume twenty-five papers. Turtle and Farina.

Turtle and farina taken together represent to those who live on the Amazon, be they white, negro or Indian or one of the numerous crossbreeds, what the salmon does to the Alaska Indian, the cocoanut to the south sea islander and rice to the Mongolian. A short run of salmon in the Alaska rivers, a crop failure in the paddy fields of China, a hurricane in the south sea islands, all reduce to the same thing, famine. On the Amazon a shortage of turtles may be tided over by a plentitude of farina, or vice versa. A failure of both turtles and farina in the same year brings great and widespread distress. Farina is a crude, locally made product of the root of the manioc, a further refinement of which results in the tapioca of commerce. Tapioca is the pure starch of the root, farina the starch mixed with a woody fiber, the latter imparting a yellowish color to the compound. Farina under a number of different names is more or less of a staple with the natives in all of tropical America from the West Indies to Paraguay.—Los Angeles Times.

Tourist—Good morning, my pretty maid. Whose sheep are these?

T.—Oh, a very nice name too! And where does he live?

S.—At Tre'rgeirtrgwylltion.

T.—Have you been much from home?

S.—Only in Anglesey, sir. I went with my brother and my sister to Llanerchymeddymmondo and from there to see Criccieth Crugyll and came back to Llantu[illegible].

T.—Hold hard! Let me breathe a little! Well, where afterward?

S.—Well, my brother had to go back to Clwatel Caebrachycafn and my sister to Llanaelhaiarn, but on our way home we went to see the little church by the river, such a funny old fashioned church, sir.

T.—Where is it? I mean what parish?

S.—In [illegible]gagery-hwyrndrobwlltys[illegible]gogoch.

T.—Mercy on us! That's enough! However should I find such a place?—London Spectator.

Suspicious.

During a period of political agitation a stranger arrived in Magdeburg, where, on applying to the authorities, he obtained a permit or ticket of residence. He had not been long in the town before he became aware that his steps were being dogged by a man in plain uniform. He bore it for days, but at last said to the spy: "Sir, do you wish to drive me mad? Why do you pursue me in this way?"

"I am a detective, and my instructions are not to lose sight of you," was the quiet answer.

"Why, what fault have the police to find with me?" shouted the stranger in the greatest excitement. "My passport is in order. Here is my ticket of residence. I am a citizen of Berlin. Why do you follow me about?"

"It states in your passport," was the reply, "that you were going to reside here for pleasure. That looked suspicious, as it is the first time any one came to reside in Magdeburg for pleasure."

A discussion whose aim is "to set forth a simple, philosophical and inspiring vital principle, which governs all ethical questions, and ensures the development of noble, useful, happy character. The treatment touches the great issues of human life, the significance of conscience, the problem of evil, the supposed antagonism between freedom and necessity. The effort is made to treat such questions without any theological or metaphysical prepossessions, but simply from the study of the facts of consciousness."

the careful housekeeper makes every cent count.

But she can't make the pennies count by trading at every store in town, spending half her time looking for the cent cheaper article.

She can save money only by searching out a reliable grocer and sticking to him.

The money is saved by trading with the groceryman who sells dependable goods.

Dependable goods are not to be obtained in every store.

Goodness and cheapness appeal to every condition of humanity.

There are no fancy prices here, and everybody is treated alike.

Our goods are cheap because they're good—it's not the price that makes them cheap.

Goods that are bought so cheaply that they have to be thrown away on account of poor quality are the most dearly bought goods.

Better pay a fair price in the first place and get the dependable kinds. You can't buy any other kinds here. We don't keep them.

The difficult ascent of Mt. Liberty in the White Mts., was accomplished by Mr. Howard S. Palmer of this town, Mr. Wheeler of Manchester, N. H., and Mr. Gould of Taunton, Mass., on Thursday, April 28th, New Hampshire's Fast Day. They had to break their path most of the way up and all the way back, and in one place in the Flume make their own bridge. They went over snow 3 feet deep before reaching the summit, but were amply repaid by the magnificent view, as the day was perfectly clear, and without a cloud. The day's trip covered twenty-five miles of walking, leaving N. Woodstock at 8 a. m. and returning at 6 p. m.

Frederick S. Osgood's party to announce his engagement to Miss Amy Warder of Chicago, was the most novel thing in this way on record in town. It was a Halley's comet party, and included a visit to the Fells, an auto excursion to Ferncroft Inn as a spot favorably located for observing the comet, an earnest survey of the horizon at 3 a. m. for the visitor, and motor trip back to Boston and the suburbs about daybreak. The comet tail of Prof. Pickering, who was of the party, given during supper-breakfast, almost offset the inability of the 75 year visitor to make itself visible through the clouds. Chas. J. Glidden had expected to join the party but was detained by a balloon engagement. Wilbur S. Locke, Arthur W. Hale, Ward M. Tenney, Dr. Gardner, the organizer of the "World in Boston," Eldon Keith, R. SAMUEL W. TWOMBLY.

So much has already been written and said with regard to our fellow townsman, that our affectionate regard for him might well rest on those tributes. No apology, however, is necessary from one who knew him upwards of thirty years, for attempting to add to them. And if any apology were needed I should find it in the interview I held with him the Sunday afternoon before he died.

SAMUEL W. TWOMBLY

The consultation of physicians had just closed and I feared that weariness might prevent his seeing me. He insisted, however, that I should come up, and talked with me for more than half an hour with his old vivacity and vivid interest. In the course of it he said, "I wish you would write something before you go away, and leave it so that it can be used if it is needed," and then with a humor that was half laughing, he added, "Of course I hope it won't be needed."

The end came much sooner than anyone expected, and was merciful in relieving him from what would otherwise have been a hopeless and painful struggle. We are all again reminded of Holmes's words to a friend who spoke of the frequently recurring deaths of their associates, "You must remember that you are getting within range of the rifle pits yourself."

At his age Mr. Twombly had long been within range of the rifle pits, and most of " . . . . . the name he loved to hear,

had been carved for many a year
On the tomb."

But the essential joyousness of his nature was not dimmed. Deeply sensible of these recurring bereavements and of the isolation that comes with them he never allowed his griefs to depress others, or fell into the morbid melancholy which so often makes old age pitiable and piteous. His courage and energy were unabated. He was a fine example of what a man advancing in years should be; of how the interests and responsibilities of life may be carried to the end without murmuring or repining over the past, and without jealousy of the generation coming on the stage.

The fineness and tenacity of his character were due to no adventitious or external aids. Schools, academies, and colleges, classics and the higher mathematics took no part in his training or development. Bound out as a child, after his mother's death, to a farmer in New Hampshire, he was one of the few survivors of the hard school in which many an orphan of his generation was trained. He never spoke with bitterness of those eight years and his early energy and ambition were proved by his "buying his time" when he was only sixteen, so that five years before his majority he was his own man. It was not uncommon that at nineteen or twenty boys had done sufficient work to clear their apprenticeship papers, but young Twombley must have been a boy who was "father to the man" to have worked out his freedom at sixteen.

It is no part of my purpose to follow him throught the vicissitudes of his brave, patient and hard-working life. He saw prosperity and adversity. He "had his courage with him" through it all. He returned to the fight with confidence, after defeats that would have staggered most men.

He saw Winchester grow from a country village to its present delightful proportions. Church street in his younger days was the "Road leading over Huffmaster's Bridge," and the Bridge was across the Middlesex Canal, near where the Wyman School now stands. Winchester was then South Woburn, and the line between it and Medford ran "to a stake and stones nigh unto Wedge Pond, near where the Calumet Club house now is.

Deacon Luther Wyman was then alive and a power in the land. The two copper mines on Myopia Hill about midway between Mr. McCall's house and Mr Gilman's had just been opened. Every herb known to pharmacy still grew the side of the brook which flows ough the Golf Club grounds, where y had been planted by the Queen chem's medicine man. The Middlesex al was still in use and the Boston and Lowell Railroad on its stone [illegible] was in course of construction. Winchester, outside the village, was a farming town. The changes that he witnessed if they had come at once would have seemed like a fantasy or a dream. They were no dream to him. He was abreast of them throughout. There was no public improvement he did not favor. There was no repining talk with him of the old days. His eyes were always to the rising and not the setting sun.

The lessons and sermons which can be drawn from such a life are numberless, but I have no disposition to more than suggest them. He was a unique man. He connected our time with the past. He was an [illegible] of the ancient virtues of punctuality and of persistence. A member of the Massachusetts Legislature in '71 in 1900 and 1901, he never missed a session. An incorporator of the Winchester Savings Bank, he attended every meeting of the corporation. Selectman of the Town for eight years, Assessor for five years, he missed but one meeting of either Board. Serving the town on the Board of Cemetery Commissioners for fifteen years his energy was unflagging and his service conspicuous.

No child has been christened in his Church here [illegible] who has not received from [illegible] the flowers which [illegible] carried in its honor. He was President of the Winchester Improvement Society and unflagging in its work.

He personally set out all the trees on the Winchester Common. He, more than any other one man, secured the widening of Church street to its present width after a three years' fight, and helped materially to secure the town vote by which the triangle at Main and Washington streets was left open.

Taking him for all in all, the present generation will not see his like again.

Samuel J. Elder.

CALUMET CLUB COMMITTEES.

It was decided to enlarge the list of resident members from 200 to 250, and notice of the change in the by-laws necessary to effect the change has been posted at the Club. LEAPED FROM CAR.

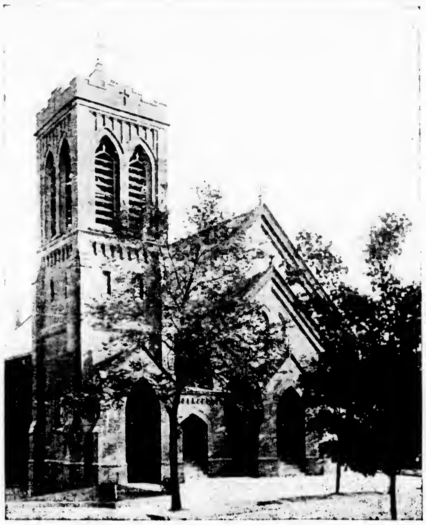
The Winchester and Woburn police are searching for Alonzo Martin, 20 years old, of Woburn, a prisoner on his way to the Concord reformatory, who leaped through the window of a moving train at Winchester Tuesday afternoon and escaped, apparently unhurt.

He had been sentenced in the morning by Judge Johnson in the Woburn court on a charge of larceny and was in the custody of Probation Officer Dennis Walsh.

Walsh and Martin boarded the train just before 1 o'clock for Boston, and remained seated together until Winchester was passed. At this point Martin escaped through a window and disappeared.

CANDIDATE FOR TREASURER.

Mr. George H. Eustis is being urged by his friends to present his name to the Selectmen for the office of Town Treasurer, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Spurr. Mr. Eustis was bookkeeper and financial man for a large concern in Boston for many years, and at the present time is the treasurer of the Calumet Club. He can give the requisite amount of time to the duties and there is no question regarding his ability.



REUNION OF ST. MARY'S PARISH.

Perhaps the largest attended and most successful reunion ever held by the parish of St. Mary's Church was that in the Town Hall, Tuesday evening. The large hall was completely filled with people, and all enjoyed themselves to the utmost. Father Merritt took occasion to heartily thank the various committees for their part in making the reunion so successful.

The first part of the evening an entertainment included solos by Miss Katherine L. Mullin, readings by William F. Thornton, solos by James E. Donnelly and trombone solo by A. J. Gring.

The concert was a delightful one and was given by three of Lowell's favorites, Miss Katherine L. Mullin, Mr. James E. Donnelly and William E. Thornton. Miss Martina McMahon was the accompanist. Miss Mullin's selections were much appreciated by the audience and displayed perfect control of a pleasing dramatic soprano voice. Unstinted applause greeted both her offerings and she was obliged to respond with encores. Mr. Thornton's readings were very entertaining and were given close attention. Mr. Donnelly's rich baritone voice was heard to good effect and his encores consisted of three little classics from the "Irish Folk Songs" that delighted his hearers.

Supper was served by women of the parish under the leadership of James J. Fitzgerald. The committees were:

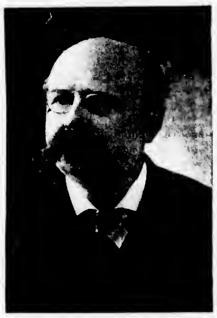
TREASURER SPURR RESIGNS.

Mr. Thomas S. Spurr, town treasurer, sent his resignation to the Selectmen, Monday evening. Mr. Spurr retires because of business reasons, his work as professional accountant, now calling for practically all his time. His resignation is to take effect at the pleasure of the Selectmen between now and the first of July. Mr. Spurr is willing to give his successor the benefit of his knowledge as treasurer of the town, so that upon his leaving office there will be no hitch in the transaction of the business. The office will be filled by the Selectmen, and already the names of several gentlemen have been mentioned for the position, action on which may be taken by the Board next Monday evening.



THOMAS S. SPURR

Mr. Spurr has served as treasurer for 20 years, taking the office at the time of the death of his father. In the conduct of his office, Mr. Spurr was considered one of the ablest treasurers in this State, not merely in the matter of bookkeeping, but in securing temporary loans and in placing the bond issues, wherein he saved the town considerable money. He is one of the half dozen registered accountants in this State, a position accorded to those who have passed an extremely rigid examination.

COMING EVENTS.

The High School Chorus will give their annual concert on Friday, May 27th, in the Town Hall.

HER EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

To Mrs. Chas. D. Folsom, On her Eightieth Birthday.

Just a little tribute of kindly thought,
On this your natal day,
When friends come in with greetings of love,
To cheer you on your way.

To live eighty years, is the lot of but few
In this busy world of ours,
Where all seems hurry and bustle and rush,
And the years seem to fly like hours.

Knowing you have such a wealth of years,
We think of God's loving care,
And how He has helped with the burdens of life,
That have fallen to your share,

We feel your life has been one of trust,
From childhood days all through,
With every duty faithfully done,
A servant both steadfast and true.

The years have brought you much of joy,
And sorrow has had its place,
But God's love has helped each cross to bear
And illumined your kindly face.

You have comforted many a weary heart,
Helped those that were in need,
Making more blessed your four score years
In thought and word and deed.

May the coming years be full of grace,
With many of them in store,
And richer blessings enter your life
Than you ever have known before.

May this prove a happy day to you
As the spirit of love holds sway,
And kind words come from far and near
For your eightieth birthday.

A Friend.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

The independence of women is becoming just as important to the moral order and well-being of society as the independence of men, and if independence is good for the one it cannot be bad for the other, and if bare justice demands for the self supporting and tax paying man a voice in the ordering of public affairs it demands the same thing with equal force for the self-supporting and tax paying women; and under our present system of taxation, all self supporting women are tax-payers equally with the men, whether their names appear in the tax-lists or not. . . .

We are not to lose sight of the importance of the ballot as a stimulus to women in broadening and quickening her interests and mental activities, and lifting her out of that slavery either to an immoral leisure or to the withering drudgery of a narrow and dependent industrial position which has been so great a curse to her sex and to human society since the dawn of history.

It is no argument against woman suffrage to say that many or most women do not want it. The rights of the few who do want it are a consideration which makes the apparent indifference of the many of no account, and how stands the apparent indifference of the many as an argument against what seems to be for their advantage in the long way ahead? Because many men are indifferent in the exercise of the voting franchise, do we say their disfranchisement should follow? Let us amend the Massachusetts constitution so that legislative extension of the suffrage to women in this state may be possible.—The Springfield Republic.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

Help from an unexpected quarter, as a tramp remarked the other day when a Main street lady handed him a twenty-five cent piece.

The Spectator knows a glazier here in Winchester who was cheated out of his pay and who complained that he got only his trouble for his panes.

The Spectator has had his attention called to the fact that the bottoms of the strawberry boxes seen in Winchester are as high as usual this year.

The enjoyers of "fragrant Havanas" constructed of Connecticut tobacco will be pleased to be informed by The Spectator that smoking in the streets of Winchester is not illegal, as it has been since the enactment of the law of 18[illegible]. The favorite "weed sticks" may be indulged in in Winchester Square or any other open space, without any minion of the law having the power to break the pleasant flow of the fancies produced by the upward curl of the smoke. Poets and prose writers have vied with each other in extolling these fancies. Charles Sprague, eighty years ago practically pointed out the moral that a contemplative Winchesterite may discover in a burning cigar; The Spectator copies a part of the ethical philosophy that he adduced therefrom:

Yes, social friend, I love thee well
In learned doctor's spite;
Thy clouds all other clouds dispel,
And lap me in delight.
By thee, they cry, with phizzes long,
My years are sooner passed;
Well, take my answer, right or wrong—
They're sweeter while they last.
And oft, mild friend, to me thou art
A monitor, though still;
Thou speak'st a lesson to my heart
Beyond the preacher's skill.
Thou'rt like the man of worth, who gives
To goodness every day;
The odor of his virtue lives
When he has passed away.

In the prescribed curriculum of the Winchester High school English literature and rhetoric find an important place. After looking into the subject, however, The Spectator finds that the study of English literature is for the most part confined to a cram of the personal biography of the authors; at the best it is a reading about literature rather than a reading in literature. The study of rhetoric is for the most part confined to the reading of abstract definitions and principles. What is needed in Winchester and elsewhere is a text book to occupy a place at the meeting point of literature and rhetoric to restore the twain to their natural and fruitful relations.

A very dear little miss of The Spectator's acquaintance had listened attentively to the exhortations of one of our Winchester pastors. "And is it true, mamma," she asked after getting home, "that I can't go to heaven unless I am born again?" Her mother replied in the affirmative that she must be born again, just as the reverend gentleman said. The little one looked thoughtful, but said nothing for some moments. Finally, drawing a long sigh, and with resignation pictured on her face, she said, "I am afraid I can't go to heaven." Her mother asked her what she meant. "I was thinking, mamma, that I shouldn't want to be a baby again, to be tossed up till I was all out of breath, as little brother is by every lady that comes into the house."

The Spectator sympathizes with a lame man on crutches, but when one of those crutches rests upon The Spectator's great toe as its owner swings himself forward, The Spectator always hates that lame man and thoroughly despises that crutch.

A poor young man here in Winchester recently fairly danced with joy when the doctor told him he had Bright's disease, The Spectator is informed on what is regarded as excellent authority. "What will Mrs. [illegible] say now?" he exclaimed triumphantly. "She always said there was nothing bright about me! Oh, I guess not, but the doctor's certificate will show what sort of a fellow I am."

"What," The Spectator recently overheard an inquisitive young lady say, "is the most popular color for a bride?" The question was asked of a companion, and both were passengers on an Arlington bound car. The Spectator may be a little particular in such matters, but he would prefer a white one.

Those women of Winchester who carry pins in their mouths naturally utter sharp words.

The Spectator knows lots of men here in Winchester as elsewhere who are always interested to know the last words of a man. They do not care so much about those of a woman. She has had her last word all through life.

A little washing soda was wanted for cleaning purposes the other evening, so a youngster of The Spectator's acquaintance was given a dime and despatched to the drug store to get it. The youngster soon returned, but minus the soda. His mother wanted to know why he didn't get the soda. He said he did. His mother wanted to know where it was and he said he drank it. He said the man said it wouldn't keep to bring home. A light dawned on his mother's mind. She asked eagerly, "What did you ask for?" "Soda," he answered. "Didn't you say washing soda?" "Washing soda? No, only soda." The mother laughed heartily and her offspring was greatly puzzled to know what occasioned all the merriment.

SEWER CONTROVERSY.

The controversy between the city authorities and the Metropolitan Sewer Commission regarding the use of the [illegible] Mystic sewer by the big tanneries which has been going on for the past two years or more, has evidently come to a point where something has got to be done or the city will be involved in a suit brought by the attorney general as indicated in the letter read at the meeting of the Board of Public Works, Tuesday evening.

An order was issued by the Metropolitan board about a year ago, demanding that the tanneries having connection with the Mystic Valley sewer, now a part of the Metropolitan system, install basins or filtration beds, to remove from the sewage from their plants the hair and other solids which it has been allowed to enter the sewer, causing stoppages and necessitating frequent openings of the sewer to clean and keep in proper condition.

The plans proposed by the Commission for overcoming the difficulty did not meet with the approval of the tanners, owing to the expense involved in putting in such basins as were recommended and they allowed the matter to go on without making efforts satisfactory to the commission to provide the basins. Only one firm, W. P. Fox and Sons, it is understood have installed the necessary basins to meet the demands of the commission and the letter from the Attorney General to the effect that unless immediate steps are taken to restrain the tanneries from using the sewer as heretofore, action would be brought against it, as the result.—Woburn Times.

EPWORTH LEAGUE OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Last Sunday evening the officers of the Epworth League were installed in the auditorium of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The ceremony was impressive and those taking office seemed to fully realize the importance of their duties. Each gave an address, and the address by the new president indicated that he fully realized the heavy responsibility which he had undertaken. Rev. John R. Chaffee addressed the League, and Milton Powers, represented the out going president.

On the whole the personnel of the new cabinet is most satisfactory. With such leaders to plan the department work, success is already assured. It is hoped that the rank and file of the young people of the church will redouble their energies, and work with the cabinet to double the membership during the coming year.

The list of officers were as follows: President, Edward M. Mason; 1st Vice President, Alfred Dover; 2nd Vice President, Margaret M. Mason, 3rd Vice President, Mina B. Hartley, 4th Vice President, Ruth L. Dunning, Secretary Ethel M. Sheppard, Treasurer, H Harold Dover.

KILL TENT CATERPILLARS.

The immediate destruction of tent caterpillars is called for in a statement issued by State Forester Rane. If the nests are destroyed now, Mr. Rane says, the trees will be greatly benefitted. The statement follows.

"Just now is the time to destroy the tent caterpillars so commonly seen in small tents or webs at the forks of the limbs. Every day that this work is put off the larger the insects within continue to grow and injure the trees. If anyone will lay aside squeamishness, put on some old gloves and just pick these nests, which are still relatively small, out of the trees with their inmates and destroy them it will be a great benefit to the trees.

"This work should be done either early in the morning, any time before eight o'clock or after four in the afternoon, as the caterpillars are likely to be spread out over the tree, eating on the young buds and foliage, during the warmer part of the day.

"Every tent nest destroyed now not only aids the tree this year, but lessens the possible numbers of succeeding years. While the nests are a small handful now, in two weeks' time they will be too large to handle in this way."

This is believed to be the first step to break a so called ring, that so much has been heard of for many years past. These gentlemen are not losing much sleep however over the charges.

NEW ENGLAND'S TELEPHONE PROGRESS.

According to the annual report of New England Telephone and Telegraph Company there are 337,021 telephones connected to the system of this company and its sub licenses, and in this company alone the daily average of local and toll calls is about 1,200,000.

These figures represent a business that covers the four northern New England states and gives employment to about 8,400 persons. The report says it is expected that at least 3[illegible] stations will be added during the year 1910.

As showing how strongly the New England Company is a New England institution, General [illegible] notes that of the [illegible] stockholders, more than [illegible] per cent are residents of the four states. In addition, the sub license companies, having arrangements with the New England Company for toll connections and thus being in fact a part of the New England system have about the same number of local stockholders.

The financial showing for the year was quite satisfactory. The gross revenue was $12,186,752.80 and the net revenue $3,183,919.47. For the year 1910 the sum of $7,575,000 is estimated as the appropriation for extensions and for maintenance.

MEETS WITH APPROVAL.

The first issue of a one cent Sunday edition of the Boston Journal made its appearance last Sunday morning, and from its reception it appeared to have "filled a long felt want." But few Sunday newspaper readers care for the bulky editions of 40 to 50 pages with magazine supplement, the contents being chiefly made up of advertising. Thousands would prefer to pay one, or even two cents for a Sunday paper of eight or twelve pages containing all important news of the day with editorial comment.

WHAT YOU PAY TAXES FOR.

Did you ever stop to think when you were paying your taxes just what you were really paying for? For city, county, state and national improvements yes, but also for the cost of crime. One-tenth of the tax in Massachusetts is expended on the punishment of criminals, a sum almost equal to that spent for education. This is not the whole cost of crime either, for there is the indirect cost of loss to trade, loss of property and vast sums expended by individuals and charitable organizations.

Winchester Public Library

May [illegible]

Exhibition of photographs loaned by the Library Art Club. Corot Part II

Jean Baptiste Camille Corot was born in Paris, of humble parentage, July 28, 1796. He did not follow his inclination until he was 22, when he became a pupil of Michallon, then of Bertin, and finally completed his studies in Italy. His method was to work in the country in summer, early and late, in the open air, to catch those effects only to be seen at dawn, at sunset, and by moonlight, in which he delighted. He saw and portrayed nature with his own eyes in a manner replete with poetry and fancy, in which style he has found followers in Troyon, Diaz, and others. He died in Paris, February 22, 1875.—Bryan's Dictionary.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The annual appearance at Keith's of Valerie Bergere has become an event of importance, particularly for the reason that on each succeeding visit Miss Bergere has presented something entirely new. The present occasion, however, is one of more than ordinary moment, for she will be surrounded by the largest company of players ever seen in vaudeville, and in a production which may be said to be the most elaborate. It is called "The Lion Tamer," and as may be imagined, has all the atmosphere of the circus, but there is a love story running through the tabloid drop plot, which, of course, works out satisfactorily after some exciting scenes.

In "The Lion Tamer," Miss Bergere has one of the crowning triumphs of her career. She will head an exceptionally strong bill, another feature being the Tuscany Troubadours, also Willie Pantzer and company, perhaps the most expert troupe of acrobats now before the public, Charles Leonard Fletcher, the impersonator, the Doherty Sisters, in songs and dances; Anderson and Goines, Marion Garson, and others to be announced.

BOSTON THEATRE.

As a matter of tolerance, the boredom usually induced by the book of the average musical comedy the plan adopted by Charles Dickson in adapting "Three Twins" from Mrs. R. Pacheco's farce, "Incog" may be said to have proven a distinct success. A mystification following mistaken identity has been so often used that it was thought to contain no element of originality, but at the Boston Theatre there is a spontaneity in the treatment of "Three Twins." Summer prices are now in vogue at the Boston and these include 800 seats on the main floor at $1. Matinees will be given as usual on Wednesday and Saturday. The fourth week of big success begins on Monday.

STATE POLITCS WARMING UP

Vahey's Friends Are Getting Somewhat Nervous

FEAR HE IS GOING TO LOSE

Cost-of-Living Commission Holds Gold Responsible For Increased Prices—Tariffs and Trusts Only Very Small Factors

The interest in political circles almost exclusively centers around the Democratic nominations for governor. It seems to be taken for granted that almost the entire Democratic state machine now favors the nomination of Congressman Eugene N. Foss rather than ex-Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown. It is perfectly natural that this should be so for at least one important reason. Mr. Foss has money to run a campaign and Mr. Vahey has none. The Democrats composing the machine are well aware that their campaign cannot be conducted without a liberal use of funds. It costs a large amount of money to hire halls for rallies, to secure the employment of men to do campaigning about the state, to work up naturalization and registration, and finally to get the voters to the polls on election day.

It is said on high authority that if Mr. Foss is not the Democratic candidate for governor, he will not be on the ticket at all, and the question of funds for the campaign would then become acute. Democratic workers like to have money to spend, therefore they like a candidate whose nomination means an abundant fund.

There are some who believe that Mr. Vahey will finally see the light, and rather than engage in a campaign without funds, will step aside, and allow Mr. Foss to be nominated. If he should do this some of his friends would feel that he had shown the white feather and had given up his birthright for a mess of pottage. They feel absolutely certain that if he were nominated he would be elected. They are probably over-sanguine, but their confidence is splendid. There are others who say that Mr. Vahey will not be cajoled nor driven. They believe that he is confronted by a determined crowd of political self seekers, but that he realizes he has the rank and file of the party solidly at his back, that he will fight to the last ditch, and that then if defeated for the nomination he will acquiesce in the result as gracefully as he can.

The Cost of Living Report

The state commission to investigate and report upon the increased cost of living has performed the task entrusted to it and has made its report to the legislature. The commission was composed of Republicans, Democrats and labor men, and its conclusions were unanimous. In a word, it was found that the high cost of living was due almost exclusively to the enormous increase in the production and mintage of gold during the last ten or fifteen years, and that the trusts, the tariff, and the labor situation were not responsible to any appreciable extent. Included in the report was the opinion of Professor W. G. Sumner of Yale, acknowledged to have been one of the greatest political economists in the world, in which he stated that he knew of no cause which could produce a world-wide rise in prices such as now exists except the increase in the production of gold, and the supply of gold and currency. Professor Sumner, who died less than a month ago, was an outspoken free-trader, and never lost an opportunity to assail the protective tariff. It is therefore taken for granted that if he had believed the tariff to have been responsible even in a slight degree for the high cost of living he would not have hesitated to say so.

The report has not yet been printed, but it is expected that it will appear about the first of June. It will contain some eight or nine hundred pages, and should be one of the most valuable documents ever printed by the commenwealth. So far the legislature has only provided for an edition of nine hundred copies. It is believed, however, that an effort will be made to have this number greatly increased, so that all citizens who are interested can obtain the information which the commission has prepared for them.

The Income Tax Defeated

The legislature has, after a strenuous contest, voted against allowing congress to impose an income tax upon the citizens of Massachusetts (regardless of population). Practically the entire quota of Democratic members voted in favor of the tax. There was, however, an ample margin against the measure when it came to a vote in the house, and Massachusetts thus set its seal of disapproval upon this method of taxation by the national government. Of the two or three Democrats who opposed the measure, Frank H. Pope of Leominster made an especially able argument.

The Republican state committee is already beginning to wake up the city and town committees of the commonwealth to a pitch where active work can be begun forthwith on the next campaign. The city and town committees of Brockton and its vicinity already have been called together in conference and an appeal made to their members to set the campaign in motion. It is realized not only by the state committee but by Republicans generally that the next campaign is to be an extremely active one on both sides, and that if the Republicans intend to win it will be necessary to begin work at once. They intend to win, and they feel that it is necessary that their workers should begin to talk victory instead of defeat. If that is done the leaders of the party feel that there is no reason whatever why the ticket should not be successful this fall. They believe that all that is needed is courage and a spirit of optimism, expressed not only in talk but also in work.

Senator Thorndike Spalding

The death of Senator Thorndike Spalding of Cambridge removed from the legislature one of its ablest members. Mr. Spalding was easily a leader in the state senate and had the confidence of all the members, both Republican and Democratic, to an unusual extent. Even those who disagreed with him could but admire his frank and manly attitude on every question with which he was confronted. His death is a distinct loss to the upper branch of the legislature. This makes the sixth member, three in the house and three in the senate, who has passed away since the session began early in January. It is a number unprecedented in the memory of the oldest employe about the state house.

Today the members of the great and general court are predicting an adjournment early in June, possibly by the 11th. There is still a very large amount of work to do and it cannot be claimed that the greatest speed is being exerted to wind up affairs of state. However, many of the members recognize that it is better to go slow and be sure to be right, than to make haste and make serious mistakes.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Winchester Union was organized in 1876, and therefore celebrated its completion of thirty-four years work for God and home and native land at its meeting last Friday. Mrs. Herrick opened her house for the occasion and there were many guests both from Winchester and from out of town, Medford, Malden, Watertown and Boston being represented. A number of the members, however, were detained at home because of the scarlet fever quarantine. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Augusta C. Brigham of Malden, County secretary, and state superintendent of work at fairs and open air meetings. Two solos were sung by Mrs. Clara A. Hogan, president of the Watertown Union, who later gave an excellent address on scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, of which subject she is county superintendent. She had with her copies of the text books now most favored and spoke of the great improvemments in the methods of teaching this subject.

After the exercises refreshments were served and the members took occasion to say Good By to the president who is to sail tomorrow, May 14, from New York for Glasgow, as delegate to the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which meets June 4-11.

Delegates were appointed to the County Convention at Melrose, May 26, and the June meeting was set for the seventeeth when a group of children from the Willard Settlement will be entertained.

The world surely moves in the direction of temperance. The Kaiser has written a letter strongly condemning the beer-swing of the German students, saying that the excessive beer drinking tends toward the deterioration of the men, especially the young men on whom the economic burden of the future must rest. Those familiar with the Germany of a generation ago are astonished to find how strong is the present sentiment in favor of temperance, even total abstinence being not unknown.

The current number of "Our Message," the state W. C. T. U. organ contains several references to the Winchester Union which go to show that the Union is by no means a back number. One is a reference to the illness of Mrs. Rowe, paying tribute to her devotion to the cause and expressing sympathy for her. The others speak of the different activities of the union and its traveling members. Our Message ought to be read by every member of the union who wishes to keep in touch with the work that is being done in the State.

Just now the most interesting feature is the new country home of the Francis E. Willard Settlement, which is called Llewsac Lodge in honor of Miss Caswell, the head of the Settlement. This is to be a vacation home for poorly paid girls and an all the year round home and center of light industries for poor and handicapped women. The house has a capacity of thirty beds and just now any contribution towards the furnishings will be very welcome. The Lodge is in Bedford and Donation Day is to be May 21, when all friends are invited to come and inspect the new home.

Messrs. Kelley & Hawes Co's brick fire-proof storage building on Park street affords safe and clean storage for furniture and valuables. This is the best equipped and safest storage building in this section and patrons are assured that their goods will receive the best of care and attention.

On the Fox, the bearing is wide and the bar is heavy. That means no wearing down—perfect alignment for years and years.

You can buy two carriages—different lengths—and change them at will. You write with two colors on the Fox and you do not have to touch the ribbon from the time it goes on until it is worn out.

Use the Fox for any purpose: letter writing, invoicing, billing, tabulating, stencil cutting and heavy manifolding. One Fox machine does all these things perfectly.

I can't make a claim so strong that the proof won't back it up. That's why I say to you as a fair-play loving business man—just try the Fox Typewriter, all at my expense.

You have no risk, assume no obligation, and I thank you before hand for the privilege. Just write me, personally.

RAISING THE MAINE.

On "Patriot's Day," April 19, on the occasion of the meeting of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, Mr. W. L. Tuck offered a motion memorializing Congress to raise the battleship Maine from the harbor of Havana. Since the passage of that resolution Congress has voted to do so, so that Mr. Tuck can be said to be instrumental in influencing Congress. The resolves offered by him were as follows:

RESOLVED, That we, members of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, assembled on this "Patriots' Day," most heartily urge the Massachusetts senators and representatives in Conrgess to do their utmost to obtain immediate favorable action on the "Sulzer Bill," to remove the hulk of the battleship Maine from the Habana harbor and to secure the decent burial of the sixty three bodies of American seamen therein contained.

RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolve be forthwith sent to the President of the United States, Secretary of the Navy, each member of the Massachusetts delegation in the United States Congress and one to the Hon. William Sulzer, of New York.

The prospect for the Fourth of July for young America looks rather gloomy. No fireworks, no explosives,- how can they manifest their patriotism for the independence of these United States!

An eminent New York surgeon says that a person over 50 years of age rarely develops a case of appendicitis requiring surgical attention. This information comes as a solace to those of us who have passed the half century mark.

A copy of "Wonder-working Providence," written by Capt. Edward Johnson, one of the first settlers of Woburn in 1640 and Town Clerk for 30 years, published in London, England, in 1654, was sold last week for $245. Our town library has a copy.

When you are obliged to pay extra postage on the souvenir post cards that your friends send you from a distance, the chances are that the cards did not conform in size to the requirements of the United States post office department. Thus the cards are regarded as first class mail and two cents in stamps are required for postage.

"It is too bad," says the Wakefield Daily Item, "that some of the tight wads who attend High School ball games cannot be moved to loosen their purse strings once in a while." This is true elsewhere. Lovers of the game do not give high school teams the financial support the quality of ball they play deserves

A department store man in speaking of the markdown sales in Boston, says: "Wouldn't make a leader of it unless it was the best we could find, it doesn't pay to deceive the public. What does pay is to lead them to buy a thing they're going to like after they get it." "Honesty and good advertising, indeed, go together in the department store." The shoppers are not all agreed on this matter.

Somerville is prone to grab everything in sight, politically, and to be a long time in letting go. There had been some talk of Alexander MacGregor of Malden, for the governor's council to succeed Hon. Walter S. Glidden, who is serving his third term. It now transpires that Mr. Glidden will probably want a fourth term, so Mr. MacGregor and the rest will have to stand back. Oh you slick and greedy Somerville politicians. —[Cambridge Chronicle.

The approach of Memorial day has reopened the question of how the flag shall fly on the 30th of May. Army regulations put the flag at half staff from sunrise to noon, and then to the peak. Pres Harrison held that the flag should fly from the top of the staff all day. Authorities thus differing, the discussion is renewed year by year. The Lynn Item, in this connection, says, "The principal thing is to have the flags flying on Memorial day. And so it is.

One of the most reliable dry goods houses in Boston depended for years on the good will of its patrons and its own reputation for advertising, and never used the columns of the newspapers. Finally it became necessary to take a step forward, and advertising was resorted to. The old house today is doing more business than ever, it has added to its space, and is maintaining at the same time its reputation for clean methods. Those business men who don't believe that advertising pays or who do believe that an old concern can exist entirely on its reputation with old patrons are invited to consider the foregoing facts. Loss To Taxpayers.

The law passed by the present Legislature changing the date for the assessment of real and personal estate from May 1st to April 1st has caused taxpayers to lose a month on their 1909 assessment. In other words, they paid for twelve months last year and by changing the date they are only credited with eleven, the state, cities and towns getting an extra month of taxes. If the date had been changed to June 1st, we wonder if the State would have given its property owners the benefit of the extra month. In the sale of a large holding of real estate, this extra tax of a month is found to amount to considerable and may cause much litigation, as there will be objection to paying twice. In those cases where no sale takes place, the effect of the change will not be noticed, nevertheless there will be a double payment.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A farce and the liveliest of its kind. That is the best description that can be given of "My Wife," which is to be the play at the Castle Square next week. It will be chiefly remembered as the leading play in John Drew's repertory a season or two ago, and also that in its title character Billie Burke made the hit that carried her to stardom. It now comes to the Castle Square for its first stock production in Boston.

In the Castle Square production the heroine, Beatrice Dupre, will be made lovely and merry by Mary Young who is especially clever at the interpretation of such roles. The character dominates the play from beginning to end, and Miss Young will be the centre of its attraction. The John Craig Stock Company will fill out the other roles. "My Wife" will hold the Castle Square for only a single week.

Origin of White Race.

The discussion of the precise locality where the primitive man developed into the white race is by no means settled as yet. The old theory that the Aryan or white race began in Asia is still held by many high authorities, but other authorities equally high maintain that the original "white man's country" was Europe and that from Europe the race spread to other parts of the world. It is safe to say that the last word upon the subject has not yet been spoken. The debate is still open and will probably remain so for a very long time to come.—New York American.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Based upon the report of the grade crossing committee, on and between the lines, the thing for the town to do at present is nothing. We should not pass any vote on the "delay" plan at all. Let the Railroad Commission order it if it wants to. It has authority and initiative.

It is strange that neither the last board of Selectmen nor the Ap. Com. knew what was needed for the Town Hall account at the March meeting. What was the matter?

I am glad to see the School Committee is giving to the STAR some accounts of its meetings and trust other boards will follow suit. The Selectmen's clerk seems already to be getting tired on its reports. Perhaps the general clerk might be got to furnish them. Her shoulders appear to be broad.

The way to settle the milk row is for the contractors to raise their price and then pay the farmers more. For its food value good milk is decidedly the cheapest article of diet and consumers should be willing to stand an advance of price. Nobody kicks on the price of beer or tobacco.

The previous Cassidy verdicts were not set aside because of their size, but because he had signed a release to the town which the court thought was not obtained by fraud. The juries evidently have given him the benefit of the doubt, but the town officials have always been entirely satisfied that he knew just what he signed, as it had all been talked over with him, and that no fraud was used in obtaining his signature. He could not read writing, but could sign his name.

The best thing about the report of the committee on the high cost of living is that it spent less than $1000 although authorized to spend $15,000. It had the ability to see it could accomplish little of value and the honesty to act accordingly.

The Transcript's scathing piece on our legislators has done a lot of good "on the hill." It proves that a scourge of truth fearlessly applied is a power for good there when applied by an honest wielder.

It is amusing to hear the B and M opposing the town's plan of bridge at the centre as dangerous when it has not only maintained the style of gates it has there, but has always operated them from one side of the tracks. It has many much worse death traps also all over its lines. But when it comes to cost, the undecided question is how much is a human life worth? Not much in this country apparently.

Some well meaning people are going too far with 4th of July restrictions, the danger being that there will be a reaction and a movement which now bids fair to accomplish much receive a setback. This town has taken the right stand, providing a good celebration and making and enforcing reasonable restrictions. Unless proper celebrations are provided the undesirable ones can not be stopped. It is money well expended to have a public and official celebration every year, and we have done a wise thing in appropriating all of the money needed and doing away with the subscription list. Undoubtedly the legislature will pass a bill prohibiting toy cartridge pistols and restricting the size of cannon crackers.

Article 6 in the town meeting warrant refers to sections 58 to 61 of Chapter 48 of the Revised Laws which, if accepted by the town, provide for original and concurrent action of the Selectmen and County Commissioners on highways and County bridges. If I am not mistaken the town accepted these laws several years ago.

Some of the streets might be re-named to advantage but why not let the Selectmen report upon them?

Are we ever, ever, ever, going to take any definite action toward beginning to put our ponds in better condition? They might be made things of beauty.

The final meeting of the Woman's Guild, will be in care of "The Open Table," and will be held at Mrs. E. H. Punchard's, Church street, Tuesday, May 17, at 2.45 o'clock. All friends of the Parish are invited.

The Tea Room, in charge of the Saint Cross Committee, of the Church of the Epiphany was auspiciously opened at the new Handicraft Shop, Monday, May 9, and will continue open every day from 4 to 6 o'clock. Delicious sandwiches and cake are served in addition to Tea, in case any would be patrons are non-tea drinkers.

HOW LONG IS A DAY?

Some of the World's Inhabitants Eat 315 Meals During One.

If we should meet a man and he should casually remark that he ate 315 meals yesterday we would doubtless be somewhat astonished at his appetite. Likewise we would feel sorry for the man who said that, having foolishly eaten three eggs with bacon for breakfast, he had no appetite for his Christmas dinner But maybe the first man was from Spitzbergen, where they have a day three and a half months in length, whereas the poor chap who missed the Christmas feast lived in Finland, at Torena, where Christmas day is something less than three hours long

On the whole, it would be rather wise if one should undertake to do certain work, to receive so much per day in payment, to understand just where the work is to be done, else one might have to labor eighteen and a half hours at Stockholm, if it happened to be the longest day of the year, or all the time from May 21 to July 22 if at Wardbury, in Norway. In St Petersburg the longest day is nineteen hours and the shortest five hours. At Torena, Finland there is a twenty two hour day. At London and Bremen the longest day is sixteen and a half hours, while at Hamburg and Dantzig there are seventeen hours in the longest day. In Washington the longest day is about fifteen hours.—Exchange

THE FORTNIGHTLY.

Miss Grace Chamberlain of Cambridge whose excellent work in a number of previous recitals has been a source of much pleasure and instruction to the ladies of the club, came before The Fortnightly on Monday afternoon in two readings of an opposite character. She first read that part of "The Taming of the Shrew" which is supposed to have been written entirely by Shakespeare, using the version employed by Edwin Booth. Although somewhat hampered by the use of a book, she was in fine voice and so entered into the spirit of the play, that her audience were as amused at Kate's conversion as were the servants, whose amazement she so skillfully depicted. Remarking that "The Taming of the Shrew" was on the principal of "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," she afterwards read the story of "The Third Floor Back." This she said was an illustration of the Christian way of overcoming evil with good, and uplifting humanity by one's own personal goodness. Mrs. Gilpatric sang very sweetly "A Gap in the Wall," responding to an encore with "Because she kissed me."

At the regular business meeting which was in charge of Mrs. Mabel G. Nichols, the first vice president, the following ladies were appointed delegates to the State Federation, June 6-7 to be held at Lynn. —Mrs. Dunning, Mrs. Nichols, Mrs. Littlefield, Mrs. Ripley and Mrs. Ely.

The Current Events Class will meet in Assembly Hall at the High school on Friday, May 27.

Mrs. Woods, Mrs. White and Miss Folts have the year book in charge. Members are asked to report to one of the above any change in residence or telephone number.

THE JUNE BREAKFAST.

It is with regret and disappointment that the Winchester Visiting Nurse Association has decided to omit the June Breakfast for the present year, but the outbreak of scarlet fever in the town makes it advisable to take no unnecessary risk of exposure to infection. It will be remembered that, at the time of the first June Breakfast, the assurance was given that except for the annual fee, no other appeal for contributions would be made during the year.

The Association has kept its word and the public has responded with equal faith, sending such generous contributions of food and money that the sum realized from the Breakfast has paid nearly one of the year's expenses. The failure of the amount usually received means a serious loss in carrying on the work of the Association and inasmuch as the reason for omitting the Breakfast is one in which each has a personal interest, it is suggested that all shall be asked to give the cost of the food usually contributed, the price of one ticket or of many tickets, for the good of the cause.

The Association has always relied with confidence upon the support of the community and it has been given, not by way of charity, but as the friendly help of the neighbor, who does not recognize his gift as a sacrifice. In this emergency will not the hope of the Association still be justified? An opportunity will be given for contributions or they may be sent directly to Mrs. Metcalf, Treasurer, to members of the Board of Directors, the Breakfast Committee or the Table Committee.

Board of Directors—Mrs. Joshua Coit, president; Mrs. Wm. B. French, vice president; Mrs. Edwin C. Gilman, secretary, Mrs. Ellen E. Metcalf, treasurer.

W. H. S. NOTES.

Some important changes are to be made in the editorial staff of the Recorder for next year. This has been decided after careful consideration and investigation into the methods employed in other schools. At present there are undoubtedly too many on the editorial staff (10) and it seems that each one counts on the other to do the work. It may be safely said that far too large a proportion of the work has fallen upon the editor-in-chief during the current year.

Next year the number will be cut to twelve and consist of the following: Editor-in-chief, Ass. Editor-in-chief, Exchange Editor, Alumni Editor, Athletic Reporter, Staff Artist, Business Manager, Ass. Business Manager, Circulation manager, Class reporters one from each of the three lower classes.

These editors will be nominated by a committee consisting of the present editor-in-chief, Warren Taplin; next year's editor in chief, Francis Newton, and Principal Wixom.

The asst. editor and asst. business manager will be chosen from the class of 1912 instead of from the senior classes only as in former years. The position of staff artist will be open to all classes. The class of 1911 has already elected Francis Newton, for next year editor-in-chief and will elect the others as soon as the nominating committee have returned their report.

The track candidates of the class of 1910 have been practising daily under Capt. Main and anticipate no difficulty in winning the cup as in former years.

What is the matter with the base ball team? This is what everybody is asking. The material is there, the team has a coach, two reliable pitchers and three batters whose average is above .290. The fighting spirit seems lacking and the team is given poor support by the school.

Why not start some cheering tomorrow in the game with Thayer Academy. This will at least encourage the players and ought to help a lot.

BASE BALL.

Stoneham 1 Winchester 0

A lucky combination of an error, a passed ball and a hit in the sixth inning gave Stoneham a hard fought game on Manchester Field, last Saturday. The game developed into a pitcher's battle between Goddu and Harris in which each gave four hits. Goddu only struck out one man, but all the chances were easy and had not this error occurred, the game would have gone to extra innings. This is how it happened. Sweet had flied out to left field, when Harris hit another in almost exactly the same spot. Saltmarsh had the ball in his glove but dropped it, after a hard run. Flaherty let one go by and Harris came clear around on it; but after some oratory was sent back to third. Judkins sent him over however with a clean single to center. Winchester got to third but once and then slipped up when they had a fine chance to score. With one out Hurd singled and went to third on Flaherty's hit, after LeDuc had flied to left; Tuck popped to Jenkins and Winchester never had another look-in. Two double plays figured in keeping Stoneham's score down, while Tuck's leaping stab of a liner at deep short after a hard run out, was easily the feature of the game.

Arlington 5 Winchester 0

The strong Arlington High school team repeated the performance of Stoneham, by shutting out Winchester, on Manchester field Tuesday, by the score of 5 to 0. Hill, the Arlington pitcher, had the game well under control and the only two hits made off him were by Capt. LeDuc, who was left on bases both times. Arlington started right off in the first inning for with two down, Trainer singled and took second when Mathews let the ball go through him. Mahoney also singled but Saltmarsh held Trainer at third and Kelley hit a grounder to Hurd which he juggled just long enough to let Arlington score. A base on balls, an error and two hits, one a double, yielded three more runs in the seventh and a passed ball and two hits gave Arlington their final run in the ninth. Winchester reached third but twice and should have scored once at least. This was in the first inning when with only one out, Hurd was on third and LeDuc on second, Flaherty and Tuck both went out on weak infield taps. This was really Winchester's only chance, as at all other stages of the game, Hill just wouldn't let Winchester hit the ball. The score:

Couldn't Stand Satire.

A burglar while attempting to rob a bloated bondholder of Maryville by mistake got into the humble residence of an editor next door. After unsuccessfully fumbling about for suitable assets for some time he was disgusted to observe the tenant of the house sitting up in bed and laughing at him.

"Ain't you old Skindersen, the capitalist?" inquired the housebreaker.

"Nary time," chuckled the journalist. "I'm the editor of the Screaming Eagle."

"Jerusalem!" said the burglar, looking at his stemwinder. "And here I've been wasting four precious hours on this branch almshouse. I say, old quill driver, you never poke fun at your subscribers, do you?"

"Not the cash ones."

"Exactly," said the burglar, taking out his wallet. "Here's six months' subscription to call this thing square. If there's one thing on earth I can't stand, it's satire."—London Tit Bits.

He Did Not Hesitate.

"You must rest," said the specialist after a knowing thumping of the popular preacher's person. "You will be in the next world in three months unless you go abroad and take a complete rest."

"Oh, then I'll go abroad at once," replied the preacher quite innocently.—Youth's Companion.

COLOSSUS OF RHODES.

One of the Ancient Seven Wonders of the World.

The ancients succeeded in making that alloy of copper which is known as bronze. Among the seven wonders of the world was the famous statue, wholly made of bronze, historically known as the Colossus of Rhodes. It represented Phoebus, the national deity of the Rhodians. It was begun by Chares, a pupil of Lysippus, the sculptor, and was completed by Laches 288 B. C. The popular belief is that it stood astride the harbor of Rhodes, that it was 105 feet high and that ships could easily sail between its legs.

Pliny said that few men could clasp its thumb. It was cast on metal plates, afterward joined together, and this process occupied twelve years. In the interior was a spiral staircase reaching into its head, and in a great mirror suspended to its neck were reflected the coast of Syria and the ships sailing to Egypt.

After it had stood for sixty-four years this colossus was overthrown by an earthquake, and its remains lay on the shore for 923 years—that is, until A. D. 672, when they were sold by the Saracens to a dealer. The original cost was 300 talents—about $6,000,000—and it is not too much to say that a similar image might be constructed now in one fourth of the time and at one third of the original cost. Rhodes, by the way, must have had colossus on the brain, for Pliny relates that the port was adorned with 1,000 colossal statues of the sun.

LONDON THEATERS.

The Ordeal of Getting Past the Aged Ticket Taker.

The first difference I always find between going to the play in London and in New York is that in New York the man who has paid for a seat is made to feel that he is a patron of the house, while in London he is greeted by the staff of the theater not exactly as an intruder, but as a necessary evil. They appreciate that an audience is a necessary evil, but sooner than have one they would almost prefer to close the house.

In London for that importantly strategic outpost of ticket taker an old man of eighty is always employed. You think this is accident, but it is not. Old age naturally suggests failing eyesight, and when he keeps you waiting in the foyer while he examines your ticket and assures himself that it is not a laundry bill or a motor bus receipt you attribute the delay to his old eyes. But in detaining you he has a motive. Standing at his elbow, scowling darkly, there always is another man, apparently a plain clothes out from Scotland Yard, uncomfortably disguised in evening dress. And while the aged ticket taker pretends to scrutinize your ticket the lookout man scans you. You cannot escape his eye. He never sleeps. No American, no matter how reckless, can hope to pass that man with a concealed bomb or a revolver or wearing a white tie with a dinner coat.—Collier's.

Flies at Sea.

The finding of flies and butterflies a long way out at sea is perhaps to most readers a fact not very well known. A recent traveler in the tropics relates that when thirty miles out from land a plague of flies overtook the vessel on which he was steaming. The cabin was so full of them that the beams were blackened. Common black houseflies they were for the most part, with, however, a good sprinkling of large green flies. Where they could have come from was a mystery, but they were a terrible nuisance, and, although those on board swept off hundreds in a net, their numbers were not sensibly diminished. Another singular circumstance was that, although no land was in sight, large dragon flies repeatedly flew across the ship, and a large dark butterfly was observed to flit across in the direction of the nearest land, quite thirty miles away, without stopping to rest on the vessel at all.—London Globe.

Both Rather Flippant.

There is a curious parallelism between two stories told respectively of the late Mr. Spurgeon and of Dean Swift.

Mr. Spurgeon on hearing of the devastation wrought by an earthquake in Essex merely remarked, "I am glad to hear that my county is moving at last."

The dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, was watching with a friend the roof of a building on which several men were at work fixing slates. Suddenly one of the men vanished. Thereupon the dean turned to his companion and said, "I like to see a man go quickly through his work."

Egotism of Genius.

When Wordsworth, Southey and Coleridge were walking together, and Coleridge remarked that the day was so fine "it might have been ordered for three poets," the gentle Wordsworth promptly exclaimed, "Three poets! Who are the other two?"

Disraeli, when a mere youth, wrote to his sister that he had heard Macauley, Sheil and Grant speak, "but between ourselves I could floor them all." And again he said, "When I want to read a good book I write one."

His Birthday.

"When were you born?" asked an inquisitive of Robert Louis one day. "May 10, 1880," was the instant reply, and Robert Louis and Fanny Stevenson exchanged glances. This was their wedding day.

A Foot Rule.

Workman—Is there a foot rule in this house? Housekeeper—Yes. Everybody wipes their feet on this mat before they dare come in! Comic Cuts.

On Lifting Cats and Rabbits.

It is a mistaken idea that the proper way to lift a full grown cat is by the nape of its neck without supporting the lower part of its body with the other hand. It is true that the mother cat carries young kittens by grasping in her mouth the loose skin at the back of her offspring's neck, but a tiny kitten is a very different matter from a large cat, and, indeed, the only way to lift a kitten without squeezing or hurting its soft little body is to lift it by its neck. But after it has grown larger its own weight is too great to be supported by such a bit of skin and fur as is so grasped by the hand, and many a cat suffers perfect tortures by being held in this manner and is quite helpless to run or struggle, as in such a position certain of its muscles cannot be controlled, and it is absolutely at the mercy of its unconscious tormentor.

The same rule should be observed in lifting rabbits by their ears. They should always be partially supported by the free hand and not allowed to dangle with their whole weight straining from their large but necessarily delicate ears.—Watchword.

More Than One Way.

The caller, a man whom he had known in the old town back in Pennsylvania, had dropped in to talk old times with the busy lawyer, and the lawyer had endured it patiently for an hour and a half. Then, unseen by the caller, he pushed a small knob at the end of his desk, and a bell rang in the adjoining room.

"Excuse me a moment, Mr. Hockensplutter," he said, stepping into the other room and proceeding to hold this one sided conversation over an imaginary telephone.

"Hello!"

"—— —— —— ——."

"Yes."

"—— —— —— ——?"

"No, Bertha, I'll not have time to come home for dinner. It's already 4:30, and I have several hours' work yet to do. I am very busy and have been detained."

"—— —— —— ——."

"Yes. Goodby!"

Then he went back to his desk. But Mr. Hockensplutter had already risen to go.—Chicago Tribune.

That Genius Whistler.

Of Whistler Lady St. Helier in "Memories of Fifty Years" writes thus: "He was a genius and had all the defects and qualities of one. To him everything was a joke, the subject of a bonmot. The lightest and daintiest of persiflage was what he excelled in, and one never had a dull moment in his company. He was always late for dinner, arranging the immortal lock of gray hair in its proper place as he came into the room, with apologies and excuses, none of them true, of which he was perfectly conscious and also of the fact that his host and hostess knew that they were not. Wherever he was there would be a circle listening to him, and his ringing laugh would be heard all over the room as he sent his shafts right and left into the joints of the armor of those who were attacking him. It was a great surprise and almost a shock when he appeared as a benedict."

How Eskimos Measure Time.

Writing of the Eskimo methods of measuring time in a region of six months day or night, Harry Whitney in Outing says:

"The Eskimo divides his periods into 'sleeps,' but a sleep does not designate by any means the civilized measure of day and night. It is, in fact, a very uncertain term. Often we traveled from twenty to thirty hours without rest. Now there was no night, and I so far lost count of time that I was not at all certain of dates. Our single marches with the succeeding 'sleep' not infrequently covered a full forty-eight hours, or two ordinary days. The object of these extended marches was to take advantage of good weather and general conditions or because no safe or convenient camping place presented itself in the interim."

Two of a Kind.

There is something about the character of mules that makes their owners at times almost equally stubborn. In the Washington Star this dialogue concerning one if not two such animals is reported:

"Why don't you get rid of that mule?"

"Well, suh," answered Erastus Pinkley, "I hates to give in. If I was to trade that mule off he'd regard it as a personal victory. He's been tryin' foh de las' six weeks to get rid o' me."

An Injustice.

When George III. first met Sir John Irwin, a thirsty soul, he remarked facetiously, "They tell me, Sir John, you're fond of a glass of wine."

"Your majesty," gravely responded the courtier, "your informants do me a great injustice. They should have said a bottle."—St. Louis Republic.

He Remembered.

Wife (revisiting the scene of her betrothal)—I remember, Algernon, so well when you proposed to me how painfully embarrassed you were. Algernon—Yes, dear, and I remember so well how kind and encouraging you were and how easy you made it for me, after all.—London Tit-Bits.

Experience.

"Experience would be a wonderful asset but for one thing."

"What's that?"

"You can never sell it for what it cost you."

A small bag cannot be made to contain what is large. A short rope cannot be used to draw water from a deep well.—Chinese Proverb.

Spoiled the Trick.

A New York official who had gone through a political campaign, speaking of trickiness, said: "The tricky man usually winds up by being too tricky, like Brown.

"Brown, who lives in Fifth avenue, suspected his English butler of drinking his wine. So one night he drugged a couple of bottles of four or five dollar Chateau Yquem and left them in the dining room.

"Unfortunately that night Brown's wife returned late from the opera. She saw the rare wine and had it put down in the wine cellar along with the twelve dozen other bottles of Chateau Yquem that Brown had laid in.

"Brown is wondering to this day which two bottles are the drugged ones. He has stopped drinking Chateau Yquem. In fact, I understand his whole stock of it is for sale at a reasonable price."—Exchange.

Truth and Fiction.

At the Lambs club one night were a number of literary men as dinner guests, when some one gave utterance to the bromidiom:

"After all, gentlemen, truth is stranger than fiction."

"Perhaps it is," said Wilton Lackaye, with a sly glance at an Indiana novelist, "but not so successful. One never hears of its going into the tenth edition in six months."—New York Tribune.

An Anxious Inquiry.

Religion In Holland.

The following incident was told me by Lecky in somewhat whimsical illustration of his belief that if religion were to die out of all other European nations it would still survive in Holland: A Dutch peasant was in sore straits about the impossibility of making his hens observe Sunday. He came to his pastor with a present of eggs. He regretted, he said, that he could not prevent his hens from laying these on the Sabbath, but he made what amends he could by giving them to God's minister that they might be handed over to the poor and infirm.—"Old and Odd Memories."

A Long Felt Want.

An American once went to Windsor castle and insisted upon seeing Queen Victoria. He was told that it was quite impossible, as an audience with the queen could be had only by appointment. Still he persisted, and then they told him flatfooted that before seeing the queen he must state the object of his visit. He said he wanted to show her a new piece of furniture, a throne bed—a perfect throne by day and a perfect bed by night.

Her Sad Finish.

"Did you ever know a girl to die for love?"

"Yes."

"Did she just fade away and die because some man deserted her?"

"No. She just took in washing and worked herself to death because the man she loved married her."—Houston Post.

The Medium.

Right or Wrong!

Professed politicians who have reduced officeholding to an exact science and the independent voter a sad stumbling block, a fact which is amusingly disclosed by a story found in the life of the late George Monro Grant, the eminent Canadian educator and clergyman.

Toward the end of Sir John Macdonald's life he and Principal Grant, then the head of Queen's college, met at dinner at the house of the premier's brother-in-law, Professor Williamson.

"How I wish," the premier said to the principal, "that you would be a steady friend of mine."

"My dear Sir John," the principal replied, "I have always supported you when you were right."

The premier's eyes twinkled, and he laid his hand upon the shoulder of the principal.

"My dear man," said he, "I have no use for that species of friendship."

"This," said the artist, who was showing a visitor through his studio, "is a study in still life."

"Yes," explained the artist, "it is a portrait of Mrs. Enpeck's husband."—Chicago News.

Free Postage.

When the postoffice was first opened at Kai Feng, China, the clerks had a fight with some men who bought stamps and refused to go away until the stamps were licked and stuck on their envelopes for them. The foreign post offices in Palestine are usually convulsed by a spirit of keen competition. If a parcel exceeding the regulation weight or size is taken to an office and refused the traveler in the majority of cases has only to threaten to take it to a rival office, and it is straightway received without a murmur. So keen is the rivalry between some of these offices that residents in Palestine possess a free post within certain districts. Between Jaffa and the surrounding colonies and also within Jerusalem the German and Austrian offices make no charge for the delivery of local letters.—Chicago News.

An Obedient Dog.

Schnapps is a dachshund, and the people who know all about the breed call the queer looking animal handsome. In the house in New York where he is the pet he is credited with more than ordinary dog sense and with understanding every word said to him in English or German. In order to demonstrate his sagacity his master said to him a few evenings ago, "Schnapps, the young people have been here long enough. Go down and tell the boys to go home." Downstairs he waddled and, standing before the visiting youths, barked and howled, then ran to the front door and back again and kept up the performance until, as his proud master explained, "the young men heard and saw the point. Pretty smart for a dachs, eh?"—Exchange.

Home Course In Domestic Science

XV.—Use of Color In House Decoration.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy Iowa State College

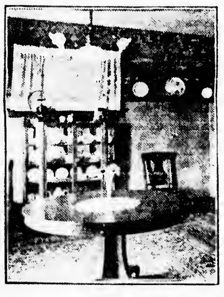
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

HAVE you ever considered how much environment has to do with the good or bad health of the individual or family? If you have thought about it at all you know that cheerful, pleasant and suitable surroundings in the home lend their aid in maintaining good health. These also assist in character building. The influence of such things may be unconscious to persons who have given little or no thought to the subject, but without doubt the influence exists to some degree.

The choice of color, the style and arrangement of furniture, even the pictures which adorn the walls, all have their part in developing the men and women who inhabit the home. Comparatively few persons have given much thought to the study of color, and as a result its selection for house or furnishings has been more the result of chance or mischance than of good judgment. Color gives atmosphere to our homes, and rightly chosen, it brings a sense of comfort and satisfaction with one's abode. If these are lacking the house has failed to be a home in the fullest sense of the word.

For one who has never studied color the best advice is to choose quiet tones and copy nature as far as possible. If one has a favorite color it should surround one in either house furnishing or personal adornment whenever suitable. Why not choose colors according to personal tastes?

We select our friends from sympathy in thought and feeling. We do not always philosophize about it or stop to analyze why we find greater pleasure in the society of some people than in others. But we recognize certain principles in our liking and know that we are happier and enjoy our friends better when we find those principles and charms have a place in their temperaments. Just so it is with color. We cannot always give a reason for our preferences, but we are sure they exist, and most people are sensitive to color to a greater or less degree. One's favorite color brings repose and enjoyment, is conducive to health and exercises an actual influence on our life and moods. But even in gratifying this preference wisdom must be shown, for there are many colors of which a little is enjoyable when a mass would be unendurable. Constantly surrounded by a glow of vivid scarlet would be like close companionship with a brass band, but a touch of scarlet amid dull surroundings is a pleasing sensation.



ARTISTIC DINING ROOM.

As far as effect is concerned, the color of a room makes its atmosphere. It may be cheerful or sad, cozy or disturbing, according to its quality and force. Without color a room is much like a bare canvas, which might, but does not, give a vivid picture of some phase of life. The colorless room has nothing to tell of the character of its occupants.

Color in a house includes much that is classed as furniture. It applies to carpets, draperies and ornaments, but it is first and pre-eminently applied to wall treatment. In selecting color for a single room or for an entire house certain points must be borne in mind. The first is that one person does not make a home. It takes the combined influence and personality of every person living under the roof to give its true character. Every book, every picture, every carefully selected piece of furniture, brought into the house makes it a part of a beautiful whole, and no house can be absolutely perfect without all these evidences of family life.

Good rules to follow in selecting colors for any room are to make the choice on this basis.

With reference to the light in the room.

With reference to other colors in adjoining rooms.

With reference to the general character of the furnishing.

Interiors with a southern exposure should be treated with cool, light colors, such as blues and greens in various tones, water green, emerald green and blue green; also the silvery tones of gray. Rooms in which little sunlight is admitted must be brightened and be given the effect of sunlight. This may be imparted by using warm colors in its decorations. These are yellow, red brown, reds, yellow with a hint of red, olive and gold green.

It is well to bear in mind that almost every color has a cool and a warm tone. The first is produced by combining blue or green with the original color, while the warm tone is made by combining red or yellow with it. Thus brown with a hint of blue is cold, while brown with a hint of red is warm, and the effect of the two is entirely different.

The number, size and placing of the windows also greatly affect the intensity of the color. It must always be remembered that any interior is dark compared with out of doors, and in the lightest room there will be dark corners or spaces where the color will seem much darker than it really is. This explains why wall paper which appeared perfectly satisfactory in the dealer's store is often a disappointment on the wall of the room for which it was bought. The sample in the store was displayed in a different light from that in the room. Three principles will always govern the proper use of color in house decoration: first, that of color in relation to light, second, color in gradation, and, third, color in masses. These principles are not difficult to master, but they are as important and as impossible to escape as climate. The shades of color used on walls or ceiling govern everything else. The color of the walls prescribes the color that must be used in floor coverings, curtains and draperies. After the relation of color to light has been established and personal preferences have been taken into account the next principle is that of gradation. The strongest and purest tones of the color are naturally and almost by instinct put at the base—that is, the floor covering should carry the darkest color or its strongest tone.

It is not often advisable to use what is known as a one color decoration—that is, confining the entire decoration to a single color. Such a plan is much like trying to make a melody on one note of the scale. The best effects in both sounds and color are produced by the skillful variation of tones. The gradation and combination of even opposing tints give the greatest satisfaction to the eye. But, whatever the color or colors used, they must be darkest on the floor. The walls will give the second grade in color and the ceiling the last. These gradations, too, should be distinct and separate enough in tone to be perfectly apparent. The connecting grades may appear in furniture covering and draperies. Then the third principle, using color in masses, means that whatever color is used should be given space enough to establish itself freely. In other words, it should not be broken into patches and neutralized by divisions. Nature does not put a single red leaf on a tree and then change the color to yellow or green. Rather the whole forest will have its various colors so arranged that one is perfectly conscious of every one of them. The brilliant red is in quantity sufficient to make itself felt, yet it does not interfere with the glow of the yellow or the restfulness of the green. The general tone of the room may be what you will—green or blue or a division of each—but to be perfect every detail in the room must be related to one or both of these colors. If this rule is disregarded every piece of furniture unrelated to the whole becomes a spot which has no real connection with and puts the entire room out of harmony.

Where to Use Different Colors.

Some colors are much better suited to one room than another. If one's favorite color is pink it should not be used in the dining room or hall. Light blues, pinks, lavender and other dainty shades are more suitable for sleeping rooms occupied by young people, though for the average person there is no better color than a soft, unobtrusive green for a bedroom.

Red has for years been the favorite color for dining room, and yet there are certain reasons why it is entirely out of place there. For one reason, the color soon becomes monotonous and has an irritating effect upon nervous or highly strung persons. Although a warm color, it is inclined to absorb light. It is very rich and warm in sunlight or artificial light, but in ordinary daylight it makes a room seem dark and gloomy. If red is to be used at all in wall covering it should be confined to a hall or den, some room which is not in constant use. When yellow happens to be a favorite color it is a good one to use in the dining room, particularly when, as is often the case, that room has a northern exposure. Golden browns and tans are satisfactory in living rooms when conditions are right for them—that is, when there is not too much sunlight in the room.

Living rooms should be decorated not only with restful colors, but those which suggest cheeriness as well. Sleeping rooms should be soothing, and the colors which produce this effect are supposed to be quiet greens, soft grays and dull blues.

The paneled wall and beamed ceiling of dark wood with color showing between make a splendid finish for living and dining rooms and hall, especially in a country house. One particularly attractive country home had the dining room ceiled with birch logs on which the white bark had been retained to gleam in the firelight. A tinting of soft green on rough plaster gave the room a delightful woodsy effect quite in keeping with the rural surroundings. How much more appropriate a decoration like that in a country house than some artificial arrangement copied from a city house!

TEACHERS' CLUB.

One of the most successful meetings of the Teachers' Club was held last Friday evening at the High school hall. Over one hundred were in attendance, as this meeting was open to friends of the members.

The program was so arranged that for the first of the evening all were brought together in a pleasant social way. Next came the play entitled "The Man from Brandon." This was much enjoyed by all.

Mr. Thompson who appeared as "The Man from Brandon" carried out his part to perfection and caused great amusement. No one could have played the part of the Doctor better than Mr. Davis. Mr. Hellion, as Dan Moulton, was a jolly college student. Miss Davis, as Aunt Janet, showed her natural fondness for animals in her devotion to her pet dog Fido, who also played his part well. Miss Jepson and Miss Pierce were exceedingly good in their parts; Miss Jepson as neice of Aunt Janet and Miss Pierce as her friend. Miss Harriman was especially good in taking the part of Anne, the maid.

Refreshments were served, consisting of sandwiches and coffee.

Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. The next meeting will be an out-door one, the annual picnic of the club.

VOL. XXIX. NO. 45. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1910. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

THE GRADE CROSSING ABOLITION NOT SETTLED?

At the town meeting last Friday evening a majority of the 200 men present voted in favor of abandoning all proceedings for the abolition of the grade crossing in Winchester, such course to be without prejudice to bringing further proceedings, and that the town should do nothing whatever, but let the Railroad put in subways at the station and the center, and narrow down the gate limits, so that by improved gates and fencing there might be a greater control of passage at the square.

In this action, did the town throw away a great opportunity? Not if it no longer cares to have the grade crossing abolished. Not if it believes its action of five years ago in directing a suit to accomplish an abolition was unwise and untimely. Not if it values security of life and property less than it did five years ago, and less than it has done in its persistent prosecution of its suit from that time until now. Not if it is content to abide the great inconvenience of having the only passage over the tracks at the center of the town closed half the time by gates. Not if it is indifferent to having the central portion of the town deteriorate rather than improve.

Before this vote, there was finally held out to the town, under advantageous circumstances, just what it had repeatedly voted for, and had sought and labored to obtain by persistent litigation, for five years. The committee of five reporting last week declared in town meeting that the Railroad was fair and liberal in offering to share according to the statutes all the expense up to $300,000, in acceding to the town's plan of abolition. The special commission on grade crossing is known to be accommodating to the town, and desirous of reporting what the town and the other parties agree upon. The holders of the greater part of the property affected, who could claim damages, have agreed to arbitrate their damages. Of the other holders of property affected, very few would litigate. The property of our friend who always litigates and prospers in so doing, would be so slightly affected, he could not carry off great profits this time. Who could recover great damages by arbitration or by jury? It is buncombe and false alarm to fear that anybody could, for, as said by one speaker in the last meeting, there are no fine properties in the central district, no properties which could be greatly injured,—and all the large holders agree to leave the entire question to the seven named arbitrators.

What more favorable conditions could we ask? So favorable conditions could never have been expected. Did the town ever think that land owners would walk up and say they would claim no damages, or could state just what their damages would be, if these great changes were made? Expecting to settle damages as best it could, and regardless of methods of settlement, the town voted for the abolition proceedings and has repeatedly voted to persist in them; no man, no committee, can surely estimate in advance what the measure of any man's damages may be. It is exceptional that owners are willing to agree in advance to arbitrate and join with the town in naming the arbitrators.

The figures stated at the meeting as being the estimates presented in the various hearings should not be alarming,—$253,000, for the whole cost of the town's plan of abolition. The men who have made the most examination and have followed the case through all its hearings, do not believe that an additional $100,000 could be required at the worst, to pay all costs of construction and settle all damages.

The town has repeatedly voted that a single bridge near the station would be inadequate and unsatisfactory. It knows that if two bridges are built, it must pay the entire costs and damages of one of them. The town's counsel stated to the meeting that all the lawyers and men in all interests who have attended the hearings, with the exception of one member of the grade-crossing commission, regard the town's plan of carrying the highway over the railroad at the center as the method of abolition best for the town. Some of our best men are opposed to it; the past proceedings have fixed them in this opposition. By far the greater number of our citizens, however, are in favor of the town's plan.

Personally, when the town first voted almost unanimously, to institute proceedings for abolition of the grade crossing, I thought the great undertaking and expense might be deferred a little longer, but I have never abated from supporting the town's conclusion. I have never had any employment other than simply to see to it that the center should not be closed up. I have no other employment now. I do not represent many of the land owners, and my impression is that most of the land owners, unfortunately, are more content to stick in the mud with their old buildings, if gates can still remain at the center, than to have radical improvements made. My action in town meeting always has been, and in writing this is, upon my individual conviction and responsibility only.

What is before us? If the town's plan should prevail there would be a high and homely bridge structure at the center. This should not be disguised. The approach to it from Church street would be easy; from other streets at considerable grade. The tracks would be depressed very little, if at all, but they would not be raised. The whole area about the square would be raised and improved for all time. Better structures would take the place of the shacks which so ill comport with the beauty of this residential town, and good buildings will not be constructed in this area until the grades are separated. With the town's plan accomplished the central business portion of the town will all be changed for the better, and will yield much heavier taxes.

Until the grades are separated, with the increased number of trains, the greater number of electrics crossing over, the increased number of automobiles and the more numerous population, the gates must be closed half the time; and the delays and inconvenience of passing, will, in mere cost of time expended, every year far out-weigh the interest on the highest possible measure of abolition costs. The growth and advancement are so great the town cannot afford to live in this temporizing, inconvenient and dangerous grade crossing fashion. It is out of harmony with the spirit and history of the community.

Some gentlemen still look to see the tracks raised through the town and the highway carried underneath them. To say nothing of the disfigurement of a town division wall, the noise and din from upraised tracks, and the danger in a central crossing of sharp angled streets at a low level below the tracks, would be a dreadful infliction.

If the town would forestall a portentous future, secure an abolition which coming generations will approve and avoid possible catastrophes, its strong men better have a revision of last week's action, which was contrary to the logical sequence of all the facts and arguments produced, avail of what has been gained, adopt anew the town plan get the needed legislation early in the coming year and still prosecute the plan with patient purpose, without vacillation or timidity.

Alfred S. Hall.

TOWN MEETING PROCEDURE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

For cities of any considerable population some sort of representative system of government is necessary, while for small or moderate sized communities nothing has ever yet been devised which is so satisfactory and effective as the New England town meeting; this, however, with all its advantages, has certain drawbacks, and the meeting last Friday evening was a good illustration of some of the weaknesses. The merits need not be dwelt upon, these are sufficiently well understood; the defects are apparently asserting themselves here in Winchester more and more every year, through the action of a small number of individuals.

Some of the speaking a week ago showed town-meeting government at its best; one might accept or reject the arguments advanced, that is immaterial; the point is the speakers themselves had evidently given careful thought to the subject and were expressing their honest convictions. On the other hand there are those who are reckless in their reflections upon the disinterestedness or honor and integrity of citizens who are giving their best thought and the fruits of their experience to the service of the town. Men of reputation and standing are assailed almost as if they were common criminals, assailed, too, by individuals who ought to have the sense and decency to recognize that they at least are not of the character to set themselves up in judgment over others.

It would hardly be worth while to use up time and space over this matter, except for one or two reasons. The town meeting form of government is our most precious political heritage, and should call into service the best talent of the community. Many good citizens are so disgusted with the actions of a few that they do not have the patience to attend town meetings and are unwilling to hold town office, one of whose rewards is ignorant and irresponsible criticism. This is not a commendable, but it is at any rate an explicable attitude of mind toward town meeting attendance and office-holding.

Some of us (myself included) believe it wiser to ignore absolutely the carping criticism of universal censors. The situation, however, is somewhat different when reputations are assailed; or when our town government is rendered less effective, or the motives and devotion of town officials, in the performance of their duties, and in the expenditure of thousands and tens of thousands of dollars, are maligned by persons whose opinions, unfortunately accepted by some, are nevertheless not worth the breath or paper used in expressing them.

What is the remedy? There is one, drastic but legal, which is doubtless familiar to those who have served as moderator, and may be learned by others who care to look up the law on the subject.

Charles F. A. Currier.
Winchester, May 18, 1910.

HIGH SCHOOL COURSE OF STUDY.

In general the modifications are intended to enable pupils who are preparing for a college or normal school to complete the required work with the greatest economy of time and effort and to give to pupils who are not likely after graduation to go to other schools the opportunity to obtain instruction that may be of service to them and that may assist in keeping them in school for a four year course.

The changes fall more or less obviously under three heads. 1. Some reassignments of present required and elective subjects as to the years in which they will be given. Physics will be given in the fourth year instead of the second and fourth solid geometry in the third instead of the fourth, bookkeeping in the second and third, commercial arithmetic in the fourth year instead of the first, commercial law as a separate subject in the fourth year instead of in connection with bookkeeping. 2. The required subjects in the commercial and general course have been increased in number to the end that these courses shall be stronger. 3. Subjects have been added as follows; a third year of French, cooking, harmony and theory of music, and advanced sewing.

The details of a high school course of study must always be arranged to meet somewhat variable conditions and the convictions of local school authorities. In our high school practically the entire work of the college entrance and technical courses is dictated by college and technical school entrance requirements, the work of the commercial course is designed to give to those pupils who take it as satisfactory preparation as possible in a high school for a business position, and the work of the general course includes required subjects that may well be studied with reasonable freedom in electives.

The one subject that is required in all courses is English. In this the instruction falls under two heads: 1, composition 2, literature, and both are continuous throughout the four years. Under the former there is considerable practice in writing and in the latter some fifteen works of standard English authors are read, the object being to give a knowledge of English literature and a love of good books.

The work of revising the course of study has been painstakingly done by Principal Wixom and in the present form, which has been recommended by Superintendant Herron and approved by the Scoool Committee, it is thought that it will still further raise the efficiency of the High School.

COURSE OF STUDY.

1. The Principal of the High School will be in his office daily, except Tuesday, from 3.30 to 5 p. m. for consultation with pupils in the High School or the graduating class of the Wadleigh Grammar School or with their parents.

2. During the month of May, each pupil shall choose his course and electives, with the consent of his parents and the approval of the Principal.

3. It is urged that, so far as possible, pupils shall plan their work for the entire high school course at the end of the grammar school course, and shall study carefully from year to year the entrance requirements of the college or higher school for which they wish to be fitted.

4. Pupils shall not change courses or drop subjects except with the approval of the Principal.

5. A pupil may elect work offered for the year in which he is classified or for previous years; he may also elect required subjects from courses other than his own.

6. Pupils may elect typewriting without electing stenography, but those electing stenography must also take typewriting.

7. Pupils in the general course who elect a foreign language shall pursue it for three years unless excused for exceptional reasons by the Principal.

8. Pupils who intend to enter Harvard University are advised to devote five years to preparation.

9. Pupils shall be classified as first, second, third and fourth year pupils; 12 diploma points are required for promotion to the second year class, 28 to the third year class, and 48 to the fourth year class.

10. The passing mark in every subject is 70 per cent. This shall be determined by combining the daily mark and the examination mark in the ratio of 3 and 1. Pupils who have a recitation record of 85 per cent or more in any subject will be excused from the examination in that subject.

11. A pupil whose excuse for absence from an examination is satisfactory to the Principal may receive a mark which is the average of the recitation marks during the term.

12. A pupil will not be allowed without special permission from the Principal, to continue any subject after receiving a mark below 70 per cent during any two consecutive months, and if a pupil fails to maintain a passing mark for two months in thirteen recitation hours of work, he may be suspended by the Principal.

13. Pupils will not be allowed to take advanced work in any subject in which a condition has been received until the condition has been removed by an examination in which a mark of 75 per cent has been obtained.

14. In order to assist pupils and to give them an opportunity to make up deficiencies, each teacher will return from three to four p. m. on one school day each week, at least one teacher returning each afternoon. In addition, each afternoon from three to four, a teacher will have charge of a room to which pupils who have failed in the preparation of any lesson of the day may be required to report for study.

15. Pupils who make up work in which they have been deficient or in which they have lost recitations without good reason will have a previous low mark on the teacher's records changed to 70 per cent or higher if the work is made up to the satisfaction of the teacher.

16. Pupils who are absent with a satisfactory excuse, or on account of illness, shall make up such proportion of their work lost as the teachers deem essential to their progress and will be marked on said work when made up as if reciting in class. The Principal shall decide as to the equity in all cases. Pupils who wish to return to receive special assistance must in every case notify teachers in advance.

17. Pupils who complete the proper courses with ratings of not less than 75 per cent in any subject may enter the Normal Schools of the Commonwealth and all of the colleges of New England, except Harvard, the Institute of Technology and Yale, without examination. Pupils who wish permission to take the preliminary examinations for Harvard, Yale or the Institute of Technology, must also attain standings of not less than 75 per cent.

18. Diplomas will be granted to pupils who have passed in a total of 64 diploma points including all the required work of one course. Diplomas will be graded and granted "with highest honor," "with high honor" and "with honor" when the work shall have averaged at least 90 per cent, 85 per cent and 80 per cent, respectively.

RECORDER STAFF FOR 1910-11.

At a meeting of the class of 1911 held last Friday the officers for next year's Recorder were chosen. As was described in last week's STAR, a committee consisting of the present editor, next year's editor and Prin. Wixom, nominated the candidates and the following were elected to fill the various positions.

TOWN TREASURER.

Probably within a few days the Selectmen will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Town Treasurer Spurr. Mr. William H. Herrick, the present Auditor, it is said, had been approached regarding his taking this office, but after consideration, decided that he could not afford to. In the event of his accepting this office, Mr. William C. Newell was to have succeeded Mr Herrick, so the story runs. They would have filled these two offices in good shape, as both are expert bookkeepers and accountants.

Mr. George H. Eustis' friends still hope for his being selected by the Selectmen. Two other men who have been mentioned are Mr George Everett Pratt and Mr. George H Bates.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

At the meeting of the Winchester Unitarian Society, held on the evening of May 6th, Mr. Lawrance's resignation was accepted, and the following vote was passed:

Report of the Committee to the Winchester Unitarian Society in view of the resignation of its Pastor, Rev. William I. Lawrance

It is with genuine sorrow that we accept the resignation of our beloved Pastor, whose ministry to this Society during the past eleven years, through his power of organization, his tact, and his nobility of character, has been one of the most prosperous, as well as one of the happiest, in its annals, and we have hoped that it might be continued for many years longer.

At his first coming (a momentous time in the Society's history) we were attracted by his many graces of mind and manner, and by them our warm regard was quickly won.

As time passed and his association with the lives and families of the people was closer, our regard ripened into sincere affection; and he became our trusted counsellor and guide in all spiritual things.

The Church services have been conducted in a true devotional spirit, with dignity and simplicity, giving us new and illuminating meanings of the scripture and its lessons, awakening and stimulating our thoughts of God, the higher life, and making clearer our duties to our fellow men.

In our homes he has been the gladly welcomed friend, bringing added zest to our joys; and in our sorrows he came with unobtrusive sympathy, love and consolation.

To the young men and women of the Sunday School, which has responded to his patient guidance, and is a witness to the power of his devout spirit and wise counsel, his retirement is an especial loss.

In the community his influence has been strongly felt to promote intelligent citizenship and the spirit of mutual understanding, tolerance and charity among the Churches.

In ALL he has been the messenger of "peace and good will."

But while we deplore the step which parts us as pastor and people, we recognize his devotion to the duty which now calls him to a long cherished work which he seems so peculiarly fitted to perform.

We bid him to take up that work with confidence, firmly convinced that his efforts will be justified by results to come, and with the assurance that our love, our prayers, and our hopes will be with him and our homes and our hearts ever ready to bid him welcome to them.

Chas. A. Baldwin,
William B. French,
Lewis Parkhurst,
Committee.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

It is not every day that justice is done to woman, but a retired stable keeper who makes his home in Winchester has the grace to say, "It is curious, but a woman will take a team through a dozen hair breadth escapes and bring it back all right. If you notice, the most disastrous runaways happen when some man has the reins."

The injunction to love your neighbor as yourself does not apply to the Winchesterite who looks over your shoulder and breathes into your ear when you are writing.

Of course the STAR is always glad to receive communications from its readers on any subject of public interest, but it is the candid opinion of The Spectator that if more authors of these communications were willing to have their names instead of a pseudonym, appear in print, weight would be added to the letters.

The Spectator does not hesitate to assert that it is plain obstinancy on the part of certain parents here in Winchester as elsewhere to fail to comprehend that playing baseball is a much better form of development of the muscles than weeding a garden can be.

An old Grand Army man here in Winchester says that Congress has no right to provide pensions for men on record as having deserted from the army during the civil war or afterwards. It is said that men who deserted insist upon making appeals for pensions. The Spectator thinks their [illegible] is to be admitted. They were not real soldiers and they were certainly not patriots.

One of our Winchester medical gentlemen points out to The Spectator that there is nothing more detrimental to the good looks of the fair sex than worry. He says: "The woman who worries invites the hand of time, which writes [illegible] wrinkles on her brow, around her eyes and mouth, paints her face [illegible] and gives a lack-lustre eye that no artifice can brighten."

Said a leading Winchester business man to The Spectator the other day: "The merchant who fails to advertise in the local paper is not anxious to build up a successful business evidently. An advertisement in the STAR means a great deal to me." Lots of others have given expression to the same sentiment.

GOOD FISHING IN COLD WEATHER.

The annual spring fishing trip conducted by Mr Charles A. Lane occurred last week, the party of fourteen gentlemen experiencing the coldest weather in years, but nevertheless enjoying remarkably good luck. Leaving Boston on the 6th, the party made its headquarters at the famous Mart's Camps, at the headwaters of the Kennebec, remaining there until last Saturday.

The weather was so cold that on some mornings it was next to impossible to fish during the early hours, the lines becoming iced and floating on the water. The coldest morning was 24 degrees above zero. However, a good catch was made and some fairly large fish taken, Mr Charles L. Barrett with a 2 1-2 pound square tail trout taking the honor. The largest catch was made by Mr Lane who caught over 90. Only one salmon was caught, Mr Barrett also being the lucky one.

A NOTABLE CIRCULATION.

An important banking institution of Boston upon investigating the circulation of the Boston Post found that its daily circulation in April was 307,853 per day and the Sunday edition 291,430 for each Sunday of the same month. This is a remarkable showing and proves that the Post is going it some.

Town Meeting Favors Improved Gates.

Uncertainty of Expense of Centre Bridge Plan the Cause.

The special town meeting of last Friday evening, while fairly well attended, did not bring out the number that it ought to considering the importance of the grade crossing question to be acted upon. This question has been done and dragged [illegible] because of the long delay, and for this reason the citizens who [illegible] not attend [illegible] should not be considered [illegible]. [illegible] and judging from the [illegible] plenty [illegible] for many years to come. The [illegible] meeting [illegible] of the special committee to which [illegible] of the grade crossing [illegible] and they have accomplished [illegible] to the extent of ten years or more [illegible] will be heard of the question until then unless there should be an accident. Then, but we hate to contemplate another series of hearings by special commissioners.

Arthur H. Russell, Esq., was elected moderator, and not once during the exciting debate did he lose his grip on the meeting.

The first business brought up was a vote of appreciation to Town Treasurer Spurr, offered by Selectman Boutwell, which was as follows, and which was concurred in by a unanimous rising vote:

Voted, that the Town receives the resignation of Thomas S. Spurr from the office of Town Treasurer with regret, and directs that its records attest that for nearly twenty years he has discharged the duties of that office with marked capacity and fidelity. He has always correctly foreseen and advised the Town of its measure and needs of credit, given system and classification to its accounts, been accurate in computations and administration, made his books as legible as print, and justly enjoyed the confidence of his townsmen in the performance of his work.

Alfred S. Hall, Esq., took the opportunity to compliment Mr. Spurr on his long and faithful services to the town during a period of 27 years.

GRADE CROSSING.

Mr. Lewis Parkhurst, chairman of the special committee of five, appointed by the town to find some solution of the grade crossing problem submitted a report. This report can be found in full elsewhere in this issue of the STAR. After the meeting had voted to receive the report, Mr. Parkhurst [illegible] the following.

[illegible] that the report of the committee [illegible] accepted [illegible] recommendations of the plan numbered three in said report be accepted.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Parkhurst said that the Town Counsel and the Selectmen had often tried to cause the special commission to make a report, but nothing resulted until vigorous action was taken, when the commissioners brought forward the plan of the single bridge at the station. This the town objected to decidedly. His committee had interviewed the interested parties, and the Boston and Maine had generously agreed to being assessed upon $50,000 or to give the town what it desired. Mr. Parkhurst stated that of the three members of the board of special commissioners, two were known to favor the centre bridge plan, but they hesitated to recommend it because of the large expense likely to arise from land damages. The proposition of the Boston and Maine Railroad to expend $25,000 to install improved gates, erect a fence between the tracks and build subways at the present crossing and at the station, the committee believed would eliminate danger to a great extent, and they believed the offer should be accepted without prejudicing the town's interest in the future. Mr. Parkhurst was in favor of a town ordinance compelling children to use the subway when passing from one side of the crossing to the other. This, he believed would prevent future accidents to children. Regarding the danger to teams and electric cars, it would be constant as at present. Main street should be narrowed to 100 or 125 feet at the crossing which would to a certain extent remove danger and allow of one set of gates.

Mr. Joseph [illegible] Holland hoped that the question would be settled for the best interests of the town and favored the adoption of the recommendations of the committee, while Mr. Fuck spoke in opposition.

Mr. R. L. Joslin said that the great drawback to the centre bridge plan was the unknown expense from land damages. The abuttors and owners would not agree to bind themselves to any fixed amount for damages. Mr. Joslin, then said that he had just been handed an agreement signed by eleven property owners and whether this would have had any weight with the committee if it had been received before making their report he could not say.

Mr. Whitney claimed that the agreement regarding assessing the payment of damages to certain estates which would be necessitated by raising the centre of the town above present grade, did not amount to anything, as so few of the land owners had signed it. He was invited to sign the agreement but did not do so as it was prepared by counsel of a few interested land owners which counsel did not represent the town or the community but [illegible] represent [illegible]. The agreement simply [illegible] Winchester gentlemen [illegible] the [illegible] question, so [illegible] to [illegible] commission appointed [illegible] the grade crossing, abutting damages as to [illegible]. A large majority of the land owners had rather leave their claims [illegible] to the commissioners [illegible] than to such a [illegible] proposed in the paper [illegible] town counsel. Mr. Joslin, especially as a large number of the land owners had nothing to do [illegible] say about [illegible] the abuttors who were [illegible] which [illegible] Mr. Whitney said that as one of the [illegible] interested parties he would have nothing to do with any such [illegible] and that [illegible] pledge [illegible] of a paper [illegible] the committee. Not more than one quarter of the land owners [illegible] agreement, [illegible] amounted to so little that it was not worth serious consideration.

Mr. W. F. Prime did not believe that the town after having voted to abolish the crossing, should now be willing to go back to the scheme of antiquated gates. If this vote is passed the crossing will not be abolished during the next ten years. Some people, he said, are not honest on the grade crossing question, and the report of the committee is pure sophistry. The Boston and Maine proposes to dig a hole and request the people to walk into it. He hoped the original intention of the town would be adhered to.

Mr. John H. Carter, in view of the agreement that had been presented to the meeting from land owners, favored postponing taking action on Mr. Parkhurst's motion, until more information could be obtained from abuttors, and he therefore moved to lay the motion upon the table for a week.

Mr. N. H. Seelye would like to know more about the new agreement before action was taken.

Mr. Joslin did not know whether it was worth while to wait or not. Some of the names to the agreement were new, while some were on the old one. He did not believe that much could be accomplished in this direction.

In reply to former speakers, Mr. Whitney claimed that there was not the least danger of the town's losing its right to future improvement of the crossing if the present proposed improvements were carried out. The charter of the railroad granted in 1835 guaranteed the town "a safe and convenient use of the highway" at the crossing of the railroad. If the proposed subways were found unsafe the town would [illegible] they would have to be accepted [illegible] to the selectmen and the town, according to the railroad charter. When the road was built, the crossing was protected against danger from the passing of trains by heavy swinging gates which stood at rest across the tracks and they were not opened to allow locomotives to cross the highway unless the highway was clear of teams or foot passengers. These gates were protested by the community in place of an overhead crossing which had been laid out at first by the railroad company. After some years, other gates were put in by the railroad which crossed the highway and were moved in and out on rollers. These proved cumbersome and inconvenient and were not much used and flagmen were installed in place of gates of any kind, one flagman guarding the whole crossing. Later, the present tooth pick gates were put in to more or less guard the crossing. Nothing is more clear in the history of the Winchester crossing than the fact that the town is entitled to such railroad construction "as will not impede or obstruct the safe and convenient" use of our most ancient highway, and nothing in the railroad charter can cut us off from such a safe and convenient crossing either at present or in the future.

Mr. J. A. Laraway was in favor of present action being taken upon the committee's recommendation. There is not a first class building in the centre only shacks. If the property owners in the centre would only be fair to the town, the centre bridge could be built at a reasonable price and we would pay only 10 per cent. These owners would be sorry some day that they did not help the project.

Mr. H. L. Richards said that the present agreement was only an example of the first one and amounted to nothing. Property owners say what they will do, but are not willing to bind themselves. He favored immediate action.

Mr. Preston Pond believed that the new gates would eliminate a part of the danger, and much more could be done by the railroad employing young and intelligent men to look after the gates, to work in three shifts of eight hours a day.

Samuel J. Elder, Esq., was opposed to the motion to lay the question upon the table. He had favored a bridge at the centre, but now realized that that scheme was not practicable because of the prohibitive expense. The Boston and Maine Railroad had acted very handsomely by the town when it had agreed to stand a large additional expense to give it what it desired. The land damages in the case of the centre bridge are [illegible] so large that we would not dare to proceed to the [illegible]. We cannot afford to put so large a sum in a single project, when there are so many other things to be done in town.

Mr. M. H. Dutch thought that nothing would be lost by laying the motion upon the table.

The motion to lay Mr. Parkhurst's motion on the table was lost, yes 66, no 112, then the vote as presented by Mr Parkhurst was passed.

Mr Parkhurst then offered the following motion which was carried:

Moved, That the counsel for the town be instructed to agree to a disposition of the town's petition now pending in the Superior Court for the abolition of the grade crossing at Winchester Centre, without further proceedings upon condition that the plan numbered three in the report of the Committee of Five is carried into effect by the Railroad Company, and upon the further consideration that such disposition shall be without prejudice to the right of the town to institute and maintain such proceedings as it may hereafter deem advisable.

Later, Mr Carter moved a reconsideration which was voted down.

OTHER BUSINESS TRANSACTED.

It was voted to pay Mary L. Cassidy $7.24 paid by her to the town for a certain deed of land wherein the title was defective.

It was also voted to adopt sections 58 to 64, inclusive, of chapter 48 of the revised laws, giving the selectmen concurrent jurisdiction with the county commissioners over the county roads within the town.

An additional appropriation of $1200 was made for the town hall account to pay for work on vaults and steel shelving for the storing of town records.

The board of selectmen were instructed to consider the matter of changing the names of certain streets of the town to avoid confusion from the similarity of names.

The selectmen were also instructed to appear before the Massachusetts highway commission to obtain if possible better telephone rates for the citizens of the town.

Dr. Clarence J. Allen, Frank A. Cutting and William H. Forbes were appointed a committee to confer with the metropolitan park commission to improve the condition and appearance of the parkway opposite the Wedgemere station.

It was voted to accept as a town way the extension of Wedgemere avenue from its northerly end to Foxcroft road.

The meeting dissolved shortly after eleven o'clock.

Report of Grade Crossing Committee.

Recommend Improved Gates at the Crossing.

At [illegible] Town Meeting of March [illegible] 1910, the following vote was passed:

"Voted, that WHEREAS, the Special Commission heretofore appointed by the Superior Court, has announced its intention to report a plan for the abolition of the grade crossing at Winchester Square by discontinuing the present crossing, and carrying the streets over the railroad by a single bridge and a new street connecting Church and Main streets located south of the present site of the railroad station, and

WHEREAS, upon consideration thereof the citizens of Winchester in town meeting assembled are opposed to this method of abolishing the crossing, believing that the plan proposed by said Commissioners does not furnish facilities for crossing said railroad which are a fair equivalent for those which are to be discontinued; that it too widely diverts street traffic from its present and natural lines; that it unnecessarily damages and interferes with the Common and Manchester Field, both in their use and appearance, and would prove wholly insufficient and unsatisfactory if ever carried out;

NOW, THEREFORE, be it

RESOLVED, that a committee of five be appointed whose duty it shall be to ascertain what other and more satisfactory plan or plans, if any, can be obtained, in conference with the representatives of the Railroad, Street Railway Company and the Commonwealth, without further proceedings before said Special Commission, said committee to report at the earliest time possible to this or a future town meeting to be called for the purpose upon the following questions, to wit.—

I. What portion of the expense in addition to the ten per cent. now provided by statute it would be necessary for the town to pay to secure the assent of the other parties in interest to the adoption of the plan of abolition heretofore favored by the town, i. e. by a single bridge over the railroad at the present crossing.

II. What other and better plan than that proposed by the Special Commissioners would be agreed to by the parties in interest based upon the theory of a single bridge at or near the present railroad station.

III. Such other facts and recommendations as seem to said committee to be of value to the town in determining its future course in this matter.

Said Committee to consist of the Chairman of the Selectmen, Chairman of Water and Sewer Board, and Messrs. S. L. Elder, Lewis Parkhurst and Wm. D. Richards.

The Grade Crossing Commission appointed by the Superior Court is understood to have determined provisionally upon an elimination of the grade crossing by a bridge at the present station, approached from Church street by a new sixty foot road back of Waterfield Block, taking a portion of Manchester Field, and with its easterly approach at a level either with the Parkway or Main street according to the grade to be determined upon. The estimated cost of this plan is $153,400, to be borne in the proportions fixed by statute. The details of this plan were published in a recent number of the STAR. It is believed that the Commission will modify the above plan or adopt any other reasonable plan on which the Railroad, the Electric Railway, the Commonwealth and the Town agree. We have seen all the parties in interest and find them ready to co-operate with the town in solving the problem in either of the following ways:

First—If the town desires to build a single bridge at or near the station and carry the highway above the railroad, they all express themselves as willing to modify the plans recently proposed by the Commission in a manner satisfactory to the town. For instance, to make the roadway 80 feet wide instead of 60; to take on the west side of the town the whole or such portion of the Waterfield Block as may be necessary to secure a proper entrance to this bridge next to the Common; to make the grade on the east side as easy as it can be made without disturbing the grade of Main street at the corner of the Parkway—probably about 4 per cent.; to build an arch bridge over the river of sufficient width to properly take care of the water, and to make such other reasonable changes as the town may suggest. The station may be moved south of this proposed roadway, or north of it, taking a portion of the Common, or it may be carried still further north near the present railroad crossing, taking out a portion of the Common, for its location there, whichever of these three best suits the town.

The expense of this plan is estimated to be about $200,000. It can be estimated more closely than the plan at the Centre because fewer land owners are affected and the damages can consequently be more accurately computed.

Second—If the town still desires to raise the highway above the railroad at the Centre, they will consent to this and pay their proportionate part of the expense up to $[illegible], whatever it may cost above that to be paid by the town. For [illegible] abolition was $[illegible], the town would pay ten per cent. of the first $[illegible], and the entire amount in excess of that for a total of $[illegible]—all this, of course, provided the Commission would approve of this arrangement. If the town should decide to accept this proposition, it would be necessary to secure a special act of the Legislature to enable us to do it, as under the statute a town cannot pay more than ten per cent. of the expense of abolishing grade crossings.

No estimate of the expense of this plan which the Committee can assure the town as even approximately correct, has been, or can be, made. Between thirty five and forty estates will be affected and the owner of each will be entitled to a jury trial for the estimation of his damages. Undoubtedly some of the owners would agree to accept, in place of general damages, the raising and adjusting of their property to the new grades and damage merely for the interruption in their use of the property during the work, but past experience has shown that no general agreement to this effect can be made, and the total expense of the alteration would be dependent upon the final outcome of a considerable number of law suits. The estimates of the total expense of construction and damages range between $325,000 and $500,000.

In former discussions relative to the various methods of abolishing the grade crossing, the bridge shown at the Centre has been represented as being carried on piers extending north and south between the railroad tracks. The Boston and Maine Railroad, however, say they should object to this type of bridge for the reason that in case of a derailment the pier would increase the danger to trains and if demolished by a heavy train would allow the bridge to collapse. Therefore they should ask that the bridge, whether built at the Centre or at the station, should be carried by overhead trusses, similar to those which may be seen at Wedgemere and at other bridges along the line of the road, leaving an open span of eighty feet in width underneath. In the case of the bridge at the Centre, which is planned to be 100 feet wide, there would be four sets of trusses, dividing the roadway into three sections or lanes, the centre one probably accommodating the street railroad, the two outside ones teams and pedestrians. The bridge at the station, which would be 80 feet wide, would have three sets of trusses, dividing the bridge into two lanes. These trusses would be from 10 to 14 feet above the roadway, and to a height of 6 feet above the roadway would be encased in wood or steel so that it would be impossible for any one to see through them or to drop anything upon the cars below. The roadway would consist of plank paved with brick and the wear and tear of this roadway would be maintained by the town. The steel work of the bridge would be maintained by the railroad.

Third—If the town is not ready to decide on either of these methods the Boston and Maine Railroad will put in two subways for pedestrians, one just north of the station and one just south of the crossing at the Centre, will build a fence between the tracks from a point well below the station to the crossing in the centre of the town and north of the crossing as far as may be desired, and will improve the gate service at the Centre so far as it is possible for them to do so. This will cost approximately $20,000 and the railroad will bear the entire expense. If either the first or second method suggested above is adopted the work would be done in the season of 1911. If this third proposition is acceptable to the town the railroad would do the work in the season of 1910.

It was agreed that the adoption of this plan, if it is adopted, shall be without prejudice to the right of the town to bring and maintain such proceedings hereafter as it may deem advisable and that whatever disposition is made of the present petition shall include an express reservation binding on all parties to that effect.

After very careful consideration your committee unanimously make the following recommendations:

I. In the opinion of your committee it is inadvisable to adopt plan number one for a bridge at the station because in the opinion of the committee it will not furnish adequate conveniences for the rapidly growing needs of the town and in the near future the town would be compelled at its own expense to build a second bridge north of the Centre.

II. In the opinion of the committee it is inadvisable to adopt plan number two for a bridge at the Centre, because it is impossible to estimate the expense in excess of $300,000 which the town would have to bear under the best arrangement the committee have been able to reach with the other parties in interest.

III. If the town determines to adopt some plan for immediate separation of grades the committee recommend plan number one as having less uncertainty than plan number two concerning the matter of expense and giving to the town a larger return for the expenditure required.

IV. In the opinion of the committee it is advisable to adopt the conservative plan numbered three in this report, without prejudice, however, to the right of the town to take such proceedings hereafter as it may deem advisable.

Signed:

J. P. Boutwell
D. N. Skillings

Committee.

BLANK CARTRIDGES PROHIBITED.

The new law concerning the limitations of explosives for July 4th celebration, which has been in the Legislature for weeks, has passed the Senate, and will no doubt pass the House and become a law at once.

The law prohibits the sale of blank cartridges, blank cartridge pistols, all fire crackers not loaded with gun powder, and any fire cracker over two inches long and 3-8 inch in diameter (the size of the two inch Chinese cracker.)

All other fireworks, Chinese crackers, torpedoes, caps and cap pistols, can be sold as before.

As usual Wilson the Stationer will carry an extra big assortment of all the fireworks allowed under the law, and everything manufactured for a safe and sane celebration of the 4th will be found at this store.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon in St. Mary's Church. Rev. Francis E. Rogers conducted the service. The pall bearers were John Lynch, Daniel Haley, Neil Doherty, Timothy F. Sullivan, James Maguire and Michael McGann.

Exhibition of photographs loaned by the Library Art Club. Corot—Part II. Jean Baptiste Camille Corot was born in Paris, of humble parentage, July 28, 1796. He did not follow his inclination until he was 22, when he became a pupil of Michallon, then of Berlin, and finally completed his studies in Italy. His method was to work in the country in summer, early and late, in the open air, to catch those effects only to be seen at dawn, at sunset, and by moonlight, in which he delighted. He saw and portrayed nature with his own eyes in a manner replete with poetry and fancy, in which style he has found followers in Troyon, Diaz, and others. He died in Paris, February 22, 1875.—Bryan's Dictionary.

FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1910.

SINGLE COPIES, FIVE CENTS.

The citizens at the town meeting of last Friday night in recognizing the long services to the town of its treasurer, Mr. Thomas S. Spurr, did a commendable act and one that was merited. During Mr. Spurr's twenty years' of service, not for a single minute have the citizens felt even a little bit uneasy about the safety of the town funds and its trusts and legacies in his keeping. And this despite the many defalcations by treasurers and collectors in this State. Integrity and faithfulness to trust runs in his family, and his father had the confidence of the citizens to such an extent that they conferred upon him the dual offices of collector-treasurer—a confidence that is seldom reposed these days in a single person. On the death of his father, Mr. Spurr could have succeeded to these offices, but he declined to do so. It must be pleasing to Mr. Spurr to retire from public life with the plaudits of his townsmen for the faithful performance of his duties.

Means Postponement.

The plan adopted at the town meeting last Friday evening to install improved gates at the crossing to replace the present ones and have subways at the crossing and at the station with a fence between the tracks from the crossing to a point below the station, does not meet with the approval of but few citizens. They do however, look upon this scheme as a forerunner of a complete elimination of the two lines of travel in the not far distant future. Under the circumstances the citizens who voted for this measure at this meeting believed it was the proper thing to do. Winchester's interests have not been neglected and in due course of time some way will be found to bring about a solution of this problem. In the meantime it will be found that the dangers against accidents have been somewhat reduced.

The impression is that the separation of the two lines of travel will be by elevating the tracks of the steam road, a scheme that was strongly objected to in the past.

As Winchester appears to have had but little influence in getting what it desires in this grade crossing question, it is about time that it awoke to the realization of the fact that its interests are the first and most important of all the other interests combined and that the future appearance of its centre is of the greatest impo tance.

LECTURE BY PROF. ZUEBLIN.

This evening at 7.15, in the High school Assembly Hall, Prof Charles Zueblin will give an address before the Mother's Association on Twentieth Century Parks and Playgrounds, and will include some valuable suggestions as to how we may have a safe and more appropriate celebration of the Fourth of July. The lecture will be illustrated by colored lantern slides, and will be most interesting.

Parents, and others who may be interested, are invited to be present at this meeting.

MRS. ALMIRA A. ROWE DEAD.

After an illness of several months, Mrs. Almira Amanda Rowe died last night at the home of her son, Mr. Frank E. Rowe on Bacon street. She was in her 75th year. She leaves three sons, Frank E., Walter W., and Brainerd.

The arrangements for the funeral services have not been made at this time.

FROM PREVIOUS BOARD.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Dear Sir:—The additional appropriation of $1200 for Town Hall account voted at the Town Meeting last Friday was made necessary because of contracts made, but not completed, by the previous Board.

These contracts were not provided for by the Appropriations Committee for 1910.

Board of Selectmen,
J. P. Boutwell, Chairman.
Winchester, May 16th, 1910.

Saturday evening there is to be a Parish Meeting at the Episcopal Church, Mr. Marcus May presiding, which will adjourn to Mr. Alfred Higgins' house on Church street for a social hour. A fine musical program is to be presented. Mrs. Suter and Mrs. Marcus May will pour.

A GRADE CROSSING SUGGESTION.

Winchester, Mass., May 16, 1910.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

At the Town Meeting last Friday evening I listened very attentively to the speeches made, but I could discover no real solid suggestion for the abolition of the grade crossing at the centre. All agreed that the constant and increasing danger to human life there, ought to be eliminated, but how to do it, seemed to be lost in the clouds.

I believe the desired object can best be accomplished by building a reinforced concrete tunnel-like structure about ... feet wide spanning four tracks, and covering the entire ground from the southerly boundary of Church street to the northerly boundary of Main street, then fill in solid with gravel all around outside and over the roof of the tunnel structure, grading down or up so far as it may be necessary, the whole territory involved. This of course would demand the raising of all the buildings to the required grade where those buildings may happen to be. Wing walls would have to be built along the railroad location south and north of the tunnel, gradually sloping with the grade, to retain the filling there. The tunnel structure would have to be about seventeen feet in the clear as I understand it. The engineers, however, will figure out the details in all parts of this scheme.

The rising ground on Church and Vine streets will easily lend itself to the grade of the filling and it may be that a large amount of the filling could be secured from the latter street, or its vicinity. The rising ground of Winchester place would also fit into the necessary grade. Most of the buildings raised would have deep dry cellars and be far more tenantable than they are now and therefore more valuable.

By the foregoing plan we would preserve the present lines of travel, a large clear square would be created which could be beautified at our leisure, the unsightly division of the centre now caused by the railroad will be got rid of, the noise and smoke of passing trains will be very largely reduced, many other annoyances eliminated and the crossing made absolutely safe and secure for all time.

To accomplish the foregoing it will be necessary I presume to apply to the Legislature for a special enabling act. I would have the Selectmen instructed to apply for such an act next winter and press it through rapidly to enable the work to be commenced as early next spring as possible. That act should contain provisions for betterments as well as damages, because I believe most of the estates will be largely benefitted, rather than damaged. Of course it must contain provision for the payment by the Commonwealth and the steam and electric railroads of a just proportion of the cost. And the town should be ready and willing to stand the balance whatever it may be, as the proposed change will be of great beauty and advantage to the town.

I have no doubt that the pending petition and proceedings can be dismissed without prejudice. The subway at the crossing will not be necessary if the above plan is carried out. The subway at the station may be necessary but that will be for the Boston and Maine to determine.

I believe the cost of the foregoing plan can be brought very much inside of three hundred thousand dollars. In order to abolish the present crossing the citizens of Winchester must close up their ranks and push forward their line of battle steadily until the victory is won.

Very respectfully,
John T. Wilson.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Melrose Union, of which Mary E. Livermore was long the presiding genius, is to entertain the Middlesex County convention next Thursday, May 26, the place of meeting being the Main street Methodist Church. The cars to and from Boston pass the church, so it is easy of access to all and it is hoped there may be a good attendance from Winchester and other near by towns. The meeting begins at 10 a. m.; afternoon session at 2. Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of Boston is to give the principal address early in the afternoon. All members and friends of the union are invited.

The recent expose in the Boston Herald of the methods of the brewers in boycotting the newspapers that opposed the bar and bottle bill makes interesting reading in connection with their loud protestations before its passage that it would have no effect whatever on the sale and consumption of liquor. The Herald will win many friends if it continues its policy of telling the truth regardless of the advertising receipts, but those friends should see to it that they express their interest in such a way that they may be known. Approval of good work doesn't hurt newspapers any more than it does people.

The news from the field continue to be encouraging. Some of the recent developments in Chicago are full of encouragement and even where things seem discouraging the awakening in favor of civic betterment is a good factor. People who read the papers with an eye to the uplift movement of the world find them very interesting these days. Of course, the comet's influence in brightening the world is not to be overlooked by those who regard H. G. Wells as a good prophet.

Saturday, May 21, Llewsac Lodge, the new country home of the Willard Settlement at Bedford, will be opened with special exercises. Everybody is invited and gifts are solicited.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Six years ago in connection with the request of the Selectmen for a better house at the centre crossing plans were drawn narrowing up the way moving the house north of the crossing, and using fewer gates. This appealed to the Board and the only reason it was not presented to the town was because it was believed that it would only delay the abolition of the crossing, and it was thought that the town sincerely favored such abolition and would only resent any thing else. Judging by the vote at last week's town meeting the voters have been playing fast and loose and by their action have made the town a laughing stock. What now will be done about the numerous things that have been waiting for the settlement of the methods of abolishing the grade crossing? The much needed central fire house, completion of Main street and bridge at Whitney's mill, Walnut street bridge, completion of work at the northerly end of Manchester field? Some citizens think that when the railroad situation has been straightened out we will be able to get a more liberal proposition from the New Haven, but why was it necessary to take any action at this time? The whole railroad situation may be clarified before the legislature adjourns six weeks hence. Each time we have had a committee on this abolition it has resulted in trouble. Mr. Parkhurst has always strongly opposed the town's plan, Mr. Elder believes in waiting for the railroad question settlement, all of the committee consider what was voted for Friday night a temporary makeshift. Is it worth while? The subway and fence at the station should have been built years ago and have nothing in common with the Centre Crossing: the subway at the centre and gates better operated will be some help, but none of these things will help the two or three million people who yearly use this crossing in street cars and other vehicles. Certainly the property owners should have fair damages, but we know that unless this crossing is abolished lives will be lost there, and the important question still is how much is a life worth? The next one lost there we should have those who voted for this policy of delay estimate it. The Commissioners have said this crossing should be abolished. Will they say that if these changes are made by the railroad it should not be? What is the Commonwealth's attitude?

While the rule limiting speaker's time is a proper and usual one the rule that no one shall speak more than once on a motion, excepting by consent of the meeting, is not only unusual, but bad and entirely contrary to the spirit of the town meeting and should not be voted again. It is far better to have too much talking than to apply gag laws to the most democratic form of government we have left, besides it accomplishes nothing.

Congressman McCall says he is too busy to discuss his chances in this district. The probabilities are that Sam doesn't really know just how far the district would go in opposing him on account of its undoubted dislike to the present tariff and "cannonism," but he may depend upon it that he will have to make the strongest fight since his first term in order to succeed, as the Democrats are better united than for many years and their candidate will probably be MacLeod of Cambridge who undoubtedly is the strongest man they can nominate.

There are lots of poles in town that need painting badly. This would improve appearances very much and as it would cost the town nothing why do not the Selectmen request the public service corporations to do it. They are bound to comply.

BOAT CLUB NEWS.

The fine new concrete float which is being built at the Winchester Boat Club is expected to be finished in a few days, the recent strike by the Italian laborers somewhat delaying the work. This float will give the Winchester club the finest entrance on the Mystic Lakes yet constructed, and will be a handsome and permanent addition to its handsome club house.

The Eastern Division Meet of the A. C. A. will be held at Manchester, N. H., this year under the auspices of the Cygnet Canoe Club of that city. The meet will be held from May 28th to 30th, and a large number of canoeists and boating enthusiasts from both the Medford and Winchester Clubs will attend. The Medford contingent are planning to attend in a special car, leaving Boston on the noon of May 28th, and several Winchester racing men will accompany them.

The first dance of the season is to be held at the Winchester Club this Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. This opens a long series of Saturday evening and holiday dances to be held during the summer and into the fall by the Medford and Winchester clubs. In addition to the dances which have been arranged special regattas have been planned for various dates and are now being arranged. The two clubs Medford and Winchester, will exchange courtesies in their dances, they being held alternately at the two houses and attended by members of both organizations.

Winchester 10, Thayer Academy 0.

Winchester administered a crushing defeat to Thayer Academy on Manchester Field last Saturday and finished with a 10-0 score. Doubtless Thayer was somewhat worn out after a hard game with Newton the previous day, but this cannot account for the fusilade of hits that forced two pitchers to retire while Winchester accumulated six runs off Thayer's [illegible] inning. The scoring started in the second when two runs came over on [illegible] straight hits for a run caused Wilson to leave the box in the third [illegible] worked well until the eighth [illegible] hits and a pass he [illegible] was easy picking for Winchester [illegible] on the team [illegible] in the eighth inning and Tuck [illegible]. After the runs [illegible] Winchester was found to have made six leaving the final score 10-0.

Winchester 8, Reading 6.

Winchester pounded out another victory at Reading, Tuesday afternoon, winning by the score of 8-6. The game was a pretty one to watch and the winner was not decided until the last man was out in the ninth inning. Goddu pitched fine ball for Winchester, and except in the first inning held Reading safe. Three Winchester players were nipped at the plate on lightning throws from the field after difficult catches and Michelini's catch of Tuck's drive to left was the feature of the game. Winchester had to overcome a lead of four runs which Reading scored in the first inning on a pass, two safe bunts, a double and Tuck's error. Winchester tied in the fifth, scored one in the seventh and one in the eighth. Reading came back, however, with two runs in the last of the seventh, so that when Winchester went to bat in the ninth inning [illegible]. Hurd hit safely and Flaherty doubled scoring him. With two out Mathews singled and Flaherty scored.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

In the last two issues of the STAR, there have been quotations from the Springfield Republican concerning the petition for equal suffrage at the Massachusetts state house hearing in March. Certain phrases of the article quoted admit of expansion and explanation.

Of the women who spoke for the petition, the leisure class is mentioned as speaking "in behalf of a larger field of activity in public causes." Is not that field already large enough? This may well be; it is not the field which is limited, it is activity within the field. Under present conditions, women give freely of their time, their money, their influence, that wrong conditions may be righted, knowing all the time that such gifts may be misused, misunderstood, or even ignored. The most direct, the most effective way of influencing legislation is the ballot. Therefore women demand it.

Once more, the Springfield Republican refers to women "unrepresented by husbands or fathers or brothers at the polls."

This class appeals especially to a sense of justice. "Taxation without representation" is as expensive today as at the time of the Boston Tea Party. But without the ballot, all women are unrepresented. No man, in a democratic country, may assume the identity of another man or cast any vote except his own. By the same argument, he cannot represent a woman, even when her vote would be identical with his. In matters of legislation, we should all, men and women alike, be individually responsible.

W. H. S. NOTES.

This afternoon at 3.30 and tomorrow morning at 10 the annual inter-class track meet will be held. The following events are scheduled: Friday at 3.30, 100 yard dash, broad jump, 440 yard run, shot put and half mile, Saturday at 10, 220 yard dash, mile, high jump and [illegible]. The meet promises to be closer than in former years and although the seniors ought to win by about twenty points, the sophomores and freshmen will make the contest interesting.

At a class meeting held Wednesday the seniors decided to hold the class-day exercises on Wednesday evening, June 15. Dorothy Armstrong was chosen class poet.

On Friday evening, May 27th the High School Chorus will give their annual concert. Those who intend to attend should ask some member of the High School to secure them a ticket as they will not be put on public sale. The prices will be moderate and the quality of music will well be worth the expense.

The crew has been practicing every day regularly in the new canoe and already show fine form. Under the coaching of Mr. Arthur Mather, New England single blade champion and Harold Webber, '07, the candidates are showing up finely and victory seems almost assured this year. Besides Capt. Higson, Tuck, Sheridan, Locke, Kramer and D. and H. Wheatley are giving promise of fine material for a winning crew.

The batting averages of the base ball team are Flaherty .354, Tuck [illegible], LeDuc .250, Grant .250, Hurd [illegible], Mathews .222, Goddu [illegible] and Saltmarsh .186.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

There will be both novelty and excitement in "Brewster's Millions," which the John Craig Stock Company will act at the Castle Square next week. Brewster has just inherited a million and more from his grandfather, when his uncle leaves him ten million on condition that he spend his first legacy within a year. Brewster may not throw the money into the river, or give it away to the poor, or gamble it into the air. He must spend it, and tell nobody why he is doing so.

It is needless that a love romance runs through the course of the plot, and that it is as rich in sentiment as it is in humor.

In the Castle Square production of "Brewster's Millions," the hero will be played by John Craig, while other important roles will be in the hands of Mary Young, Gertrude Binley, Mabel Colcord, W. P. Carleton, Walter Walker, Donald Meek, George Hassell, Bert and Walfred Young. The play will hold the Castle Square stage but a single week.

PARK THEATRE.

What has proven to be the most remarkable theatrical success in the annals of Boston, is that of William Hodge, in "The Man From Home" at the Park theatre. Mr. Hodge in his beautiful American play, "The Man From Home" opened Jan. 3rd, it has broken all records and has established a new mark in the history of the Boston stage.

Mr. Hodge has occupied the Park theatre stage for 21 weeks. "The Man From Home" will shortly close its season and those who have not availed themselves of seeing the play that is the most talked about play of the present time, would do well to take advantage in the next few weeks. The Park theatre management make a special feature of filling mail orders. Seats can be secured two weeks in advance.

8 America

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love;
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake;
Let all that breathe partake;
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our fathers' God! to thee,
Author of liberty,
To Thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King!

The audience are requested to rise and join in the singing of America.

Self Restraint.

Ellen stopped scrubbing the veranda steps long enough to cast an admiring eye on her employer's garden. "Sure they are fine posies ye have, doctor," she said. "I've a neat little house I bought with the money I'd put by, and an elegant garden it had last year, too, but now there's neither stick nor stalk in it."

"What was it, hens or dogs?" asked the doctor, sympathetically mentioning his own aversions.

"Sure, me neighbor—bad luck to her—had a ditch dug in her land, and the water ran down into me garden and washed all me seeds away."

"And what did you do about it?"

"What could a poor lone body like me do?"

"Well, didn't you at least say something to the woman, complain or tell her that you wouldn't stand it?"

"Now, doctor, dear, hard words just leads to bad feelings among neighbors, and that ye know as well as I do, and it's not me that would be using them. So I only said to her, 'I hope I'll live to see the floods flowing over your grave as your ditch waters have flowed over me garden,' and I let it go at that."—Youth's Companion.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Blackburn's Eloquence.

The story is told of Senator Proctor of Vermont in reminiscences by Vice President Stevenson that when invited to go out of the senate chamber just before the day's session began he replied: "Excuse me. I am paired with Blackburn on prayers." When the Rev. Dr. Butler retired from the chaplaincy of the senate Blackburn's speech surpassed all others for ardor and felicity of expression. "The counterpart of the scene that followed his closing words had never been witnessed in legislative assembly. All were in tears. It was even said that venerable senators who had never shed a tear since the ratification of the treaty of Ghent actually sobbed aloud and refused to be comforted. At length, amid silence that could be felt, an adjournment was effected, and the senators passed out to their homes. As he passed the chair Senator Vest in an undertone remarked to the vice president, 'Joe never saw him.'"—Washington Herald.

A Pot Walloper.

The parliamentary register for 1896 showed that there was then only one pot walloper in all England. One seeing the term for the first time might easily imagine that a pot walloper was a species of ichthyosaurus or some other reptile of a past age. It will be discovered upon inquiry, however, that the term "pot walloper" is literally one who boils a pot and was applied to voters in certain boroughs of England where before the passage of the reform bill of 1832 the qualifications for suffrage was to have boiled (walloped) his own pot in the parish for six months.—London Notes and Queries.

BOSTON CHARTER AMENDMENTS

Fitzgerald Would Like to See Some Changes

APPOINTMENTS ARE HELD UP

Active Contests For Congress In Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Districts—Republicans May Redeem the Latter District as Well as Tenth

The rejection by the civil service commission of former Mayor George A. Hibbard as tax collector of the city of Boston is causing a great deal of comment, and Mayor Fitzgerald is trying to use it as an argument why he should be given unlimited power to make appointments. It is extremely easy to condemn an official or commission when it has done some act which runs counter to the wishes of some politician. The more thoughtful part of the community is inclined to ask the reason why this limitation was put upon the action of the mayor of Boston. They believe there can be only one reply to that query, and that is that Mr. Fitzgerald, during his first term of office, so conducted himself as to cause the decent people of the city to rise up in righteous indignation, and demand a new charter. That charter, which was favored by leading Democrats of Boston even more strongly than by Republicans, compelled the state civil service commission to review certain appointments in the gift of the mayor and use the veto power upon those found unfit.

What Is Fitzgerald's Motive?

It is evident to most level headed people that the mayor by making selections which the board cannot approve is trying to create political capital and to force an amendment of the charter so as to give him a free hand in appointments. Thus far it is felt that he has merely been paying his political debts in the appointments he has made, largely, as many think, without regard to the best interests of the city.

A great many people, regardless of their political affiliations, believe his appointment of former Mayor Hibbard was intended as the payment of a political obligation to a man whose candidacy resulted possibly in his own election. There are many who believe that Hibbard was not personally in the combination to elect Mr. Fitzgerald mayor. Nearly everybody, however, believes that those behind his candidacy had a very definite understanding with Mr. Fitzgerald. Very likely Hibbard had the qualifications to fill the position to which he was appointed. His physical condition, however, which it is understood had been known to the board for some days, was such as to preclude his giving the city the service to which it is entitled. It is difficult to see how the commission could have acted differently under the circumstances.

Governor Draper Growing In Strength

There are plenty of indications that Governor Draper is growing in strength with the people and that the situation from a Republican standpoint is much better than it was a few weeks ago. For one thing, the report of the commission to investigate the increase in the cost of living has shown up the dishonesty of the Democratic party in its attempt to place the responsibility for this condition upon the Republican tariff law. Besides that, the straightforward and manly attitude of the governor is appealing strongly to the citizens, regardless of their political affiliations. Everybody likes a fearless and conscientious man, whether he be an official or a private citizen, and Governor Draper's frank, outspoken attitude on every question which has come to him is characteristic of his whole makeup. There is quite a general opinion abroad that he will be much stronger at the polls this fall than he was in 1909.

Three Sharp Congressional Contests

There are three congressional districts located almost wholly in the city of Boston within the limits of which there is already a sharp contest for the Democratic nomination. Two of them, the Ninth and Tenth, have been considered solidly Democratic, while the third, the Eleventh, although it has been carried by a Democrat at the last two congressional elections, was formed on the supposition that it was Republican, and which would very likely be so under ordinary circumstances.

In the Ninth district Congressman Keliher believes he is practically certain to be renominated. Mr. Keliher has served two terms. He is quite popular with the people of the district but finds the machine against [illegible] championship of James J. Storrow for mayor against John F. Fitzgerald. The [illegible] the Fitzgerald [illegible] its power to [illegible] being pointed out, however, [illegible] Mr. Keliher [illegible] Mr. Fitzgerald [illegible] strong [illegible] his election and [illegible] is not likely to be effective [illegible] other reasons. When Mr. Keliher ran for renomination two years ago he was vigorously opposed by a large number of powerful Democratic politicians in the district, but he was able to secure the nomination handily, and his friends say he will fare as well this time. Mayor Fitzgerald is not as powerful an element in municipal politics today as he was when he was mayor before. At that time he had a large number of important offices at his disposal and by reason of that fact had a power which is not his today under the new city charter and the official check of the state civil service commission.

Tenth District Is Quite Close

In the Tenth district Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell seeks a renomination, but is opposed principally by Councilor Curley, one of Mayor Fitzgerald's advisors in the city council. Mr. Curley has proved himself to be an adept in political manipulation, but it is quite a question whether he is more than a match for Congressman O'Connell and his efficient political organization. Mr O'Connell stands well with Mayor Fitzgerald and expects the support of that official in his campaign. It is possible that he may receive it. If there should be a very bitter contest over the Democratic nomination there is quite a possibility that the Republican nominee, if he be a strong figure, might be able to carry the district. Two years ago former City Clerk J. Mitchell Galvin came within four votes of defeating Mr. O'Connell and there was so much doubt about a number of ballots that the contest was taken to Washington and but recently decided in favor of the sitting congressman.

Fitzgerald Against Mr. Peters

In the Eleventh district Congressman Andrew J. Peters will be opposed by ex-Senator Thomas H. Dowd, who will have the ardent support of the Fitzgerald machine and a considerable part of the Democratic organization. Dowd is a well-known lawyer who has been a consistent Democrat through thick and thin. Peters is a Democrat of the old school who has not hesitated to oppose Democrats whom he thought to be unfit to hold public positions which they were seeking. He was against Fitzgerald two years ago and this year as well. He was unfortunate in supporting one Democrat seeking a judicial position for which the voters of Suffolk county later declared him unfit. Taken as a whole, however, his political career has been such as to commend him, enough Republicans in the district to elect him, although it is regarded as Republican by from one to three thousand in a normal vote. If the Fitzgerald machine fails to defeat him for the nomination Mr. Peters may be defeated by a Republican candidate through the defection of Democratic votes. In such a case, the Fitzgerald men may feel that the only way to get rid of Peters is by casting their votes for a Republican. That would leave the coast entirely clear for a machine candidate two years hence.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

With the Boston theatres one after another either closing or going into pictures, Keith's continues to go on its way giving even more remarkable bills than at the height of the season.

The coming week, for instance, Julius Steger, who has long been a legitimate favorite, both as an actor and a singer, will come with a new production from the German, entitled "The Way to the Heart." Mr. Steger is supported by a splendid company of six people and the production is one of the handsomest ever seen in vaudeville.

Of an entirely different character will be another large company of favorites, Gus Edwards' School Boys and Girls. The company includes the original "Sassy Little" Lillian Gohn, Frank Alvin, the "Tony Marinuccia," and the Gordan Boys, the dancers. A new feature of the bill will be the first appearance here of Bixley and Fink, two of the funniest comedians that vaudeville has had in recent years. Merrill and Otto will present a sketch "After the Shower," one of the prettiest and daintiest it at vaudeville has ever had. The Italian Trio of singers are also on the bill, which promises to be one of the most entertaining of the year.

Home Course In Domestic Science

XVI.—Treatment of Floors and Windows.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

AFTER the plan of rooms has been decided upon and the walls have been decorated with colors and materials in accordance with the governing principles of light, harmony and general fitness the next point to consider in house furnishing is the floor. The new house of modern design will probably have floors of hardwood and some varieties are so beautiful in themselves that the necessary treatment is very simple. A priming or filling coat of shellac to preserve the wood and cover up cracks, followed by one or more coats of wax rubbed down until it has the beautifully smooth, unpolished surface so much liked at the present time, makes the best floor finish. A very good preparation for waxing is made as follows: Melt one pound of wax slowly over hot water. When quite soft remove from fire and beat into it one pint of turpentine. If a soft finish is desired add one cupful of paraffin oil before using. When ready to apply have the wax melted and the floor free from dust. If there are any stains on the floor remove them before applying the wax. A strong solution of oxalic acid will remove black or almost any discoloration from wood, but it will also remove the staining substance, and this must be restored before waxing. When the floor is perfectly clean moisten a piece of flannel with the soft wax and rub the floor all over, using more wax as necessary. Let the wax remain on the floor for an hour or more, then polish with a stiff woolen cloth, piece of old carpet or soft leather or a weighted brush made for the purpose.

Do not use water on waxed or oiled floors unless you wish to remove all the finish and replace it with a new one. The daily care need be nothing more than sweeping with a soft hair brush, then wiping with a dust mop. Once a week all spots should be removed with turpentine and the floor wiped with a cloth saturated with the waxing substance.

AN ARTISTIC HALL.

An oak stain for pine or whitewood floors may be made as follows: Two cups of boiled oil, one and one-half cups of turpentine, three tablespoonfuls of raw umber, three tablespoonfuls of whiting. Mix very thoroughly. A good cherry stain is made of the same ingredients, substituting burnt sienna for the raw umber and using a little less whiting. When floors have been given one or two coats of stain they may be waxed according to the directions given above.

Carpets and Rugs.

Old floors can be painted and then oiled, or they may be treated with any desired floor preparations that are on the market. The hardwood or painted floor is much preferable to any carpet, though to make the furnishing of a room complete some covering is necessary. This would better be one good sized rug or several smaller ones, depending on the size and character of the room. The color of the rugs should harmonize with the color used on the wall or in draperies, but it should be considerably stronger in tone than either or both the others.

One large rug is more satisfactory for a dining room than several small ones, and the room which has walls decorated with horizontal lines, as it may be to give the effect of lowering the ceiling, should have a single rug on the floor; otherwise such a room will have a patchy appearance. Most people have learned that for sanitary reasons the floor covering, whatever it may be, should not extend from wall to wall nor be securely tacked down, to be removed only once a year or less frequently. Yet there are some housekeepers who cling to the old fashioned carpet without realizing the dangers there may be from germs thriving in the accumulated dust. The artistic house should be healthful also, and that will be largely accomplished when there is just as little opportunity as possible for germs to develop in it. Sunlight, fresh air and freedom from dust give the best assurance that disease germs are not hiding in our homes, while thick carpets, wool draperies and heavily curtained windows are likely breeding places for them. Nowadays these things are not considered either artistic or beautiful.

Draperies and Window Curtains.

Femininity loves soft draperies, and [illegible] more than the average man dislikes them, so as long as woman is the presiding genius in the house she will have them at windows and doors. Certainly they do add the finishing touch to a home, the final touch without which a room never seems quite complete no matter how well chosen are its appointments. But a word of caution is necessary in regard to draperies both for artistic and sanitary reasons. Window curtains should not be so heavy or numerous that they shut out air and sunlight. Woolen draperies and portieres should be avoided in bedrooms. [illegible] catch and hold dust [illegible] any other material. For living rooms and dining rooms silk or linen draperies are the best when expense need not be figured too closely, but there is such a large variety of cotton fabrics [illegible] in beauty of design and coloring that [illegible] the more costly silks [illegible].

In color [illegible] should harmonize with both walls and floors and should be a tone midway between the two. The long folds of the straight hanging drapery are much more beautiful than the looped and festooned arrangements which were popular a few years ago and which are still used by some professional upholsterers. Window curtains should come just to the lower edge of the casement and not to the floor or spread out a yard or two on the floor, after the fashion of recent years. A single pair of window curtains made of thin material, either plain or trimmed and hung in long straight lines, with side curtains to match the portieres, is the best trimming for any window from every point of view. If the window is very wide, making more than one pair of curtains necessary, there may be an overdrapery from the top as well as the sides. This should not extend down too far.

In selecting draperies keep two points firmly fixed in mind: first, don't use flowered drapery with a flowered wall and don't buy heavy, unwashable hangings for bedrooms. Such materials are entirely out of harmony with the whole idea of bedroom simplicity. For a flowered or much figured wall no curtains are prettier than plain white muslin or net made with wide hems or finished with a ruffle. For a bedroom with plain wall decoration a white curtain with a flowered over curtain draped in the style of the window is very effective.

Furniture and Where to Put It.

One important rule to observe in buying furniture for any part of the house is that it be of good quality, built on simple lines and suitable for the service it is intended to give. The living room should have comfortable, substantial furniture, not too much of it, yet enough to meet the requirements of the family. The table should be of generous size and strong enough to support the weight of the books, magazines and other articles which may be brought to it. The frail table, which looks as if it might go to pieces if subjected to greater weight than that of a vase of flowers or a book, may be permissible in the reception room, but is entirely out of place in the living room, where the family has its several pleasures and interests. The chairs, too, in this room should be comfortable, strong and sufficiently varied in size and style to suit every one from grandfather to the little child. Furniture for the living room, especially the chairs, should not be cumbersome. There can be strength without unnecessary weight, such as is often found in the so called "mission" furniture. The lines and general composition of this kind of furniture are good, and the popularity of the style has done much to revive simplicity in furnishing, but occasionally we find pieces that are unwieldy and awkward to move.

In the dining room the same rules should be followed; also adding to it that in this room the furniture should be limited to that required for serving and partaking of meals. A dining table, six or eight chairs, a sideboard or buffet and a serving table are really all the pieces necessary in the room, and unless there is an unusual amount of space to spare no more should be added. If possible the furniture in the dining room should be of one style and one finish. Odd pieces spoil the attractiveness of the room. It is a good idea when practicable to have the woodwork in the dining room and its furniture match. For instance, a room finished in old English oak may have old English furniture, and this, with a dull yellow or pomegranate wall decoration, is most effective in a north room. Do not crowd any room with superfluous furniture. There should be enough chairs, sufficient tables and one or more comfortable couches, but exaggerated creations in the way of seats, centerpieces and whatnots are not in good taste.

The bedroom furniture should be chosen with an eye to fitness and comfort rather than fashion. A plain brass or enameled iron bedstead, dressing table or bureau, small table, one or two chairs, a washstand and a couch are ample for any room the prime use of which is rest and sleep. I would include a couch—a simple homemade affair will fill every requirement—in every bedroom. It tempts one for the ten minute nap during the day which might never be thought of were there only a trim white bed in the room, and this little rest means added years to one's life.

The bed is the principal furniture in the sleeping room and should represent the largest amount of money. Have homemade dressers and tables if you must do without every luxury if need be, but have a good bed.

THE PUMP THAT RUNS ITSELF.

In many places, where the regular water pressure is low, or where the water supply must be furnished from wells, pumps have to be used as in the old-fashioned days when the wooden handle had to be worked up and down in order to get water for the house or for the stock. Various attempts have been made to eliminate the old wooden pump and the chain bucket, but nothing has ever been so successful as the electrically operated, automatic pump, which is now available for use in any place where electric current is obtainable.

These pumps can be located in any convenient place, over the well, beside the small reservoir or at the spring in a distant part of the estate, and the water can be pumped automatically to the proper storage reservoir in the top of the house or at any elevation desired. The trouble has always been with other pumps that some one had to look out for them. If the water supply got low, some one had to start the engine, or see that the windmill was in proper working condition. With the electric motor operated pump everything is automatic. Electricity [illegible] power and the engineer. The current is turned on automatically, and the motor starts because of a little float that throws the proper connections into action when the water drops to a certain level, and throws those connections out when the established level of the supply is reached again. There is no delay in getting up steam, no odor, no noise, and no one is required to touch even a button, or to watch the supply of water in the tank.

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

GRADE CROSSING DISCUSSION.

Reply to Alfred S. Hall.

"Man's evil manners live in brass, his virtues we write in water" says the world's greatest poet. If I possess any virtues whatever, I will not mention them in this article, but I do desire to reply to Mr. Hall's public statement regarding my "evil manners" in last week's STAR. Certainly his words are not golden but in the highest degree brazen, unkind and untruthful. I am not an expert at throwing mud but I can on occasions speak the truth and I will try to limit myself to that virtue in this article.

In speaking of possible grade crossing damages, Mr. Hall plainly refers to me when he says, "The property of our friend who always litigates and prospers in so doing would be so slightly affected, he could not carry off great profits this time." His last statement is that I always litigate. This is untrue for in the course of a long and very busy career I have never brought a suit or been sued in the general conduct of my business. I have never seen the time when I thought litigation paid in business and I have kept clear of it even if I lost money by so doing. I have taken out some thirty patents on inventions and one of these was attacked but I defended it and won out. Does Mr. Hall know of a manufacturing inventor who has done better than this in defending his inventions? Besides my regular business, I have had charge of a trust estate which from its nature, I have had to defend from encroachment of abuttors who usually through ignorance or carelessness, have taken possession of parts of it. The committee who built the Town Hall asked permission to treat estate land next the town lot as if the town owned it. The request was granted and the old pond line destroyed. In after years the town put a sewer through this borrowed land not recognizing private ownership and without making any arrangements with the owners as it did with adjoining estates. Did I litigate this little matter? No, I induced the selectmen to appoint a committee who with the assistance of town counsel, town engineer and sewer board arbitrated the matter with me and the present line was fixed upon and the town sewer allowed to remain on estate land. Not one cent was paid the estate and the town has continued to use the land to this day without paying anything for it. What "great profit" did I "carry off" in this transaction? In the matter of filling into the mill pond by abuttors, I refer to Beggs and Cobb who inadvertantly did much filling on estate land. I called their attention to this trespass and placed all my evidence at their disposal. John Johnson, Esq., of Woburn, went over the whole evidence for Beggs and Cobb and recommended a settlement which I had proposed in the first place. No money passed but a new line was established and litigation avoided. Not a cent of "profit" this time but an invitation to a dinner at a Boston hotel to celebrate the happy termination of the affair was all my recompense. John S. Lyman, Nelson street, through ignorance, filled up much pond land which he had no legal right to fill. On calling his attention to the matter and showing my evidence, he consulted Judge Littlefield who recommended Lyman to accept my offer of settlement as perfectly fair. No money passed but a new line established by which Mr. Lyman retained all his filling. If I "prospered" in this transaction, it was not from a money point of view. Another trespass exactly like the last two cases was that of H. A. Emerson and Co. when their lumber yard was moved from the present playground to Cutter Village. The firm was very desirous not to trespass in the matter of filling upon the mill property and at Mr. George Blanchard's earnest request, who came after me in a carriage, I went to the new lumber yard and advised the owners in regard to their right to fill the mill pond. They laid my evidence before counsel Alfred S. Hall, who placed no confidence in it and advised filling into the pond without my consent as I had no right to stop the filling. The firm was very gentlemanly in the matter but followed Mr. Hall's advice as they should do as their legal adviser. The outcome was not quite as pleasant as in the other cases of illegal filling I have cited, for the court promptly issued an injunction restraining all filling of the mill pond until Mr. Hall showed cause why filling should not be permanently enjoined. The superior court thought more of my opinion than Mr. Hall did, much to his clients disappointment. Mr. Hall was granted all the time he wanted to reply to the injunction proceedings but he never replied. The matter was at last settled by the lumber firm buying additional land and the right to fill the whole of this land was granted. All the "litigation" in this case (the granting of the injunction) was brought about by Mr. Hall himself who would not accept the plain evidences in the case as other attorneys had in similar cases but undertook to "bluff" me. Who was the legal swash-buckler in this case, Mr. Hall or me?

Another case which is the only one really "litigated" to the fullest extent was the Miller case growing out of a proposed site for a new town storage yard and freight yard. All know about this case which Mr. Hall assisted in litigating to the best of his ability. An auditor in the superior court decided after long delay on his part in the estates favor, but Mr. Hall argued so forcibly against the court's ratifying the auditor's findings, on account of his procrastination, that it was not accepted as final. Another trial before the land court resulted again in another victory for the estate, but litigation could not be stopped on estate's part until the supreme court said that the two Winchester lawyer's contention was wrong and the estates right. Mr. Hall was far from being a peace-maker in this matter and he "prospered" much more than I did and supposedly received compensation while the estate did not receive, neither did it ask for a cent of damages in defending itself against an alleged flaw in its title over sixty years old and costing those who brought it just $25. This defence of its title cost the estate a great deal of money and certainly I did not "prosper" or "carry off" much spoil from gaining the suit. Time and space do not admit of my reciting other disputes which I have settled without resorting to litigation. The Main street bridge case is one when Mr. Littlefield represented the town. It was settled on the plain evidences without resorting to the courts. At present, town counsel Joslin is engaged with me in getting at the correct boundary line between the old town stable land and estate land without resorting to litigation. I have given Mr. Joslin and town engineer Hinds, every particle of evidence I possess showing that the fence line as put up last winter by the town (without consulting me in the least) is not rightly located. This would have made a capital case for the land court but I do not "always litigate" and have made every effort to settle the matter out of court. In this and in other cases, I have found present town counsel willing to look facts in the face, weigh evidence carefully and do all possible to avoid litigation. I think he will not agree with Mr. Hall that I "always litigate and prosper in so doing." There are also other town matters being settled between Mr. Joslin and myself which will not be litigated if we can help it.

What great profits have I "carried off" from town awards here-to-fore, but can not "carry off" "this time?" When Washington street was widened, I was awarded twenty-five dollars which did not pay for moving the fence, say nothing of the land. I gave this money to my father, Joel Whitney. When Main street was widened and improved, an improvement which I more than any one else put through, I received my part of a small estate award which I at once returned to the town treasurer, the only award of the kind ever so returned. These are all the awards I ever received from the town. I served twenty one years in all as a town officer and never asked for or received pay for whatever I tried to do. I am wholly at a loss to know when or how I have "prospered" at public expense. I wish Mr. Hall could tell me more definitely than he does.

Mr. Hall claims that I do not want to arbitrate whatever little claim I might have if the centre of Winchester was "humped" as he desires because I ache to fight for more in the courts. He is mistaken again. I am much in favor of abritation when both side and all hands choose the arbitrators. In the present case Mr. Hall has chosen the men that suit him and his clients no matter whether they are acceptable to other land owners or not. If Mr. Hall is correct in his estimation of my character and reputaton in Winchester, I certainly want no Winchester men to arbitrate for me in land damage cases unless I can have something to say about choosing them. "Whispering tongues can poison truth" and public and private back-biters have so attacked my reputation that I know better than any one else that strangers from out of town would make better judges of any damage I might sustain than men Mr. Hall would choose for me without my advice in the matter. I certainly do not want Mr. Hall to be my Moses in leading me out of the present grade crossing wilderness. So very few land owners will sign his agreement that it is good for nothing as a guide to ultimate cost of raising the Winchester crossing. No one knows if it is strictly a legal document or not as the statutes provide a way to ascertain damages, but all do know that I have not sought to have my land touched or taken and desire no damages of any kind, whatever.

In conclusion I would advise Mr. Hall to read Mr. Currier's article on town meeting proceedure in last week's STAR. It seems to me that such cold blooded, sarcastic things he prints in bold type regarding my character are worse than the personal vaporings of hot debaters in town meetings. Certainly he can not effectively call me to follow him by any such personal argument as appears in the STAR. He characterized, in town meeting debate, the grade crossing committee of fifteen, who certainly did conscientious and able work in trying to solve the grade crossing matter as "individually honored, high-minded men but collectively they were a set of —— rascals." I think he calls me a much worse kind of a rascal than the cast-out fifteen, but it is a crumb of comfort that the fifteen approach me somewhat in rascality. As Burn's said of the devil, he "might take thought and mend," so I think "our friend" Hall could take thought and mend his manners if he makes an earnest effort to do so. All will help him as there is much good stuff in his make-up if he will only curb his imagination and his caustic humor. When his imagination paints the magnificent structures which he is sure will arise and ornament the work of the artificial mound builders in the center of Winchester, it does no great harm and in fact his story is rather amusing, but when his fancy runs to picking flaws in the imperfect nature of his fellow citizens who are as earnest as himself in obtaining the best results for the town, he does harm, for if no one believes his stories, he sets a bad example to the rising generation and hurts whatever cause he advocates.

Arthur E. Whitney.

A WORD OF DEFENCE.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I think Mr. Hall is unfair to Mr. Whitney in his article concerning grade crossing matters in last week's STAR. I know that Mr. Whitney has not changed his attitude on the grade crossing controversy from the first, and mercenary motives have not biased his opinion. It is unjust to say he is opposed to Mr. Hall's arbitrators because be thinks he can get more out of litigation than the proposed scheme of arbitration. As I understand his position, he wants nothing out of either arbitration or litigation.

I have known Mr. Whitney for a long time and have done business with him. No man can do business any more fair and just than he. I was on the Board of Selectmen with him three years and no man ever served the town better. He was always for conciliation and honorable settlement when disputes arose and was the means of warding off many threatened law-suits against the town. Main and Washington streets were widened at this time and thirty-four suits were entered on account of the improvements, but only one of these came to trial.

I dislike to make this personal statement but feel compelled to do so from a spirit of fairness to one of our best citizens. I feel sure that Mr. Whitney has no base motives in taking the same stand regarding the grade crossing as I do and a great majority of Winchester's most honored citizens are with us.

BOARD OF HEALTH DECISION ON MILK QUESTION.

In the Board of Health in the Matters of W. F. HEALEY ET AL., PETITIONERS.

On the petition filed with the Board May 20, 1910, of eighty-eight customers of Mr. Jared D. Thornton stating that they were satisfied with the quality of his milk and desired that he be exempt from the requirement of sterilizing his bottles, a hearing was granted the petitioners on May 25th.

It was announced at the hearing that as the Board believed it could not legally exempt a particular dealer from the obligation to comply with the regulation in question, it would treat the petition as if it raised the broad question which was, shall the regulation be repealed.

This regulation is, "All utensils actually employed in the storage, sale or distribution of milk shall be washed with boiling water or sterilized with live steam before they are again used."

Attention is called to the fact that the regulation does not require the installation of a sterilizer. It requires the scalding of utensils, which may be done with water brought to a boil on the kitchen stove, or their sterilization with steam. It is obvious, however, that a large number of utensils could not be economically treated by scalding. The dealer with a small route should be able to treat his utensils with boiling water. The dealer with a large route should be able to afford a sterilizer.

The arguments addressed to the Board on behalf of the petitioners were, without exception, based on the fear that an enforcement of the regulation would result in driving out the local dealer and enforcing the people to become customers of one of the large contractors. The Board admits that such a result would be less satisfactory than the conditions now obtaining. The petitioners admit that the regulation is proper if the result they fear will not occur.

The Board is of the opinion that the result feared by the petitioners will not occur.

Of the five dealers who have not yet made provisions to comply with the regulations, no one has stated that he will go out of business rather than comply therewith with the single exception of Mr. Thopmton, who, nevertheless, has stated that he will obey the regulation during the summer months, if required, as he is able to make a profit during these months even if he scalds his utensils. But he states that he does not intend to continue in business during the winter because he is unable to make a profit in the winter months even when he is not required to obey the regulation. Of the remaining four dealers one, a year ago, stated his willingness to obey and his belief that the regulation was proper. Of the other three, one alone has protested, and he has refused to state that he will not comply with the regulation.

Milk dealers who feel that they are aggrieved by the refusal of the Milk Inspector to renew licenses unless provision has been made for complying with this regulation have, by law, an appeal to the State Board of Health

It is therefore ORDERED

That the petitioners be given leave to withdraw.

That the milk inspector be instructed that the regulation complained of remains in full force and effect.

INTERESTING HEARING.

Milk Situation in Winchester Discussed.

Notwithstanding the small amount of advertising, due to lack of time, a gathering of about 80 persons attended the hearing before the Board of Health in the small Town Hall on Wednesday evening, and some interesting facts were presented.

The hearing was held in response to a petition presented to the board by Jared D. Thornton, signed by some 80 persons, and reading as follows:

"We, the undersigned customers of Jared D. Thornton, are perfectly satisfied with the quality of milk furnished by him, and herewith express ourselves as desiring to continue being served with the milk without sterilizing of his bottles."

The ruling by the Board of Health a year ago was to the effect that all milk dealers must wash in boiling water or sterilize all milk bottles. The dealers complain that this entails installing special apparatus and increases expenses, making their continuing in the business impossible.

Of the town dealers it was said that one has sold his business, one given up his business, and the others (largely) state that they will discontinue their routes when the enforcement is made.

The ruling was made in May, 1909. For eight months it was not enforced, and the board propose now to enforce it with the issuing of licenses May 31st.

The hearing was opened by Mr. Ives for the board, and numerous speakers gave their opinion. Of the gathering present, about 80 odd, but four spoke in favor of the enforcement of the rule. The attendance included most of the doctors, practically all of the milk dealers, about 20 ladies, and many repesentative citizens. It would appear, to sum up the hearing, that the best milk dealers—those furnishing satisfactory milk under the present conditions—would give up their business if the rule was enforced. The residents of the town prefer to take milk of local dealers, supplying Winchester milk under the present conditions than to have sterilized milk from outside.

Mr. Ives stated that it was his belief that no dealer had sold out his business on account of the board's ruling; he believed that no other dealer would not be able to take care of his trade under it, and that special apparatus was not needed.

Mr. Chas. A. Gleason wanted no outside milk; the smaller dealers were not able to comply with ruling, as heated building and apparatus were necessary; had rather have milk 12 hours old not sterilized than 72 hours milk in gold labeled jars.

Mr. Ives asked proof that small dealers would go out of business. Mr. Thornton stated that a dealer wished to buy him out, but would not buy out another farm able to raise more milk which was supplied elsewhere, located in his vicinity. He knew that the small dealers would be forced out of business.

Dr. H. A. Gale, former inspector of milk, stated he felt that the Inspector of Milk could not control the outside milk; that it appeared to be a question of the local or the general supply; that although he thought the ruling of the board a good one, under the persent conditions he preferred local milk not sterilized to sterilized outside milk.

Other gentlemen speaking in the same strain were Messrs. Arthur E. Whitney, L. M. Passano, Geo B. Davis, M. H. Lombard, Dr. I. T. Cutter, W. S. Forbes, Dr. Wm. H. Buckley, C. H. Symmes, Newton Shultis, W. J. Breen, F. E. H. Heath and Mrs. Edward O. Punchard.

Prof. C. F. A. Currier, Dr. Ralph Putnam and Schuyler F. Herron advocated the enforcement of the board's ruling, although Dr. Putnam stated he was paying 16 cents a quart to get the best milk.

This brought up the question of the local dealers raising the price, Mr. Herron stating that if the petitioners desired local milk they should be willing to pay more for it in order that the local dealer could make a profit. Mr. Thornton stated that he did not imagine for a moment that he could get enough customers who would agree to a raise in price to enable him to continue to do business.

It appeared that the question under discussion, although technically applying only to Mr. Thornton, would affect all of the dealers doing business here, and what action the board would take was undecided.

From the attitude of those present it appeared that the majority of citizens prefer to receive their milk from local dealers, and are willing to receive it in bottles which are not sterilized. The Board of Health feels that the local dealers will not be forced to sell or go out of business if their ruling is enforced, but the public at large believe they will lose their local supply if it is enforced. That all agree that sterilizing is a good thing is evident, but in view that absolute control is not possible, local milk not sterilized seems universally preferred. The question of whether apparatus is necessary to comply with the ruling appears to be open, but it appears difficult to see how [illegible] may be wasted in [illegible] what I wrote [illegible] it. The fact that the hearing was not more widely advertised [illegible] would have been [illegible] and the opinion of [illegible] who are receiving milk from other dealers in the town outside of Mr. Thornton.

STERILIZING PLANTS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Gentlemen: As a subscriber to your paper I would deem it a favor if you voice the following in your coming issue, in regard to the proposed regulation to be put in effect by the Board of Health May 31st, to virtually compel the local producers of milk to install a steam sterilizing plant to sterilize the milk utensils, this regulation can only be aimed at the local producers, for how is it possible to give the same supervision to producers who ship their milk to a contractor from a distance and then distributed locally. To my mind and from the general sentiment I hear expressed, it is the belief that the ultimate outcome would be to force the nearby producer to increase his price to the consumer and allow the contractor to remain in the position that he is now in, with the result that those who will not, because of lack of understanding of the matter and those who cannot pay the additional price to become customers of the contractor, there will in the ordinary course of events be left too small a number of customers who are willing to pay the extra cost, to make it profitable for a local producer to remain in business.

So long as the experimental reforms relating to our milk supply contemplated by the Board of Health are not generally considered sufficiently essential to cause any change whatsoever in price, can they be regarded as vital enough to warrant extreme measure on the part of the Board of Health by virtue of their power to revoke licenses?

Have they the moral right to compel reforms, to be paid for by individuals for which they can guarantee no renumeration?

Might it not be well to make haste slowly until such time as these latest measures are deemed sufficiently necessary to warrant a corresponding new schedule of prices to which every one selling milk in Winchester must conform?

To force a materially increased expense upon a local producer, and vaguely assure him he "ought to charge more" when, as a matter of fact, if he did so, the very ones in whose behalf these expenses were supposedly incurred, would buy their milk where it was cheapest, is an unfair and unjust policy. Furthermore these reforms have not been made a part of the State Board of Health's regulation; is it therefore wise to discourage and banish from the field long established and thoroughly reliable sources of supply without more tangible cause?

The assurance expressed by members of the Board that no such results threaten us, is untenable in view of the fact that several reliable producers have already given up business because of their impartial requirements. What guarantee has any member of the Board that others who have reached a like decision and have so stated, are not equally sincere?

Are there not lines of reform indisputably advantageous along which we can work without endangering our milk supply from sources which now give general satisfaction?

I sincerely trust, and many more of the consumers are with me, that our Board of Health will give this matter further serious thought before they put in effect a regulation which is odious and not wanted by those who are well satisfied with their present milk supply and believe that with this regulation they unconsciously take a step to assist in a full monopoly by the contractors at the expense of the local producer and the detriment of the milk consumer

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS IN WINCHESTER.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

At the recent special town meeting a gentleman asked me if I could tell him what proportion of the railroad accidents in recent years had occurred at the station and what at the crossing. I could not at that time; but since the meeting I have endeavored to secure the information which would enable me to answer the question positively. From the record in the town clerk's office and from talking with the gateman at the crossing, who has been there twenty five years, I find the facts to be as follows:

In the last ten years there have been nine fatalities in Winchester caused by railroad accidents. Eight of these were pedestrians; one, a man driving a milk wagon. One of the nine occurred at Wedgemere; two on the track, at night, probably north of the crossing or south of Wedgemere—the record is not quite definite as to the exact point in these two cases; two at the crossing; three at the depot, and one between the depot and the crossing. The single case of an accident to a team at the crossing is the only one I can find any record of in the last twenty-five years, and that occurred, as many citizens will remember, through a combination of circumstances which would be quite rare. There was a thick fog at the time and the bells in the switchman's crossing were not working.

From this statement of facts I feel that I did not overstate the case when I claimed that there was as much danger, or more to human life at the station and along the tracks outside of the crossing as at the crossing proper.

These facts may also enable that other gentleman, who could not recall any fatality at the station except that of a dog, hereafter to speak with more positiveness on this point.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

It may be of some comfort to the anxious parents of Winchester to know that a professor in the Harvard medical school decides that it is safe for two persons to kiss each other, so far as exchanging germs is concerned. The Spectator refers to those parents who have been terrified at having their boys kissed all down Pleasant street by a drove of admiring women. To young people who are at the period of life when it is as natural for them to get engaged as to breathe, the Harvard Medical School discovery can make no difference. They do not worry about lip bacteria, they never have worried about it, and they never will.

The Spectator has had his attention called to the [illegible] walk which has been acquired by a number of Winchesterites. It is the latest style in walking.

Now is the time for the good people of Winchester to take precautionary measures against the menace of the house fly.

The Spectator is pleased to know that the movement for a safe and sane Fourth has the indorsement of all the representative citizens of Winchester.

The oftener the Winchester merchant's advertisement is in the STAR, the oftener it will be seen and the more popular the store keeper is, the more trade he will get.

A few days ago The Spectator was talking with a Winchester lady whose boy is troubled with stuttering and she claimed it was brought on by indulgence in cigarettes which makes him very nervous. The Spectator believes that nervousness tends to accentuate the troubles of a stuttering person, but it is not by any means the sole cause of stuttering. In so far as cigarettes cause nervousness it may be blamed perhaps for increasing the affliction. The habit of stammering when affecting persons in youth, after disappears later in life, probably in consequence of constant effort of the subject to improve his habit of speaking. In referring to this annoying affliction one of our Winchester medical gentlemen says: "It is known to be generally increased by emotional disturbances, such as fright or apprehension, and vanishes again when the person regains control of himself." This physician advises that a person so afflicted should never attempt to speak in a hurry or when the chest is emptied of air, and informs The Spectator that it can sometimes be greatly relieved by reading measured sentences slowly and with great deliberation and that the affliction is sometimes permanently removed, in time by the patient performing some trifling muscular action conscientiously with the pronunciation of words over which he stumbles. Thus he can sometimes prevent the fault by moving the finger at the very instant that he begins to utter a word.

A Main street gentleman wants to know if a working man has a right to quit work when he desires, has an employer a right to discharge him when the employer desires?

The Spectator agrees with a prominent townsman that some of the unearthly horns on automobiles should be squelched.

There are lots of men here in Winchester as elsewhere who think they are doing great things for other people by simply giving them advice.

Why is it that certain Winchesterites act during the day as if they had slept under a crazy quilt during the night?

Lest The Spectator forgets to mention it let him remind the good citizens of Winchester that the unsightly poles along the curbstones on Main, Pleasant and other prominent thoroughfares, should be buried underneath the ground.

The Spectator is in receipt of an interesting communication from Schuyler F. Herron Winchester's Superintendent of Schools, and a gentleman whom the Spectator has reason to believe stands at the very top of his profession. The communication is written in answer to a paragraph of The Spectator in a recent issue of the STAR. The letter, in part, is as follows:

"In last week's issue the statement is made that the work in English in the High school consists mainly of a study of rhetoric and of writers' biographies and that it would be better to read some books by standard authors. It is probable that the investigation upon which this opinion was said to be founded happened to hit upon a study of the life of some author whose books had been or were to be read or upon a brief general course in English literature, occupying about a quarter of the third school year and following the reading of a number of standard authors. The course in English, which is required of all pupils, includes composition and literature approximately in the ratio of one to two, the former having a minimum of "abstract definitions" and the latter being given to the reading and study of some fifteen texts by twelve authors.

"This is a somewhat trivial matter. It is mentioned because I feel that you cannot wish to give our townspeople any erroneous impressions and because the cumulative effect of even slight misstatements may be to lessen the admirable school spirit of the community."

The Spectator thanks Mr. Herron for calling attention to his misapprehension of the subject in question.

A Winchester physician gives The Spectator to understand that whistling is a very valuable exercise when properly employed, and if children are inclined to whistle he says they should be encouraged. The habit of whistling develops skill in breath control. To whistle properly one must take a deep breath through the nostrils and in addition keep the lungs well inflated. Together with right breathing goes a good circulation and from that follows good digestion.

The most thoroughly the people of Winchester realize that sunshine and out door air are better tonics than all the remedies in the drug stores the better it will be for everybody; and The Spectator would point out that this is just as true on week days as on Sundays.

The pride with which two or three Winchesterites exhibit their dogs to friends is only equalled by the facility with which they deny the existence of the animal when the tax collector is around.

Winchester is all right. It is true that if a number of citizens would absorb more public spirit, they would be able to do more for the advancement and prosperity of the dear old town. But Winchester is all right.

There are some splendid gentlemen here in Winchester whose energies are going to waste who could be gathered in for some very effective work if the churches would only apply themselves to the task of getting this available material.

The Spectator.

BURIED IN BLACK BALL POND

The committee on cleaning up the Aberjona river made an inspection of the stream this morning, following a notification by Salvatore Gandolfo of a strange scum on the surface of one of the estuaries, Black Ball pond. After careful analysis of the free matter, it was announced that the residue was composed entirely of [illegible] gas, showing conclusively that the tail of Halley's comet is buried in the pond, where it evidently struck last night at the time of the terrible crash, thought at first to have been a thunderclap.—Boston Traveler.

Electricity moves at astonishing speed and this vibrating action is repeated until the bell rings faster than anyone can count, providing the finger is kept on the connecting button. It takes very little electricity to operate a door bell. In fact, a dry battery will ring the bell a long time but the trouble is one can never tell just when such a battery is going to run out. In Greater Boston, where the lighting current is steady for twenty-four hours of the day, electrical concerns have developed a bell-ringing transformer which can be readily attached to the lighting circuit and will supply the door bell with what little electricity it needs forever and a day.

INTER-CLASS MEET.

The annual inter-class track meet was held last Friday afternoon and Saturday morning on Manchester Field and resulted in a win for the seniors by a comfortable margin of twelve points. Friday afternoon the score between the seniors and sophomores was very close and the winner was not decided until after the 220 yard dash on Saturday morning.

The hundred yard dash was the first event and first place went to H. Wheatley, '12, Grant getting a wretched start. Flaherty captured 5 more points for the sophomores in the shot put and Wheatley and Farnsworth took second and third in the 440. Six more points came to 1912 in the broad jump, but 1910, by capturing all three places in the half mile, led after Friday afternoon 21-20.

The seniors took 8 points in the mile, 9 in the 220, and 5 in the relay. Farnsworth and Badger tied for third in the high jump, both first and second place going to the sophomores in this event. The final score between these classes was 1910 43 1-2; 1912 31 1-2.

AN IMPORTANT MISSION.

Should The Hague tribunal sustain the contentions of the Newfoundland government, it is possible that the various American states might retaliate, involving further complications.

Charged with presentation of the case of the United States against Great Britain in connection with the Newfoundland fisheries before The Hague tribunal, Samuel J. Elder of Boston, who will act as one of the associate counsel of Senator Root, left Washington last Friday for The Hague.

Senator Root will act as Chief counsel and besides Mr. Elder, Chandler Anderson, George Turner, James Brown Scott, Charles B. Warren and Robert Lansing will assist in the case.

Considerable importance surrounds the outcome of the case. The Gloucester fishermen claim the right to take fish and bait in the territorial waters of Newfoundland under the treaty of 1818, and the British claim the right of a colony to curtail the privilege conferred upon aliens by treaty.

Ting-aling! Ting-a-ling-a-ling!

The electric bell on the kitchen wall announces that someone is on the front step who would like to see the [illegible] of the house. [illegible] with several [illegible] of the [illegible], electricity, who stands guard at the portal ready at all times to announce the coming of visitors.

The electric bell is more or less a mystery to most folks, who do not comprehend how pressure on a little button beside the front door will ring a bell in the kitchen. They know it is an electric bell but how the little device works is a mystery far beyond their knowledge of scientific subjects.

The electric bell is a very simple device, taking only a little current from a dry or wet battery through bell ringing transformers. The little button on the door jamb is a spring device which keeps the circuit open between the battery or transformer and the bell. The pressure of a finger closes the circuit and the electricity flashes over the line to the bell. The bell itself is somewhat more intricate than it looks. In the little box beneath the bell are two small coils of fine insulated wire wrapped tightly about soft iron cores. Of course, when electricity flows through the insulated wire of these coils the soft iron cores become magnets. These magnets attract a soft iron plate attached to the lower end of the bell clapper. This iron plate is fastened to a steel spring but the magnets are powerful enough to overcome the action of the spring and to pull the plate towards it. This action pulls the clapper down and at a certain point the plate breaks the electric circuit, destroying the pulling force of the magnets, and the steel springs throw the clapper back against the bell. Of course, the circuit is then closed again and the action is repeated as long as the button is pushed.

THE MILKMAN'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Once the dealer delivers his milk his responsibility is ended and that of the consumer begins. All milk cannot be delivered to everybody five minutes before breakfast and consumers should remember that they go to bed at night with everything in the house for breakfast except milk, and that the milkman cannot be everywhere at once.

Milk should never be allowed to stand for hours before being placed in the ice box, and when it is delivered in the early morning provision for icing it in the warm weather should be made. When the milk is put in the ice box it should be placed next the ice, or at least in a place where the temperature is 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Milk, like many other articles of diet, absorbs odors very easily; here it should be kept tightly covered all the time.

A common practise is to pour off some of the milk into a pitcher, place the pitcher on the dining table during the meal, and then pour the remaining milk back into the bottle after the milk has stood in a warm room for an hour or so. This temperature causes the souring bacteria to increase very rapidly in the pitcher and when the milk is poured back with the cold milk the whole sours very quickly.

People Tell Each Other About Good Things.

Sixteen years ago few people in the world knew of such a preparation as a Powder for the Feet. Today after the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease has been told year after year by one gratified person to another, there are millions who would as soon go without a dentifrice as without Allen's Foot-Ease. It is a cleanly, wholesome, healing, antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, which has given rest and comfort to tired and aching feet in all parts of the world. It cures while you walk. Over 30,000 testimonials of cures of smarting, swollen, perspiring feet. It prevents friction and wear of the stockings and will save in your stocking bill ten times its cost each year. Imitations pay the dealer a larger profit, otherwise you would never be offered a substitute when you ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, the original powder for the feet. Imitations are not advertised because they are not permanent. For every genuine article there are many imitations. The imitator has no reputation to sustain—the advertiser has. It stands to reason that the advertised article is the best, otherwise the public would not buy and the advertising could not be continued. When you ask for an article advertised in this paper, see that you get it. Refuse imitations.

CHARGES GALORE.

Eighteen charges have been preferred against Middlesex County officials, especially the County commissioners and the sheriff, and the keeper of Lowell jail. The charges are the result of the investigations of a committee of Cambridge citizens, who have employed detectives in their investigations, and have preferred charges to the attorney-general. Misfeasance and malfeasance in office is alleged. There was a similar investigation of Middlesex county some thirty-five years ago, and while no criminal prosecution resulted, there was a considerable charge in business methods and the county treasury was largely benefited. The chairman of the board of county commissioners, Levi S. Gould of Melrose, challenges anyone to bring forward anything to prove that the acts of the officers of Middlesex county have not been straight and right. Middlesex county is the largest in the Commonwealth. Its valuation is $624,507,250.00 and the population is 608,499, which is one-sixth of the population of Massachusetts. The result of the investigations will be awaited with interest.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Now that the legitimate houses have closed, we are getting the best of what they have been offering during the season at Keith's, for half the money. Coming to Keith's you will see two great players, one of them no less than William H. Thompson, than whom there is no better character actor on the stage to-day.

Next week at Keith's he will be seen in what is said to be the best short play that has been put on in England for many years. It is called "The Pride of the Regiment."

Another feature of the bill will be Stuart Barnes, who has been one of the greatest favorites of the year on the legitimate stage, and in vaudeville is known as the "Chesterfield Monologist."

The entire bill for the week has not been announced, some of the strongest features being held in reserve, but those already given are but an indication of what is to come. Montrell, the juggler, Keidy and Currier, singers and musicians; and Mullen and Correlli, two of the cleverest acrobatic clowns the stage has ever seen.

PAID FOR GOOD SALARIES.

In returning the Senate bill providing for pensioning the members of the district police without his approval, Governor Draper says: That it is time to call a halt on such expenditures; that the state police are paid good salaries, that they should be able to make reasonable savings therefrom so as to render themselves comfortable in their old age; that such acts as this, which increase enormously the expenses of the whole people, tend to increase the cost of living; that it is class legislation.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HIS CONUNDRUM.

Propounded In Prose, It Was Answered In Rhyme.

In the olden time before the war, the days so famous for generous hospitality in the south, a brilliant party was assembled at dinner in a beautiful country homestead. Across the table wit flashed back and forth, and the guests began to vie with one another in proposing conundrums.

Mr. Alexander H. Stephens offered one which puzzled the whole company, "What is it that we eat at breakfast and drink at dinner?"

For some time no answer came, and the bright eyes of the southern orator began to sparkle with triumph, when Colonel Johnson, taking up the "Commonplace Book" of the hostess, which lay conveniently by, wrote impromptu upon the flyleaf the following answer:

What is eaten for breakfast and drunken for dinner?
Is it coffee or eggs or butter or meats?
Sure double the stomach of obdurate sinner
Who eats what he drinks and drinks what he eats.

But let us consider. 'Tis surely not butter
Nor coffee nor meats, whether broiled or roast,
Nor boiled eggs nor poached nor fried in a batter
It must, then, be bread. Ah, yes—when 'tis toast!

—Atlanta Constitution.

The Manly Man.

"After you've been two weeks in the house with one of these terrible handy men that ask their wives to be sure to wipe between the tines of the forks and that know just how much raising bread ought to have and how to hang out a wash so each piece will get the best sun it's a real joy to get back to the ordinary kind of man. Yes, 'tis so!" Mrs Gregg finished with much emphasis. "I want a man who should have sense about the things he's meant to have sense about, but when it comes to keeping house I like him real helpless, the way the Lord planned to have him!"—Youth's Companion.

A Costly Funeral.

The most costly state funeral which has ever taken place was perhaps that of Alexander the Great. A round million was spent in laying Alexander to his rest. The body was placed in a coffin of gold filled with costly aromatics, and a diadem was placed on the head. The funeral car was embellished with ornaments of pure gold, and its weight was so great that it took eighty-four mules more than a year to convey it from Babylon to Syria.

Wonderful Musical Memory.

Sir John Stainer had a wonderful musical memory. It was put to the test once at the Crystal palace when he had to play the organ in the "Messiah" and a folio copy, on which alone he could see the score, was not forthcoming. The conductor was in despair. Sir John cut the knot by a wonderful tour de force, playing the part faultlessly right through and entirely from memory, probably the only time the "Messiah" has been so rendered.—London Standard.

Elevated Tracks.

Mr. Robert C. Metcalf has a communication in another column on the grade crossing problem, in which he intimates that he is favorable to elevating the tracks of the steam road through the town. In his communication he advances a good many reasons in favor of this scheme, and at the present time this appears to be the method that will be finally determined upon, when the steam road is ready to undertake the work. The proposed gates will be only temporary. The town committed itself to carrying the street over the tracks, but when it came to the question of land damages the citizens hesitated, and perhaps too long, if they believe absolutely in this method of abolishing the crossing, for it looks as if this opportunity had gone by. There is no doubt but that this is the best method for improving and preserving the appearance of the centre of the town. But dollars stand in the way. The question now is shall we agree to an elevated railroad through the town, or will the citizens, if again given the opportunity, insist on the plan that they voted for and pay the difference in cost?

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Winchester Union has met with a great loss in the death of Mrs. Almira A. Rowe who from its organization up to the last hours of her life on earth was sincerely devoted to its interests and to the great work which it represents. For more than half its existence she was its president and always was an active worker in an organization so largely composed of non-active members that the burden rests heavily on the few who do work. Probably to the people of Winchester generally she stood for the W. C. T. U. as no other person does. Her white ribbon was to her a constant spur to greater activity in the effort to conquer the evils of intemperance, through the various lines in which the attack is being made. She knew the work and the workers and loved to attend the gatherings of the workers, at home and elsewhere. She was always on the alert to see opportunities to spread the gospel of temperance and was no less tireless during the years when the Union's membership was steadily dwindling than when it was more popular. She rejoiced in the recent increase of membership. All through the weary days of waiting for the final summons, she was eager to know how things were progressing in her beloved Union.

Perhaps the Flower Mission was her favorite department during the latter years and some of those who knew this have already contributed something to be used in this work as a memorial to her, and if any other of her friends wish to add to this their contributions will be welcomed. Yet, after all, the best tribute that can be paid to her memory is to continue the work that next to her home and her church lay nearest her heart. It will call for more than one ordinary worker to fill her place. Who will help to do this "For God and Home and Native Land?"

There will be a children's temperance meeting next Friday, June 3, at 4 p. m. in the Methodist Church vestry, to which all children interested are invited. Mrs. Clara A. Hogan of Watertown is to conduct the meeting and light refreshments will be served.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR ZUEBLIN.

The lecture by Professor Zueblin, given last Friday evening in the High school assembly hall, was a rare treat. With the assistance of a series of beautifully colored lantern views he demonstrated the extent of the playground movement and the infinite possibilities therein for boys and girls, and for adults as well. Incidentally, he emphasized the gain which would come from a substitution on the 4th of July of play for dangerous explosives. The address was sane, illuminating and inspiring. His hearers know why he is in demand as a lecturer on civic progress and rejoice that he is a fellow townsman. Most unfortunately many were kept away by church services and by the scarlet fever scare which has caused the "June Breakfast" and the "May Party" to be postponed.

Before the lecture the boys from Mrs. O'Sullivan's room in the Wadleigh Grammar School sang several songs under the direction of Mr. Brown, Supervisor of Music. Their singing was without accompaniment and well worth commendation.

BASE BALL.

Stoneham 5 Winchester 4.

Winchester lost the return game to Stoneham in that town on Wednesday afternoon 5-4. The field was unfit for good ball on account of the hard rain of the morning and this fact must account for the many errors which were made by both sides. Winchester certainly did not get the benefit of the doubt (?) of any of the umpire's decision, and if it were not for a bad decision in the eighth, the score would not have been tied. Stoneham scored all it's runs on clean hitting and certainly should have won having hits to Winchester's. In the innings Winchester scored four runs on one hit and a rather punk exhibition of fielding by their opponents.

The score was tied in the ninth and Goddin was removed and Tuck sent to the box. Not having sufficiently warmed up, he was rather wild and a combination of a hit, base on balls, wild pitch and outfield fly scored the winning run.

The score by innings is as follows:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Stoneham H. S.	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	3	1—5

Winchester, Mass., May 23, 1910.

One of our correspondents suggests an elevated track for the steam cars through the town. Well, why not? It seems that we never shall agree upon a system of bridges carrying the highways over the tracks, either at the present station, or at the center, or both. Such structures, diverting the travel from present lines, would be voted a nuisance from the start, both because of their unsightliness and also of their inconvenience to the general public.

What good reasons can be given against building an elevated structure, beginning at a suitable distance below Wedgemere, filling in perhaps, to some place opposite Manchester Field, and thence continuing, by a steel trestle bridge towards the north, and gradually coming to earth again on the Woburn branch, near Cutter Village, and on the Lowell line, reaching the present level somewhere between Winchester and Winchester Highlands?

Such a bridge is not unsightly. Scores of them may be seen spanning the Hudson, the Connecticut, and the Mississippi, carrying heavy trains, filled with passengers or freight, safely across.

Should such a bridge be built, all grade crossings in the town would be abolished at once. There would be no need of subways, no inconvenient overhead bridges for foot passengers, no gates at the center, no dust from passing trains to offend the nostrils, or to soil the clothing of waiting travellers. Winchester Square, through the skilful efforts of our Winchester Improvemnet Society, could be made "a thing of beauty, and a joy forever."

The steam trains, elevated some eighteen or twenty feet at the center of the town would cause less noise than at present, and they would subject our citizens and their children to no danger at all.

Our present station would be rebuilt and raised one story so that entrance to the trains could be made from the second floor. A raised platform at the Wedgemere station would allow free passage to and from trains, as the elevation of tracks at that station would be inconsiderable.

Such a scheme, if feasible, would enable us to avoid lawsuits, which would inevitably cause hard feelings on the part of some; it would leave uninterrupted the present lines of travel, and would not interfere to any appreciable extent, with the business interests of the town.

Will some competent engineer tell us through your columns why an elevated steel trestle bridge is an impossibility?

R. C. Metcalf.

MILK WAGON UPSET.

Last Friday morning a wagon owned by D. Whiting and Sons Co., milk dealers tipped over on Westley street, and broke about 50 bottles of milk and a large number of empty bottles.

The driver George Parker, had taken some milk into one of the houses and left the horse standing in the street near an embankment as he came out of the house the horse started to go to the next house but the rein having caught in the breeching it pulled his head to one side, and, following the tug he pulled the wagon over the embankment.

The wagon was considerably damaged.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Charley's Aunt," which Mr Craig is to produce at the Castle Square next week, is a play of wonderful fun. It is around the part of Lord Fancourt Babberly that the plot of "Charley's Aunt" revolves, and who is better fitted than Donald Meek for that role? In it he will repeat the success he made as Aunt Abby in "The County Fair" a few weeks ago. Mary Young will play the heroine, and the cast will include, as usual, the John Craig Stock Company.

The play at the Castle Square during the week of June 6th will be William Gillette's famous war drama, "Held by the Enemy," Howell Hansel having been especially engaged by Mr. Craig for the role of Colonel Prescott. John Craig and W. P. Carleton will also appear in leading roles. The final play of Mr. Craigs' season will be "Mrs. Temple's Telegram."

On Monday evening, June 20th, begins the summer opera season at the Castle Square, opening with that Gilbert and Sullivan masterpiece, "The Mikado."

MRS. THOMAS MORRIS.

Mrs. Sarah Francis Morris, wife of Mr. Thomas Morris, passed away at her home on Mystic avenue on Saturday of cancer of the liver. She was 68 years of age.

Mrs. Morris was born in Prince Edwards Island, and had made her home in this town with her husband for about 22 years. She leaves besides her husband two sisters in Winchester, Miss Eliza and Miss Annie Dodd, and one sister living in Prince Edward Island. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The funeral services were held at the residence, No. 18 Mystic avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. John R. Chaffee, pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. S. Winchester Adriance, and Rev. John Mansfield a former pastor. During the services several selections were sung by Miss Jean MacLellan. The floral offerings were very beautiful and most profuse, testifying to the esteem in which the deceased was held by many friends. The burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why not elect Professor Currier moderator and see what he will do about it?

How did it happen that the last Board of Selectmen did not know it had contracted large bills for town hall account that had not been paid? They did business in a queer way.

One of our present Selectmen thinks the town should be just as careful of expenditures when it pays ten per cent as when it pays the whole. I wonder if any city or town in the Commonwealth does so? We have already paid about $20,000 as our share of the Commonwealth's payments in abolishing grade crossings elsewhere.

While the appropriation for July 4th celebration is not quite large enough, if it is handled intelligently it should provide good entertainment for all. I trust the whole program will be carried out upon Manchester Field, as the hall shows on that day are unsatisfactory; but be sure and provide Punch and Judy or other features for the children and see that the ball matches are good ones. Last year the Selectmen put the money received for the field privileges July 4th into Miscellaneous Receipts account, which was never done before and should not be again. It should go towards the celebration.

By chapter 96 of the Acts of 1833 a charter was granted by the Massachusetts legislature to the North American Steam Coach Co., to do a transportation business over the common roads or other roads. Apparently the promotors were about seventy five years ahead of the time. It is just possible however that the steam railroads which had been chartered three years before may have frozen them out of the field.

By chapter 329 Acts of 1867 the Pneumatic Dispatch Co. was chartered with locations for its tubes, in which cars were to run, in the counties of Suffolk, Norfolk, Middlesex and Essex.

Citizens who wish to prevent the town from being put into an embarassing and absurd position should write to the Attorney General at once protesting against the dismissal of the petition for the abolition of the grade crossing. Such action has never been taken before and the ill-considered action of a town meeting of less than two hundred out of a registration of over fifteen hundred, certainly should not be taken as the judgment of the town on that most important question. The case should be pending for the present as many other such cases are.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

The special preacher at the service next Sunday morning will be the Rev. Murray W. Dewart, Rector of St. James's Church, Roxbury.

The Rev. Geo. E. Norton will preach his first sermon in this parish next Sunday afternoon at 5. Mr. Norton was ordained May 16, and is appointed curate at St. George's, New York, where he goes July 1st. He has served this parish faithfully and well for three years as lay reader and assistant superintendent and teacher in the Sunday school, and we shall greatly miss him.

The usual Union Service of the Sunday before Memorial Day will be held this year in the Baptist Church next Sunday evening at 7.

SECOND CONG. CHURCH NOTES.

Eight of the ladies of the church attended the Woman's Missionary Convention held in Ballardvale last Thursday. One of the most interesting and instructive papers presented was that dealing with the importance of Missionary Work among the children by Miss Evelyn Parker. All unite in reporting very helpful sessions.

On the evening of May 20th a sociable was held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Rice. Seventy four persons were present. A short program was rendered in which the Maple Forest Club, Miss Daisy McLellan Mrs. Marion Taylor, Miss Florence Plummer and Alberta Seagrave had a part. The evening was enjoyed by all, and especially by the Missionary Committee of the Christian Endeavor which now has the necessary funds with which to purchase a good Missionary Library for the church.

Fresh inspiration was given to the Christian Endeavorers last Sunday evening by the helpful address of Conductor Folkins, and the special music provided by Mr. Yarnold and Miss Folkins.

The monthly business meeting and sociable of the Christian Endeavor will be held in the church to-night.

The Sunday evening meetings beginning with the first Sunday in June will be held at 7 p. m.

Some matters of interest are to come before the Sunday school Teacher's Meeting on Saturday night. It is therefore important that all interested persons be present at the church at 8 o'clock.

The Sunday evening meeting gives promise of special interest as Mr. Haas, a Medical Missionary of Turkey will speak on matters pertaining to his work and ours. Come out and hear him.

MARTIN CAUGHT IN BOSTON.

Alonzo Martin, the twenty year old youth of Woburn who escaped from a Probation officer on the afternoon of May 10th, by jumping through the toilet room window of a fast moving train near the Wedgemere station, was captured Monday evening in Boston, through a joke planned by him to fool the police.

Martin, who has been in Boston since his escape, has been in the habit of calling up the police headquarters and telling them that if they wanted to find Alonzo Martin who escaped from the Woburn police, they could go to such and such a place, where he was staying. Martin always refused to give his name. The police had been fooled a few times and so when he called up Monday evening, Capt O'Driscoll kept him interested while Patrolman Fred Colby investigated and found that the call was coming from a drug store at the corner of Hanover and Salem streets. Lieut. [illegible] of the Hanover street station was asked to send out for the informer and he assigned Special officers O'Donnell and Donovan to the case. They went to the drug store and caught the young man just as he was about to leave the telephone booth. He was taken to the station and examined and admitted that he was Martin and had been telephoning to police headquarters nightly.

Martin was confined in the police station and was taken to Concord reformatory Tuesday afternoon by Mr. Walsh.

WINCHESTER MAN INTERESTED IN CAMBRIDGE THEATRE.

Cambridge is soon to have a first class theatre and its construction, which has already started, will mean a big boom to nearby property. It is to be located on the Campbell property, Central Square. The theatre is estimated to cost between $125,000 and $150,000, and it will be up to date in every detail and fireproof throughout. Its seating capacity will be 1,000 and its equipment and furnishings will be equal to those of any theatre in Boston.

The foundations are already in, as H. Douglas Campbell, of this town who bought the site some time ago, and from whom Mr. Flaherty takes lease, had started the construction of a moving picture house. This was to be the initiatory move of a $2,000,000 syndicate that was to come into the field, starting in Cambridge, but Mr. Flaherty's negotiations culminated successfully before the plans of Mr. Campbell were completed. Mr. Sidney E. Hooper of this town is a member of the firm of Hooper-Waters Co., who are the contractors for the building.

THE WOOLEN SCHEDULE

How a Reduction Would Affect Wage Earners Here

VIEWS OF A WOOLEN EXPERT

Winthrop L. Marvin Discusses the Question Freely—Would Strike Blow at Prosperity of the Commonwealth

It seems to be the general opinion that the tariff will be an important issue in the congressional elections this fall. The state commission to investigate the increase in the cost of living, composed both of Republicans and Democrats, has reported unanimously that the tariff is not responsible for present high prices, but nevertheless it looks as if there would be an attempt to make the people of Massachusetts believe that this is not so, for leading Democrats say that they propose to discuss the tariff in every corner of the commonwealth.

There has been a good deal of criticism of the woolen schedule in the Payne tariff act. It has come to a large extent from the West, where the people are like some persons in New England, and desire protection on the things they have to sell, but free trade in what they are compelled to purchase.

Mr. Winthrop L. Marvin of Boston, secretary of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers, and for several years editor of the Boston Journal, has given this paper an interview which clears up many misunderstandings in regard to the woolen schedule. In it he states:

An Attack on Massachusetts

"It is well to remember that an attack on schedule K, the wool and woolen schedule of the tariff, is distinctively an attack upon the prosperity of Massachusetts, for this state is the chief centre of wool manufacturing in America. Nearly one-third of all the woolen cloths and dress goods made in the entire country are made in Massachusetts mills by Massachusetts wage-earners. Pennsylvania, the next state, is far below us in the value of its woolen product, and Massachusetts has three times as much at stake in this important textile manufacture as the great state of New York.

"If the foreign and domestic enemies of schedule K were to succeed in their onslaught upon the protective tariff, Massachusetts would suffer a more terrible loss than all the rest of the country combined, because our mills are largely engaged in the higher forms of manufacture where the protection which the tariff gives to American capital and labor is most indispensable. A quarter of a million of our people are dependent in a greater or less degree on the welfare of this industry. Yet, so bigoted and blind a thing sometimes is political partisanship that a great many of our politicians and a considerable part of our newspapers are recklessly joining in the outcry of hostile interests against the protection that gives Massachusetts this business and our wage-earners their livelihood.

No Duties Were Increased

"The impression which the public press, or a part of it, has been promoting, that the new Aldrich-Payne tariff increased the duties on woolen goods and thereby caused an increase in the prices of such fabrics, is unqualifiedly false. The manufacturers did not ask for a single increase of duty, and none was made. The only changes from the Dingley law are reductions of duty on tops, yarns and dress goods. Last year, while the new tariff was being framed in congress, advances were made in prices of certain kinds of cloth and dress goods; but the reason for these was not any increased rate of duty, but a considerable advance in the cost of the wool out of which the fabrics were manufactured.

"Thus, staple fine to fine medium territorial wool, which had sold in October, 1908, for 60 cents a pound, scoured, had advanced in October, 1909, to 75 to 78 cents a pound. There had been no increase in the wool duty, that had remained exactly the same. But the country had recovered from the financial panic of 1907-1908, there was a general resumption of confidence, a quickening of industrial activity. The price of wool advanced, not because of a higher tariff, for there had been no higher tariff, but in response to the ancient and inexorable law of demand and supply. There was a demand for wool, because with the restoration of confidence and a return of prosperity there was a demand for clothing from the people. Moreover, there had come a considerable advance in the wages of the operatives. These are the things that compelled an increase in the price, because they had compelled an increase in the actual cost of making, of some fabrics, as much as 5, 10 or 15 percent. But now in the face of disturbed political conditions, wool is again falling. Staple fine and fine medium territory wool is quoted now at 60 to 62 cents a scoured pound, and many fabrics have been reduced in price. Some manufacturers announce that they are selling goods at a figure as low as any since the panic of 1907-1908.

Foreigners Want Our Market

"The American people buy and wear more woolen clothing than any other people, and the United States is the greatest wool-consuming country in the world. It is the keen hunger of European manufacturers and importers for the vast American market that is the chief motive behind the constant assault upon schedule K. The schedule is denounced as excessive, as extortionate, as "prohibitive." But a great part of the apparently high protection on woolen goods is really only the duty required to compensate American manufacturers for the duty on their wool. Our imports of European fabrics are already large, and are steadily increasing under the new tariff. These imports amounted to $19,178,024 in the first nine months of this new law, as compared with $13,706,776 in the corresponding nine months of the previous year. The goods that are so heavily imported come into direct competition, most of them, with the goods produced in the mills of Massachusetts, and any severe reduction of the protective duty on these goods would bring disaster to a great Massachusetts industry. It would mean lower wages, or perhaps no wages, idleness and want, to thousands of the working people of our commonwealth."

BASHFUL STANLEY.

His Response to a Speech of Eulogy at a Banquet.

William H. Rideing tells in McClure's Magazine of a dinner of the Papyrus club in Boston at which Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, was the guest of honor:

"Whether he (Stanley) sat or stood, he fidgeted and answered in monosyllables—not because he was unamiable or unappreciative, but because he—this man of iron, God's instrument, whose word in the field brooked no contradiction or evasion, he who defied obstacles and danger and pierced the heart of darkness—was bashful even in the company of fellow craftsmen.

"His embarrassment grew when after dinner the chairman eulogized him to the audience. He squirmed and averted his face as cheer after cheer confirmed the speaker's rhetorical ebullience of praise. 'Gentlemen, I introduce to you Mr. Stanley, who,' etc. The hero stood up slowly, painfully, reluctantly, and, with a gesture of deprecation, fumbled in first one and then another of his pockets without finding what he sought.

"It was supposed that he was looking for his notes, and more applause took the edge off the delay. His mouth twitched without speech for another awkward minute before, with a more erect bearing, he produced the object of his search and put it on his head. It was not paper, but a rag of a cap, and with that on he faced the company as one who by the act had done all that could be expected of him and made further acknowledgment of the honors he had received superfluous. It was a cap that Livingstone had worn and that Livingstone had given him."

ISLAND COMES AND GOES.

Rises In August and Disappears Regularly In February.

One of Michigan's unsolved mysteries is the island that every summer comes to the surface of Lake Orion and every winter goes back again to the depths from whence it arose.

Its periods of appearance and disappearance are nearly regular. It comes to the surface about the middle of August and goes down again about Feb. 15. What causes it to act thus strangely is a conundrum that none has been able to solve, but to keep it above water or compel it to remain in the depths have been alike without results.

On one occasion a number of farmers and teamsters resolved to put the island out of moving business. In their efforts to do so they hauled many loads of stone and deposited them on it during the early part of winter, believing that when it went down in February it would go down for good, weighted as it was with the stones. But the following August saw it bob up serenely from below—minus its load of stones.

At another time an effort was made to keep it on the surface, and it was chained to the surrounding country with heavy log chains. When its time for departure came it departed, and the log chains departed with it. The log chains were never recovered.

The island is composed of soft mud and rushes, and there are some skeptical souls who attribute its formation and appearance and disappearance to the gathering of vegetation in one spot by the currents of the lake and its subsequent decay.—Boston Herald.

"Window Leaves."

In South Africa Dr. R. Marloth discovered six species of plants possessing what are styled "window leaves." They are all stemless succulents, and the egg shaped leaves are imbedded in the ground, only the apexes remaining visible. This visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface and colorless, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. With the exception of the blunt apex, no part of the leaf is permeable to the light, being surrounded by the soil in which it is buried. The first of these plants discovered is a species of bulbine.—London Graphic.

A bond of union is soon formed between brethren in misfortune.—Le Sagi.

THE EARLY STAGE.

Boys In Female Parts and the First English Actress.

Not long since a critic, noticing the advent of a new Ophelia in London, observed that, while the actress acquitted herself very well, she could hardly be considered "Shakespeare's Ophelia," which was undoubtedly the case, inasmuch as Shakespeare's Ophelia was a boy, either a chorister or a page in the service of one of the latter's patrons.

No English actress made her appearance before the restoration. On Jan. 3 Pepys records, "To the theater, where was acted the 'Beggar's Bush,' it being very well done, and here the first time that ever I saw women come upon the stage."

But these, it is suspected, were mere "walking ladies." A few days later the diarist went to see a performance of "The Silent Woman." "Among other things here Kynaston, the boy, had the good turn to appear in three shapes—first as a poor woman in ordinary clothes to please Morose, then in fine clothes as a gallant and in them was clearly the prettiest woman in the whole house." He had a year before declared that "Kynaston as Olympia made the loveliest lady that I ever saw in my life."

The distinction of being the first English actress has been variously ascribed to Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. Knipp and Mrs. Davies. They all appeared the same year (1661). Mrs. Davies, together with the principal actresses in Sir William Davenant's company, being boarded in the manager's "own house."—London Strand Magazine.

A DOE'S STRATAGEM.

Threw the Dogs Off the Scent and Saved Her Fawn.

The following anecdote is related by M. X. Raspail. It is worthy of comparison with the most remarkable of instances of the same kind:

The author one day perceived a doe in full flight before two dogs in the Aigle woods that form a part of the forest of Chantilly. The doe was accompanied by a very young fawn, which appeared quite exhausted and ready to drop. The mother, doubtless well aware of this, slackened her pace and presently stopped close to some thick bramble bushes. She remained some time there with lowered head as if awaiting the onset of her pursuers.

Suddenly an idea seemed to strike her, and with a butt of the head she tossed her fawn right into the middle of the thicket. Then, first advancing gently as if to make sure it was well hidden, she soon set off by rapid bounds in front of the dogs. The latter barking close upon her heels, she made a sudden bend and thus drew them far from the spot where this incident occurred. The howling of the dogs became fainter and fainter, the valiant animal having doubtless led them two kilometers away into the Canardiere peat bogs, where the dogs often lose the scent.

In fact, later they were seen returning to the village in an exhausted condition, while the intelligent mother doubtless returned to the bushes to find the little fawn she had so cleverly hidden and placed in safety.—Vulgarisation Scientifique.

When Matches Were Introduced.

The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan. 10, 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light:" "Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker, chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with prepared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, or does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spoiling the match. But when one is pinched between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood."

The Parthenon.

The destruction of that famous building the Parthenon took place in 1687 during the siege of Athens by the Venetians. The Turks held the city, and the Parthenon was used for a powder magazine. One day during the conflict a Venetian bombshell dropped into the building, and the explosion followed which badly shattered the structure. From that date the renowned building has stood roofless and exposed to all the inclemencies of the weather. For more than 2,000 years the temple stood entire, and in its ruins is the architectural wonder of the world.—New York American.

Peculiar Taxation In Holland.

Some of the most peculiar of taxations recorded are to be found in the archives of Holland. In 1791, for instance, there was in existence a tax imposed on all passengers traveling in Holland. In 1874 a duty of 2 shillings was levied on each person who entered a tavern before noon, on those who entered a place of entertainment, on marriages and deaths and on many other things. If a person was buried out of the district to which he belonged the tax was payable twice over.

The Usual Way.

"Do you keep servants?"

"No. We are like all other housekeepers in that respect. We hire servants, but do not succeed in keeping them."—Houston Post.

MARRYING IN FRANCE

Official Obstacles That Bar the Way to the Ceremony.

THE WORRIES OF A FIANCE.

He Has to Brave the Insolence and the Indifference of the Civil Officers In His Efforts to Accomplish the Necessary Preliminary Formalities.

Marrying in France is not an easy matter. On the contrary, the civil officers seem to employ ingenuity in putting as many obstacles as possible in the way of those who contemplate matrimony.

Take the case of a French citizen who until recently resided in the Eighth arrondissement of Paris, but who removed to the Ninth and then began to accomplish the formalities necessary for his marriage.

Smiling and happy, as a man about to wed should be, he presented himself at the mairie of the Ninth ward with the following documents, which he had previously obtained at the mairie of the Eighth arrondissement: His birth certificate, his discharge from the army, the death certificate of his parents and the certificate of his first marriage, for he had been married once already.

On a Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock he called upon the functionary whose business it is to attend to matters affecting the "etat civil." Eying the visitor coldly, the functionary asked:

"What do you want?"

"To get married," replied the other, smiling.

"It's closed."

"Beg pardon?"

"I said it was closed—for marriages. Come back on Monday or Thursday."

"Why Monday or Thursday instead of Tuesday or Friday? What reason?"

"How should I know? And do you think I care? It's like that; that's all I know."

On the Monday the fiance returned. He had recovered his good humor and his smile, and the first document he handed to the employee at the mairie was his birth certificate, which had cost him originally 2 francs.

"What's that?" exclaimed the functionary, with an air of surprise. "It's too old."

"What do you mean, too old?"

"I mean what I say. Your certificate was made out eight years ago, and it has been used already. I don't want that. I must have one that is not older than three months."

"But my birthday does not change, and it is clearly indicated on this document, which is official. Why do you want one that is not more than three months old?"

"Why? You are too inquisitive."

The fiance was still smiling, but in a rather faint hearted fashion.

"Where is your military memorandum book?" asked the employee.

"I haven't got one."

"What! You haven't got one? And you come here and expect to get married without a 'livret militaire?' No; you're joking. You can't be serious."

"Yes, I am. I'm an officer on the reserve list."

"Show me your mobilization order."

"That's a secret order which I have not the right to show you. The army regulations are opposed to it. Here is my discharge. That is all I can show you."

"All right; we'll see."

Then the fiance interpolated:

"Why must you have a military document?"

"To show that you are really a Frenchman."

"Isn't my birth certificate sufficient?"

"I have no time for discussion. Where is the document showing that your first union was dissolved?"

"Voici!"

"That's not what I want. I must have a copy of the act of transcription."

"The document I've just given you cost me 2 francs at the mairie at Neuilly. Where must I apply for the other? At Neuilly?"

"No. Go to the registrar of the tribunal of the Seine."

The fiance made for the door, ran downstairs and jumped into a taximotor. In a few minutes he was at the registrar's office.

"Monsieur," replied the assistant registrar, "the registers from Neuilly have not come back yet. But you'll be sure to find them there, and they'll be able to give you all the information you want."

Another taximotor cab, and ten minutes later the distracted fiance was at the mairie of Neuilly.

"Yes; I understand," replied the official after the visitor had explained the object of his call. "But we can't give you what you want under forty-eight hours."

"I suppose I must wait," said the fiance.

Two days later, armed with a complete dossier, he returned to the mairie of the Eighth arrondissement. His smile had come back; he felt that victory was nigh.

"At last!" he exclaimed triumphantly as the functionary came forward. "I've got them all now."

"Quite right," replied the other after a glance at the various documents. "But did I understand you to say you wanted to be married on the 15th?"

"Yes, that's the date."

"In that case I'm very sorry, monsieur, but that does not leave us the legal time in which to publish the banns. You will have to postpone the date of the ceremony."

Then the fiance's smile "came off" for good, and I doubt whether he will recover it before the wedding day.—Paris Letter in London Post.

Home Course In Domestic Science

XVII.—Suggestions on Home Nursing.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

To have good health is the birthright of every individual. Sometimes this gift has been denied and there is an inherited tendency to disease. But even when this is the case good health may still be attained and, having been attained, may be kept if the path of wisdom is followed. To be free from disease, to be a normal individual, lies more often within our own power than many people suppose. A simple prescription which will help the person who already has good health to retain it and will also do much in gaining it for the individual not so blessed, if it is faithfully followed, is this:

Nourishing food in right amount.

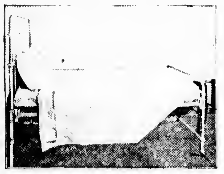
Sufficient fresh air and exercise.

A fair share of work and a fair amount of recreation.

Eight hours' sleep out of each twenty four.

A cheerful mind free from worry.

A few moments' thought will show the intelligent person that each one of these rules is essential to good health, and not one of them can be safely omitted if it is to be retained. However, in spite of wisdom and care or possibly because of a lapse and neglect of one or more of the above rules, sickness does come into the home. It is the result of some transgression of nature's laws and brings its attending anxiety and care. What to do when some member of the family is ill is often a puzzling question. It is not always possible or necessary to have a professional nurse, and yet it is necessary that the patient should have good care in order that there may be a speedy and thorough recovery.



IN THE SICKROOM

Perhaps it were well if the first direction given in times of sickness should be, "Use common sense and practice rational methods," and yet sometimes there is so little real understanding of the body that one's interpretation of rational methods and common sense is far from right. It is not the intention in this article to give technical instruction in nursing in any sense. Merely an attempt will be made to point out some of the little things which should be done and observed in any house where there is sickness. These little things, trifles though they may seem, may be the very points which hasten or retard the patient's recovery.

Arrangement of the Sickroom.

Unless the illness be of an infectious nature, so that the patient must be isolated from the rest of the family, his own room will be most satisfactory to him. But when a choice of rooms can be made select one that is cheerful and with as little unnecessary furnishing as possible. Restful for the patient will it be if the wall paper is quiet in design and color. Such should be the decoration of a bedroom at any time, but it is doubly necessary in time of sickness. Conspicuous wall paper and bright colors are exceedingly irritating to weak nerves. A room without a carpet is best, in health as well as sickness, but in ordinary attacks of illness it is wiser not to disturb the ordinary appearance of the room, as it might have a depressing effect on the patient. But during fevers and severe surgical cases there should be no carpet or draperies to hold and breed disease germs.

Making the Patient's Bed.

About the first thing to be considered is the bed. It should have a good, firm mattress, not too soft, with a blanket or pad under the lower sheet. The bedding should be light and warm, first the cotton sheets, then a blanket or two, as the case may require and over this another sheet or dimity spread. The ordinary white counterpane does not add materially to the warmth and is too heavy for comfort. The pillows should be ample in number and varying in size. There should be small ones to tuck under the shoulders, between the knees or for a rest to the back when the patient becomes weary of his position. There should be one or two larger ones to serve as supports when the patient sits up during convalescence. To make the patient's bed properly three sheets are required, besides the blankets, pillows and spread; also in case of severe illness a piece of rubber sheeting three-quarters of a yard wide will be needed under the draw sheet. It requires considerable skill to arrange a bed for a sick person so that it will be thoroughly comfortable and free from wrinkles. Begin operations by drawing the under sheet very smoothly over the pad and tucking it in well under the mattress. Pin it at each corner with a strong safety pin if the patient is heavy or inclined to be restless. Over the under sheet and across the middle of the bed lay the draw sheet, which may be a full sized sheet, folded in half, or a smaller one covering about three-quarters of a yard, in the center. If a rubber is used it should be put on under the draw sheet, firmly pinned to the mattress on both sides. The latter is particularly useful, because it keeps the under sheet clean for a longer time and may be changed without disturbing the patient to any extent.

In putting on the upper sheet leave a good margin turned over at top to cover the blanket. Tuck both sheet and blanket in well at the foot so the patient may turn comfortably without disarranging the covers. Pillows should be fitted snugly into cases large enough for them or they will be uncomfortable. Three points to observe about the sickbed are perfect cleanliness, no crumbs and no wrinkles.

Care of the Room.

It is hardly necessary to say that the sickroom should be kept absolutely clean, and yet it is not unusual to find decided signs of disorder about it. Soiled towels and linen are seen, empty cups and dirty dishes are often left on the table for hours after they have been used, and there is a general air of disorderliness that is not only against all rules of sanitation, but annoying to the patient as well. Anything used about the patient, clothing, bedding and dishes, should be removed from the room at once and disinfected if there is the slightest infection about the disease. This is imperative for the health of other members of the family. Even when there is no infection common decency demands this attention to the patient.

The air of the sickroom should be kept pure at all times. It is almost always possible to have the window lowered at the top and raised a little at the bottom to allow the escape of impure and the entrance of pure air. If the bed is so near the window that there is danger of a direct draft on the patient, place a screen in front of it or, better still, open the window and fit a frame two or three inches wide and covered with coarse flannel into the space. This will permit the fresh air to enter and will also absorb any moisture.

Do not forget the importance of sunlight in the sickroom. Not only is it cheering to the patient, but sunlight and fresh air are two great germ destroyers. After the room has been dusted by having the floor and all the woodwork wiped with a damp cloth the patient should be covered with an extra blanket and the windows and doors opened to admit a free circulation of air for a few minutes. An open grate fire is also an excellent method of keeping the air pure.

Giving a Sponge Bath In Bed.

Before giving the bath all arrangements should be made for it and everything needed in the process should be near at hand. The room should be warm, and during the bath it will be well to keep the windows closed. If the patient is weak or likely to take cold have a hot water bag filled ready to apply to the feet.

The necessary articles for the bath will include a basin of hot water, a pitcher containing hot water, two wash cloths, a bath towel and one or two soft towels for hands and face, some good soap and a bottle of alcohol. When quite ready remove the patient's nightgown and wrap him in blankets. This is done without removing the bedding, which the blanket is intended to protect. The face is bathed first, then the neck, arms, chest and abdomen. Each part is to be wiped thoroughly and rubbed briskly as it is washed. Be careful not to allow any water to dry without wiping, as this may cause a chill. Turn the patient on one side to bathe the back and finish with the legs and feet. Do not uncover the body more than is necessary to wash each part and in drying and rubbing arms and legs always use an upward stroke. Change the water two or three times during the bath. After the bath rub the body with alcohol, clean the nails and brush the hair. Do not neglect the patient's teeth. These should be brushed at least twice a day, particularly at night. The patient will do this for himself if able to sit up. If not it must be done for him, as in sickness the teeth are much more liable to decay than in health.

Changing the Sheets.

When the patient is strong enough the sheets on the bed may be changed after the bath. This can be easily managed after a little practice. The fresh sheets should be well aired and warmed. The under one is changed first. Turn the patient on one side away from you and roll the soiled sheet tightly close to the patient. Lay the clean sheet on the side of the bed near you and tuck it in at the side. The other side of the sheet is folded closely beside the soiled one at the patient's back. Go around to the other side of the bed, turn the patient back on the opposite side and gently pull out the soiled sheet from underneath. Then draw out the folds of the clean one and tuck it in well at the side and end. Pull the sheet firmly until it is straight and make sure there are no wrinkles under the patient to cause bed sores. To change the upper sheet loosen all the bedding, put the clean sheet and blanket on top and then with one hand hold the clean sheet and blanket and with the other slip down the soiled clothing underneath. Draw it out at the foot, then tuck in the fresh bedding.

AN EXCITING RIDE.

Galloping Over a Rough Mountain Road In the Andes.

In going over one of the mountain roads on the way to the coast of the Andes the traveler has need of steady nerves. A passage in "The Andean Land," by C. S. Osborn, describes the journey.

The road is narrow and rocky and rutty and steep, with no walls to speak of except tumbledown ones that increase the danger by their false suggestion of safety, and in one place the wagon would fall 2,000 feet if it should roll off the edge of the mountain.

The road has no graceful sweeps or round, easy curves as it takes its way up the titanic heights, but rather it zigzags like the teeth of a saw, ascending in short stretches and doubling back at sharply acute angles, leaving very little room for a team and wagon to turn in when driven slowly and carefully and two abreast.

Now, imagine, if you can, the horses driven madly in a gallop, no trot that would be slow, but in quick, short, jerky jumps, such as the mustang-like animals would make under the saddle when pressed.

The short, high coach follows the cavorting horses, jerking, careening and springing like a small boat sailing in a wildly choppy sea. You perceive that the wheels are strong and the springs, too, and the whole rig evidently intended for chariot racing.

The driver groans, yells, whistles shrilly, cracks his thick rawhide whip, lashes his horses and does everything he knows that will inspire fear and induce speed. All this you become accustomed to in a measure on your dash up the narrow road dug into and blown out of the giant ribs of the towering mountains.

AN INSPIRING TRIBUTE.

Touching Scene That Occurred In the House of Representatives.

From a volume by Hon. A. E. Stevenson, "Something of Men I Have Known," is taken this account of an incident which deserves a place in memory.

A touching scene occurred in the house of representatives a number of years ago when an aged member from New Jersey arose and for the first time addressed the speaker. All eyes were turned in his direction as he stood calmly awaiting recognition. He was tall, spare and erect. His venerable appearance and kindly expression, coupled with most courteous manners, at once commanded attention. As in husky tones he again said "Mr. Speaker!" there came from the farthest end of the great hall in a whisper, but distinctly heard by all, the words, "Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt." A moment later and from the floor and gallery many voices blended in the familiar refrain, "Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?"

The ovation which immediately followed was such as is rarely witnessed in the great hall. Business was suspended for the moment and the hand of the new member warmly grasped by the chosen representatives of all parties and sections. It was an inspiring tribute, one worthily bestowed. The member was Thomas Dunn English, author of the little poem, sung in palace and cottage, which has found its way into all languages and touched all hearts.

The Man Behind the Gun.

The late Admiral Erben had the good fortune or the merit to originate a world circling phrase, "the man behind the gun." He used it in a speech on the factors of success in naval warfare to emphasize the necessity of having efficiency, preparedness, run through the entire personnel. It was also a reminder that the enlisted men have a good deal more to do with bringing about victory than always appears in history or official reports. The expression was employed in supplementing the views of Captain Mahan and attained circulation at once as epitomizing a whole library of instruction.—Boston Transcript.

The Waters Under the Earth.

Below a depth of six miles under the surface of the earth's crust it is believed that no water can exist in the rock formations, because the tremendous pressure probably closes all pores. But above that level the quantity of underground water is estimated to be equal to one-third of all the water contained in the oceans. If poured over the land surface of the globe the underground water would, it is averred, be sufficient to cover it to a uniform depth of from 3,000 to 3,500 feet.

Rapid Transit

In response to a growing demand at his home a certain youth once went to his father's house, borrowed the family high chair and started to wheel it home by hand. He had to wait long for his car, and when it finally came its conductor was a humorist.

"Aren't you pretty big for the chair?" that official ventured.

"Yes," admitted Webster wearily. "I grew up while waiting for the car."—Success Magazine.

Exclusive.

"My ancestors came over in the Mayflower," said the haughty lady.

"Oh, yes," rejoined Mrs. Cumrox, with interest. "Mine didn't. None of my family ever cared for those big excursions."—Washington Star.

Genius.

"Why is it," asks a writer in Fliegende Blatter, "that when a man discovers that he is a genius he allows his hair to grow long and that when a woman becomes similarly conscious she has her hair cut short?"

The "pure food law" is designed by the Government to protect the public from injurious ingredients in both foods and drugs. It is beneficial both to the public and to the conscientious manufacturer. Ely's Cream Balm, a successful remedy for cold in the head, nasal catarrh, hay fever, etc., containing no injurious drugs, meets fully the requirements of the new law, and that fact is prominently stated on every package. It contains none of the injurious drugs which are required by the law to be mentioned on the label. Hence you can use it safely.

Tiny Work.

Mark Scaliot, a locksmith, in 1578, in the twentieth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, made a lock consisting of eighteen pieces of steel, iron and brass with a hollow key to it, that altogether weighed but one grain of gold. He also made a gold chain composed of forty-three links, which he fastened to the lock and key. In the presence of the queen he put the chain about the neck of a flea, which drew it with ease, after which he put the lock and key, flea and chain into a pair of scales, and they together weighed but one grain and a half. This is vouched for by an old writer.

YOU CAN'T MOVE A LOT OF LAND.

It's there to stay.

Therefore, when buying a lot you want to be sure that it is in just the right location.

It should be in a location where the population is increasing. That will make the lot worth more from year to year.

In case, too, that you should want to sell, location is most important. That is worth considering.

THRIFT TEACHING IN OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Subject Superintendent Herron May Want to Consider for Winchester Schools. It has been Recommended by the Legislature.

"[illegible] suggest [illegible] Herron [illegible] committee [illegible] Win[illegible] month [illegible] season to [illegible] instruction [illegible] 'thrift' into the public schools [illegible] Section 1 of Chapter 42 of the [illegible] Laws, as passed by the general court this session, and signed by Governor Draper, states that 'Civil government, ethics, thrift and such other subjects as the school committee may consider expedient may be taught in the public schools.'"

The specific mention of thrift teaching grew not only out of the general situation in which on account of the high cost of living the necessity of a return to the homely virtues of economy and foresight is imperative for many people, but because of the specific suggestions of the Old Age Pension Commission.

This body, which was appointed to investigate the subject of old age pensions in this and other countries, reported to the legislature that it would be inexpedient at the present time to add to the already heavy burden of general taxation by providing state paid pensions for elderly people. Among several alternative recommendations stress was laid upon the importance of systematic teaching of thrift in the schools. The idea appealed to Governor Draper and leading members of the legislature, with the result that was enacted into legislation.

Ways and means of introducing this subject are already being considered by at least one active organization, the Massachusetts Savings Insurance League, with headquarters at 161 Devonshire street, Boston, whose monthly bulletin says editorially:

"The Insurance Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature has recently reported favorably a bill for the compulsory teaching of thrift in the public schools of the Commonwealth. There is no better way to interest the pupils of our High schools in thrift than by informing them about the advantages of Savings Bank Insurance. As various penny saving schemes have been established in our elementary schools, the next logical step will be the establishment of agencies for Savings Bank Insurance in our High schools. Our public school teachers are willing to co-operate, and the coming year will doubtless see many addresses given on Savings Bank Insurance to the scholars of our High schools; such an address has recently been given in Lexington and one has been arranged for at the Whitman High School."

A public school committee of the Woman's Branch of this organization is energetically taking up the question of thrift teaching and is preparing to send a letter with detailed suggestions to all women's clubs throughout the state. It is understood that a committee of Boston school principals have a similar undertaking in hand, and that elsewhere the problem is under serious consideration.

F. W. Coburn.

PARISH OF THE EPIPHANY.

There will be a special meeting of the Executive Board of the Woman's Guild at the home of the President, Mrs. Anthony Kelley, Monday, June 6th, at eleven o'clock. All women interested in the work of the Guild are invited to attend.

The special preacher next Sunday morning will be the Rev. Chas. E. Jackson, Rector of St. John's, East Boston. The Rev. Mr. Norton will take the afternoon service.

A week from Sunday, June 12, will come the last session of Sunday school. The whole school will assemble in the church at the usual hour, 12.15, for a short service, and for the announcement of promotions and prizes. The Rev. Mr. Mills will be in charge of this service, and of the other services of the day.

The summer arrangement will be given June 19. There will be morning service only, the hour being 10.15 a. m. The Rev. Mr. Mills will be in charge of the summer season, which continues until the third Sunday in September.

IN MEMORIAM.

In the death of Mrs. Almira A. Rowe [illegible] a truly good woman, few [illegible] more, she had lived a [illegible] of [illegible] she came to Winchester a young woman with her parents and soon united with the first Congregational Church and Sabbath school, and had always lived a consistent Christian life, she was a constant attendant at Church and meetings for prayer and conference, and very helpful in the missionary societies connected with the church, and was always willing to do her part. She was never appointed a church visitor but she was ever ready to visit the sick and afflicted wherever found, but in her quiet way, and few know the extent of her ministrations. After an illness of several months in which she was perfectly resigned to the will of the Lord, and fully trusting in his grace, she passed peacefully away. Her faith in her own church was strong and unwavering, but she had charity and a willingness to work in all organizations for the uplifting of humanity. She was one of the original members of the Fortnightly Club, and also helped to organize the Winchester Equal Suffrage League, and continued her membership in both societies until her death, but aside from her church and societies connected with it, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was nearest to her heart. She thought the great organization was composed of some of the best women in the land, and felt that it should be recognized as Christian work, and truly missionary work. In the local Union since its organization thirty four years ago, she had been untiring in her work for the good of the cause; she tried to impress upon all Christian women the responsibility which they should feel in this great work.

If we follow Him whose name we bear we cannot possibly remain indifferent to a cause that is bringing more distress and ruin to souls and bodies than all other vices put together. It was a great grief to Mrs. Rowe that some of the lines of our work we have carried on for years have of necessity been dropped for the want of helpers, most of the elderly members who have been long in the work have passed away or have become too feeble for active work.

It is hoped that some of the new members may feel it a duty to take up the work laid down by the weary ones who have fallen out.

Farewell services were held at the home of her son, Frank E. Rowe, and were well attended by relatives and friends. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. It was well fitting that Rev. D. A. Newton, who had been her pastor for many years, and with whom she had labored in loving service for the Master so long could be present, and his remarks must have been very gratifying to all the friends.

Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were invited to occupy the parlor in which the remains were placed during the exercises. She was then laid to rest in Wildwood Cemetery beside her husband Alonzo E. Rowe who passed on several years ago, and one little son who died in infancy.

"Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

ACCIDENT AT PLAY RESULTS IN DEATH.

A sad acciden, the result of throwing stones while at play, occurred on Wednesday afternoon, causing the death of 16 year old John Hall of Holton street. The boy, in company with a chum, was picking strawberries on the side of Mt. Misery, at the rear of Holton street near his home. Throwing some of the berries in the face of his chum started throwing stones. The Hall boy stepped behind a tree, and as his friend threw a stone stuck his head out just in time to receive it just above the temple.

The wound was painful but did not seem serious. The lad went to his home, where his mother bandaged it, and later he had his supper. During the evening he complained of the extreme pain from the wound and Dr. Allen was summoned, but notwithstanding his efforts the boy passed into unconsciousness and died shortly after midnight. It is supposed that his skull was fractured.

John Hall was in his 17th year, a member of the graduating class of the Wadleigh school and son of John and Hannah Hall. He was one of three children. The funeral services will be held on Sunday afternoon from the residence, conducted by Rev. P. I. Osborne, pastor of the Second Congregational Church. The interment will be in Wildwood cemetery.

BASE BALL.

Winchester 3 Woburn 2

Winchester defeated Woburn, Wednesday afternoon on Manchester Field, by the score of three to two. The game was undoubtedly the best game of the season here and was interesting from start to finish. Grant accepted five chances at second base making five puts out as well, and completed an unassisted double play. Mathews contributed a star catch in center field which cut off sure runs, and Wall's stab of a hot liner in the first was all that kept Winchester from winning right there. Winchester scored in the first on Grant's single Hurd's sacrifice and Flaherty's hit. Woburn evened up in the third on a cheap run and forged ahead in the seventh on a hit, error and sacrifice hit. Winchester won the game in the eighth inning when with two out and Pierce on second through Woburn's only error, LeDuc singled scoring him and took second on the throw in. Flaherty also connected and LeDuc scored the winning run. Goddu held Woburn safe in all other innings, allowing but six scattered hits.

Arlington 6 Winchester 2

Winchester was defeated in a slow, uninteresting game on Spy Pond Field, Arlington, last Saturday by the score of 6-2. Winchester gave a rather poor exhibition of ball playing, five errors and but three hits being the record for the day. Arlington did not consider it necessary to use Hill, their first strong pitcher, and Chaves took the box in his place. Seven passes were what gave Winchester its only chance, but one hit figured in the scoring. Goddu was hit rather freely and after the first inning when Arlington scored three runs on two doubles and a single aided by three errors, the score was never in doubt

WILKINS—FORSAITH.

A pretty home wedding, the first to usher in the month of weddings in this town, took place on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Forsaith on Oxford street. The bride was their daughter, Florence A., and Mr. Ernest H. Wilkins of Somerville was the groom.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and intimate friends of the two families beneath an arch of southern laurel, suspended from the centre of which was a ball of mistletoe, lighted with many small incandescent lights, making a most effective decoration. Rev. Arthur V. Dimock, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dorchester, performed the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in a gown of imported hand embroidered crepe trimmed with real Dutchess lace. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley.

Miss Lillian H. Forsaith, her sister, was maid of honor wearing a dress of corn colored crepe meteor with an over dress of lace with pearl trimmings. She carried a basket of marguerites and maiden hair fern tied with corn colored ribbon.

Mr. Howard W. Wilkins of Somerville, brother of the groom, was best man, and Earl C. Forsaith, brother of the bride, acted as ring bearer. The ushers were Messrs. I. Harold Angell of Roxbury, Horace Hutchins of Somerville, Howard Baker of Norton and Warren Zuck of East Boston.

The residence was handsomely decorated for the occasion with southern laurel, fern and cut flowers. A reception followed the ceremony, the couple being assisted in receiving by their parents, after which they left for a short trip to Poland Springs, Me. They will reside upon their return in their new home, No. 4 Monument terrace, West Medford.

WESTERN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

On Thursday, June 2nd the Ladies' Western Missionary Society of the First Congregational Church observed their 70th anniversary.

A bountiful lunch was served at noon and in the afternoon the following program was given

Miss Anna B. Fuit, field secretary of the Women's Home Missionary Association spoke at some length and very interestingly of the work in the Cotton Valley, Ala., School for the colored. Miss Lucile Thompson played two piano solos, very pleasingly. Miss Frances Hemingway and Mrs. A. G. Collier sang a duet with mandolin accompaniment and Mrs. Collier played a mandolin solo accompanied on the piano by Miss Hemingway.

The name of one new member was announced.

Director

Albert Edmund Brown

This interesting programme was well sung throughout and a most delightful concert was the result. The audience was small, regretably so, but it made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. And the applause was not perfunctory but spontaneous and discriminating showing that the audience fully appreciated all that was done.

Director Brown at all times had his Chorus under control and the beat of his baton was followed with splendid uniformity showing the hard work and careful training that had been gone through by master and pupils. Male voices were in the minority which was unfortunate, for though the boys worked hard to hold their end up they could not at all times do so, the sopranos and altos being almost twice the number of the basses and tenors. But this was a circumstance of minor importance and did not materially interfere with the really fine work of the chorus as a whole. In the more delicate passages of Hadley's "While you Sleep," the shading was soft but clear and in the forte numbers, notably the finale of the Cantata, the excellent timbre of the chorus was made evident.

Mr. Rattigan, the tenor and Mr. Raymond, the bass, both have pleasing voices and were well received. Miss Blair, the soprano, has a wonderfully sympathetic voice of unusual range which she uses with marked ability while her charming personality adds to the pleasing effect of her excellent vocal work. Her singing of Luckstone's Lullaby was particularly sweet and her fine solo work in the Cantata drew forth rounds of applause.

Mr. Brown is to be congratulated on the fine work he has done; such concerts should be given oftener.

WHY SHOULD THEY.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The citizens of Winchester need not think that the New York and New Haven Railroad when they assume full control of the Boston and Maine will show Winchester any more favors than would this latter railroad had it continued in control.

WINCHESTER COUNTRY CLUB.

The Memorial Day events on the links of the Winchester Country Club consisted of a handicap medal play, first sixteen qualifying for the championship plays and mixed foursomes. The rain of the afternoon interfered with the play somewhat, although both tournaments had a large entry.

The medal play was won by F. C. Adams with a net of 70, E. R. Rooney had the best gross with 79.

In the mixed foursomes Miss Pauline Russell and R. S. Dunbar were tied with Mrs. Edgett and Mr. Kinsley for the best gross at 93, the former couple taking the net with 79, one better than the latters' 80.

END OF LONG LEGAL CONTENTION.

The supreme court as reported in the "Banker and Tradesman" has rendered a decision in the Miller case confirming the decisions of the land court that none of the Winchester mill pond land belongs to Miller but that the Whitney title is good. It was contended that a flaw in the title deeds sixty or seventy years ago, lately discovered, destroyed the Whitney title and gave the land to Miller who, under advise of counsel, purchased the title and claimed ownership in the land. All the decisions have been in favor of Whitney from the first but the supreme court has made a final decision which will settle the matter for all time. It will be remembered that the matter was made public by letters being read in town meeting warning the town and railroad against purchasing from Whitney a portion of the land as a site for a new town freight and storage yard as the land in question belonged to Miller, but the supreme court has decided differently.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The Winchesterite must be pointed who would [illegible] not to offend.

"Strive to make a good impression wherever you go," said a gentleman of The Spectator's acquaintance, as he pulled his foot out of the mud.

A Main street gentleman gives The Spectator to understand that it is a great mistake in mothers to take so much pains teaching their children to speak. To use his exact words: "What a world of trouble it takes to make some babies talk and what a world of trouble they make with their everlasting talking after having once learned how to do it."

How differently different people look at things. A Pleasant street gentleman remarks: "An day Sunday I think, Oh dear, six days after this." A neighbor of his says, on the contrary, that all through the week he thinks that Sunday will soon come around and give him rest.

The Spectator doesn't know a dentist in Winchester or vicinity who uses profane language or who ever gets arrested for assault and battery. When he feels particularly ugly, the dentist just holds in till he has a customer, and when he once gets his forceps on that customer's molars, his fiendish rasp is let on at full head. The Spectator often thinks of the amount of venom a man could work off under such circumstances.

A communication reaches The STAR office this week but it is not given the requested publicity. The writer says a certain thing is "impossible to describe," and then uses enough paper to fill two columns in its description. He doubtless means nobody but himself could describe it.

The mamma of a little Winchester youngster had been telling him the story of "Cinderella and the little glass Slipper." He said nothing when she had brought the story to a conclusion, but seemed lost in thought. His mother asked him what he was thinking about. "I was thinking," said he, quite soberly, "I wish you could wear Cinderella's little glass slipper. It was so little it couldn't hurt much, and if you hit hard it would break." As his mamma afterwards told The Spectator, he is a very quiet boy."

One of our Winchester school teachers tells The Spectator the following amusing story concerning herself when she was teaching school in another town. The pupils had got as far as the word "hypocrite." None of the children could explain what it meant. One guessed it meant "big teeing," and another thought a "hypocrite" was a "big animal that wallows in the mud." So the teacher explained "A hypocrite, children is a person who pretends to be what he is not, such a one may be pleasant to your face, but speaks ill behind your back." "Please, marm," cried a little boy eagerly, raising his hand, "then my pa aint no aypocrite, 'cause he said you was a contounded toad, and he'd just as lives tell yer so to yer face.'"

Is't a poor rule that won't work both ways. Winchester has a cow that is afraid of women.

There are some men here in Winchester as elsewhere who are so talkative that nothing but the toothache can make one of them hold his jaw.

A gentleman residing in the Highlands muses that if the taking of the census had been postponed until greenapple time, in many cases the population of Winchester could have been doubled up.

Did you ever see a Winchesterite with big feet who did not claim that his shoes were two sizes too large that he likes them easy, you know?

The Spectator might mention by name a certain well known Winchesterite who talks a great deal of himself and who has a very poor subject for his conversation.

While getting his mail at the post office the other day The Spectator observed a short-tailed dog and patted him on the head. The animal was unable to express his feelings without great exertion.

The Winchesterite who is ever on the lookout for solemnity should possess the scenter of gravity.

A Main street young lady informs The Spectator that she has had many a suitor, but not one to suit her. Sometimes one wishes that one were not married.

It is said that one can hear more acutely when ones mouth is open. Which is probably the reason that a Winchesterite keeps his mouth open when he snores. He is so enamored of his own sweet music.

The big steam engines will be shut down and electric motor power will take their place. This is the biggest contract for electric power service the Edison Company has ever made. It shows that the improvements in generating electricity are steadily making this form of light and power service available, not only for small, but for large consumers as well. It is a distinct advantage to such a big concern to secure this form of service. It eliminates the necessity for investment in expensive power making apparatus and secures to them, without extensive anticipatory investment, the opportunity to increase their use of power at any time their business requires it.

MILK INSPECTION.

A correspondent sends the following, which was taken from the Boston [illegible]:

It has been proposed to attempt to remedy the present milk troubles by the appointment of more inspectors. As a matter of fact, it is because of over inspection, along experimental and impractical lines, that the milk producers cows, not contractors of our own state, are so rapidly diminishing.

We need far less science and far more sense.

Not for years has any matter of general interest been so productive of [illegible] snapshots for armies of so-called "inspectors," over zealous and usually inadequate, as this same milk business; but when these Guardians of the Public Health, as they are diplomatically designated, bid fair to outnumber the cows they claim to "inspect" is it not time we gave some other policy serious consideration.

Give our Massachusetts farmer a fair chance to re-[illegible] his [illegible]. Let down the barriers erected by the "inspectors" whose mission it is to ply the [illegible] [illegible]. Many and grievous are the wrongs done in [illegible] [illegible]. Give the Massachusetts farmer encouragement to produce plenty of fresh, pure, wholesome milk. Resist, with all the power of this great Commonwealth, that [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of which "inspectors," enrolled under the "commercial standard" [illegible], are making conditions so intolerable [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Having neglected [illegible] upon the freshness [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the present [illegible] [illegible] it befriends only the contractor, who [illegible] monopoly, and the "inspector" who must have something to inspect.

In its enforcement, it has been, and will be, one of the most powerful factors in precipitating a milk famine sooner or later, and not until the people of Massachusetts adopt the simple, sensible solution of the milk question by means of restoring the Massachusetts cow and her owner to the rightful place in this Commonwealth, and by supporting more of them and fewer inspectors and chemical laboratories, will the ever decreasing milk questions be answered.

DEMOCRATS FOR FOSS?

Trend Among the Leaders Seems to Be That Way

THE EIGHT-HOUR BILL VETO

Reciprocity as Viewed by the Canadians Themselves—Say They Will Not Take the Initiative—Defeat of the Fines Bill

There seems to be apparent a greater sentiment today among Democrats in favor of nominating Congressman Eugene N. Foss for governor than at any previous time. The conviction seems to be growing in the Democratic party that if the state can be won this fall it must be carried on the tariff issue alone.

The Democratic leaders seem to feel that Mr. Foss embodies in his personality the tariff issue to a greater extent than anybody else in the party and that while ex-Senator James H. Vahey has made a tolerably successful run during the last two years, he cannot compare as a vote-getting candidate with Mr. Foss.

It is this feeling which careful observers believe will result in the nomination of Mr. Foss to lead the campaign in the state next November. It must be admitted that the friends of Mr. Vahey are very much grieved over the trend of events. Some of them insist that the Watertown man must be nominated if the party hopes to be successful in its canvass. They feel that he is being thrust aside to give place to a man in their opinion no stronger and in some respects not as likely to win as Mr. Vahey.

It is quite within the limits of possibility that before the Democratic state convention registers its choice there will be a very stiff fight put up by the Vahey contingent and that there will be some pretty plain speaking as to the actual causes which would seem to impel the Democratic party to discard Mr. Vahey.

Canadians on Reciprocity Issue

The banquet held by the Intercolonial club in Boston last week, brought out some live facts regarding further reciprocity with Canada. The treaty lately negotiated under the Payne-Aldrich bill does not go as far as many would like, but it seems to be a question whether Canada herself desires anything further. The dominion is evidently not in a state of mind over her relations with the United States, and if there is to be any reciprocity beyond what now exists it is apparent that this country will be asked to concede fully as much as she gains by the bargain.

There were three eminent Canadians present at this dinner: Premier J. Douglas Hazen of New Brunswick, former Premier A. B. Warburton of Prince Edward Island, and Hon. Alfred B. Moraine, former minister of finance and attorney general of Newfoundland. They are of sufficient prominence to know the sentiment of the dominion and probably expressed it correctly, when they all said practically the same thing, that is: that Canada had outgrown her swaddling clothes; that the time had passed when the markets of the United States were necessary to her prosperity; that the recently discovered wealth of minerals and water power, and her growing supremacy in the production of food staples, as well as the possession of the last great lumber supply of the world, had given her a feeling of independence, expressed in the determination shown in every province, that a general reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States could only be possibe when the overtures came from the latter, and that Canada will then negotiate such a treaty only upon terms which shall be pleasing to her.

As a matter of fact the United States has already made several such overtures to Canada, but has generally found that the latter was unwilling to concede enough to make the trade a profitable one for us. President Taft is still trying to make a treaty with Canada.

There was a large number of leading Democrats present at that banquet, including Henry M. Whitney of Brookline, former Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown, Mayor J. F. Fitzgerald of Boston, Charles S. Hamlin of Mattapoisett, former Mayor Josiah Quincy of Boston, and Frederick J. McLeod, chairman of the Democratic state committee.

The opinions expressed by the distinguished guests were evidently not at all pleasing to any of these men. Reciprocity as a campaign issue got a pretty severe blow from these Canadians.

Veto of Eight-Hour Bill

The eight-hour bill, applying solely to the employes of the state, cities and towns, which was vetoed by the governor last year, has again been enacted by the legislature and once more vetoed. This measure is an amendment to the already existing eight-hour bill for this class of employes.

The bill is exactly the same as the measure of last year, and many times upon the stump in the campaign of 1909 Governor Draper declared his purpose, if re-elected, of again vetoing such a bill if it came to him. The senate and [illegible] passed the measure, [illegible] responsibility [illegible] willing to put the matter up to the governor, [illegible] that he was pledged to veto it.

In his veto message the governor relies against [illegible] the same objections [illegible] found to it last year. [illegible] providing that at any trial arising under the provisions of the act, evidence that laborers, workmen or mechanics have worked or were working over eight hours on any one calendar day should be prima facie evidence of a violation of the provisions of the act, a [illegible] not to be found in any other law.

He [illegible] a [illegible] of criminal law that a defendant have the benefit of a presumption of innocence until proved guilty, while under this act he would be compelled to prove himself innocent. The veto of this measure undoubtedly means that the governor will have to meet during the coming campaign the same strenuous opposition from the American Federation of Labor he has successfully met during all the years he has been a candidate.

It is doubtful if the labor men themselves have very much hope of being able to defeat him, although it is freely stated that this bill was again put forward for the express purpose of giving the American Federation of Labor an opportunity to make an issue against the governor. As is well known, the Knights of Labor regard the measure as extremely radical and the leaders of the organization last year stoutly defended the attitude of the governor. The fact that the governor was able to carry the state in 1909 against A. F. L. opposition shows very clearly that a very large element among the wage earners and even in the American Federation of Labor do not take the matter as seriously as the labor leaders would like to have them, and that he must have received the votes of a very large number of union men.

Labor Union Fines Defeated

The legislature has defeated the fines bill, through the instrumentality of which the trades unions asked the right to enforce strikes through the imposition of fines upon its members who continued to work after a strike had been declared or returned to work pending a settlement. Strange as it may seem, the senate had already advanced the measure to engrossment and then passed it on to the house. It was a pretty sharp fight in the lower branch and its opponents had a strenuous time in defeating it. A change of seven votes would have passed the measure in the house.

The bill has been before the legislature for a number of years and has been supported by a good many of the labor organizations, although a good many laborers are opposed to its provisions.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

The following letter was to have been read by Miss Elizabeth Gordan, representing the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at the hearing of the Equal Suffrage bill, before the Legislative Committee at the State House last March, but owing to lack of time it was not heard. It is a "passage from a secret circular sent out by the Brewer's and Wholesale Liquor Dealer's Association of Oregon to every retail liquor seller in the state, where the woman's suffrage amendment was pending in 1906.

"It will take 50,000 votes to defeat woman suffrage. There are 2,000 retailers in Oregon.

"That means that every retailer must himself bring in 25 votes election day.

"Every retailer can get 25 votes. Besides his employees he has his grocer, his butcher, his landlord, his laundryman, and every person he does business with. If every man in the business will do this, we will win. We enclose 25 ballot tickets showing how to vote."

"We also enclose a postal card addressed to this Association. If you will personally take 25 friendly voters to the polls on election day and give each one a ticket showing how to vote, please mail the postal card back to us at once. You need not sign the card. Each card has a number, and we will know who sent it in.

"Let us all pull to-gether and let us all work. Let us each get 25 votes.

Yours very respectfully,
Brewer's and Wholesale Liquor
Dealer's Association."

Gentlemen of the Committee, nothing more need be said.

AS ONE WORKING-WOMAN SEES IT.

I am an anti-suffragist because:

First—I have never heard a single argument advanced for the cause of suffrage that seemed to me convincing.

Second—I believe that women in politics would be a sorry sight. I do not say that woman's only sphere is the home. I know better. But it is not in the political arena. Women are not calculated by nature for the duties that the franchise would entail. Neither physically nor temperamentally are they strong enough for the fray.

They are—I am not speaking of exceptions—emotional and hysterical, as witness Mrs. Florence Kelly, one of the leaders of the suffragists, who shook her fist at the opposing women last Wednesday at Albany and called them "shameless women" who hid behind the shelter of their homes and shirked their responsibilities by trying to keep the ballot from other women. "Shame on you, every one," she shouted, flinging her arms in the air as she walked to her seat amid the applause of her fellow-suffragists. And for emotion, do you need any further illustration than the tearful appeal of Miss Lenora O'Reilly to the committee on the same occasion?

Third—I resent the assumption of the suffragists that they represent the working woman and that they are her best friends. They do represent a large element of the working women, but not all; nor are they her best friends. They believe that they are, no doubt; but I believe that they are her worst enemies because they teach her discontent and hold out golden hopes to her that can never be realized.

Fourth—I am just as much of a working woman as Mrs. Kelley or Miss O'Reilly. I began at 16, and have been at it ever since and expect to be at it till I die. I have worked hard and had as many responsibilities and discouragements as though I had rolled cigars in a factory or worked at a loom in a mill, and I have just as much right to speak for the working woman as have they; and I wish to say right here, as I have said elsewhere, that I cannot see that the ballot would have helped me one iota in getting on in the world or have made the tough places smooth.

Fifth—I believe not only that the ballot in the hands of women would be a calamity, but I believe that it would prove a boomerang. Miss Jeannette L. Gilder, in The New York Times.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

This is the time for the brown tail moth itch, one of the distressing results of neglecting the trees earlier in the season.

The Constitutional amendment to set inauguration day forward from March 4 to the last Thursday in April has failed to gain the seal of approval of Congress.

About as many auto accidents and fatalities Decoration Day, as there are from fireworks on the Fourth. Why not sane autoing as well as a sane Fourth.

Is the tariff issue a moral or an immoral one? This appears to be a pertinent question, for one side characterizes the other as pirates, bandits and thieves, while the other comes back with coward demagogues and anarchists.

The principal thing to be remembered of the present Halley comet, is the thousands of people who were rendered panic stricken by the fearful stories published in the metropolitan papers. The injury done to timid people is incalculable.

The issue of trading stamps by merchants was pronounced unlawful by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals in a divided decision rendered on Tuesday. The trading stamps companies will appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

After discussing the several names given "the late unpleasantness between the states," including "the rebellion," "the war between the states," "the civil war," "the war of secession," and "the war of the rebellion," the U. S. Senate has decided that the war was "the civil war," and so it will be known in history.

The reason given for the defeat of the resolution in the Senate on the electing of U. S. Senators by popular vote was that the members feel that there is no just cause for complaint as to the manner in which Massachusetts has been represented in the United States Senate. Until there is more reason to complain than there is today, there is not likely to be a change. Cong. Ames has introduced a resolve in the U. S. House for a new postoffice building in Reading.

If automobiles are required to carry lights why not apply the same rule to drivers of horse vehicles? One is as necessary as the other, for even should the carriage not need a light for its own convenience, it would be a safeguard for its own protection. If lights are needed to make the road safe, put them on all vehicles.

Last week the Cambridge Chronicle printed an installment of the names of those voters who did not vote at the last city election. Some time when the number who did not vote in Winchester is smaller, the STAR may print the list.

In lieu of the prohibited fireworks, what are we going to give the young people in their place on the Fourth? If they are not to be disappointed, enthusiasm in some project should be started right away. What is to be the program, Messrs. Selectmen.

And supposing the Superior Court should decline to bring to a stop grade crossing elimination, what would the town do then? Why it would dig down into its pocket and carry out the plan that it has several times committed itself to and get the best.

It is to be regretted that ex-Mayor Hibbard of Boston could not be given credit for his many good qualities before he passed away, and especially at the time of his campaign for reelection last winter. The fact that he died a poor man, after his term in public office, in a measure, proves his faithfulness to the trust reposed in him.

Correspondents would assist us a great deal if they were to send their favors to the STAR office as early in the week as they conveniently can. It is almost impossible to handle the large volume of matter that reaches us Thursday, despite the aid of a type setting machine. Much must of necessity reach the office late in the week, yet there is considerable that could be sent in when the rush hour is not on.

Simple graduation exercises apparently do not appeal to the graduates of Somerville's high schools and their parents, who are strenuously protesting against the action of the school board of that city, whose members favor severe simplicity for graduation exercises. Just the same, it often costs too much for a boy or girl to graduate from school, and the money required often proves a great hardship to parents in rather moderate circumstances.

Postmaster General Hitchcock figures that if each of the 26,000 city letter carriers throughout the United States could be saved 15 seconds in an average wait to answer doorbell calls, the post office department would save several millions of dollars annually, says the Boston Record. To figure both sides he should state how many millions it would cost to furnish over 90,000,000 of letter getters with their own letter boxes.

Speaker Walker of the State Legislature in a recent address said. "There is growing up in this country a distrust of legislatures due to the fact that people have come to believe too many legislatures represent, not the interests of the people as a whole, but rather some special interest or special class, or else that legislators too often place party advantage or personal ambition above the public good. The resulting loss of confidence in representatives and so in representative government is leading many people to advocate schemes to bring the will of the people more directly to bear upon legislation."

"When the State of Massachusetts stocks the woods with birds, they are not put there for the purpose of affording amusement for anybody who wishes to trap them," declared the judge in Dedham District Court Tuesday when he fined Leon E. Mayo and George Simpson $10 and $20 respectively for trapping pheasants in Medfield. Our Middlesex Fells contain scores of these pheasants, and they are so domesticated that they are frequently seen about the premises of houses at Hillcrest. The birds were first put into the Fells by the late E. A. Brackett of this town, and many have migrated to different parts of the State.

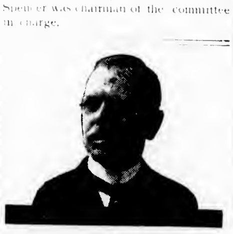
TEACHERS HELD PICNIC.

The Teachers' Club held their third annual picnic at Lincoln Camp, Stoneham, Wednesday, afternoon. The majority of the party went over on the 2.40 electric although Mr. Nichols was very busy transporting late comers in his auto. A cheerful fire burned in the open fireplace of the camp, and those who found the breeze too chilly for genuine comfort without, found the hearth a pleasant spot about which to engage in games and conversation. The others made time pass all too quickly in outdoor games, ending, of course, in one of baseball. Miss Lyons captained one team with Mr. Hetton and Mr. Nichols as pitcher and catcher, while Miss Mason was in charge of the other with Mr. Wixom and Mr. Herron as battery.

When the last call to supper interrupted the game Miss Mason's team led—3 2.

After supper, enjoyed to the utmost, more games enlivened the time. Then all gathered before the camp for a jolly sing, starting for home after sunset. All voted it a most agreeable time. Miss Spencer was chairman of the committee in charge.



EYE SIGHT AND INSURANCE.

You realize that life insurance and fire insurance are good investments as a means of protection against loss.

Yet your eye sight is more important than your property, and would be harder to regain if lost.

Pain about the eyes, tired or dull feeling, are an indication that you need glasses. To accomplish their proper result, glasses must be correctly fitted by an optometrist qualified to diagnose your trouble precisely.

Impossible.

A lusty lunged auctioneer was holding forth in flowery terms on the virtues of a particular brand of cigars he was endeavoring to induce his audience to purchase. Holding up a box of cigars, he shouted: "You can't get better, gentlemen. I don't care where you go, you can't get better!"

"No," came a cynical voice from a man in the crowd "you can't. I smoked one last week and I'm not better yet!"—People.

Norway's Many Meals.

Among the well to do in Norway the frequency of meals and lighter refreshments is something startling, at least to the average American. Breakfast at 9, dinner at 3, coffee at 3.30, regular tea, with many dishes, in English style, at 4.30, supper at 7, and at 11 nature is finally fortified with further nutriment for the long, radiant night. These long, radiant nights, by the way, are a constant peril to Christiania. They encourage many forms of dissipation and immorality, much as the corresponding darkness of the long winter brings in its train a certain sordid depression, both mental and physical.—Caroline Thurber in Century.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The Union Signal [illegible] had a page of suggestions to local members that are so good they deserve repeating. They are in reply to the oft repeated question "What can I do to help the cause where there are no open saloons?" Of course the first thing is the creation of public opinion opposed to intemperance. As [illegible] of that is the acquisition on all that pertains to the subject so that when the opportunity comes one may be able to give cogent reasons for the faith that is in one. [illegible] how important this is [illegible] adversary, well [illegible] reasoning, [illegible] what one may [illegible] sound plausible. Here it is that scientific temperance instruction [illegible] its value.

Then there are the allied lines pure food, good cooking and the knowledge of dietetics, on which too much emphasis cannot be placed. No small share of the victories won by King Alcohol have been because the defense has been weak in this respect. The properly nourished body does not crave artificial stimulants.

Then there is the constant need of seizing new opportunities to extend the area of "dry" ground, or at least resisting the encroach of the saloon on neutral territory. The legislature of the state, the common council and town meeting are all places to watch lest the evil in some disguise gain a foothold. The Sunday schools, the day schools, the churches and social gatherings are places where the local member may find opportunities for increasing the general knowledge of the right way of living.

The increase of membership in the Union is a matter for the local member to consider. Has she asked all her neighbors and friends? Does she read the temperance papers and pass them on after reading? Does she give her spare flowers to the flower mission, and her extra papers and magazines for distribution among those less fortunate?

Finally, the local member, if too busy to do much else, can give money to spread the gospel and lacking money can surely pray for the work. Who shall say what the result may be when each member does something to help the cause?

BLOODSUCKING BATS

These Pests Are Plentiful In the Forests of Brazil.

THEY ARE TRUE VAMPIRES.

But Cattle and Horses Are Their Chief Victims, Which They Prefer to Human Beings—Their Chisel-like Teeth and Peculiar Interior Anatomy.

Half a dozen of us had been telling what we thought we knew about bloodsucking bats, but our conversation had developed only an astonishing amount of misinformation and irreconcilable differences. So we called in the doctor who had lived some years in Brazil and asked him to comb out our tangled ideas.

"I'm not surprised at your confusion," he began, "for at one time or another I have believed above everything your questions would suggest. When I was a schoolboy the vampire was a bat as large as a crow, had a horn on his nose and was described as sitting on his victim's feet, fanning him with his wings while he worked his pumping apparatus. There is such a bat, but when it was proved that it was a fruit eater many of us doubted the whole bat legend along with the old mythology. There is a bloodsucking vampire, however, millions of them.

"The old Spanish conquistadors found proof of its existence in sore great toes, which looked as if the skin had been delicately shaved off, just deep enough to ooze blood, but they never caught one and naturally laid the blame to the biggest ones they found, which are nearly all vegetarians. The real thing is a small reddish brown creature closely resembling bats of the same color caught here not infrequently.

"The naturalist finds, however, some surprising differences. They have no teeth for any purpose save for thinning the skin—not enough for the blood to flow freely, but just sufficient to enable them to draw it by suction. The wound rarely bleeds after they leave it. This preparation is done with a pair of chisel-like teeth, sharp as a knife. Their interior anatomy differs from other animals as well as their teeth. All the other animals, so far as I know, have a stomach and necessary organs for converting food into blood. The true vampire has only an elongated sacklike intestine for the storage of the blood taken, which requires no digestion till it is taken up into the circulatory system. With neither teeth nor stomach, it has no alternative. It must find nourishment ready made.

"This peculiarity may or may not account for one very strange thing about its selection of victims. Cattle and horses are the chief ones. Not one human being in a hundred entirely satisfies their taste. Not half the people who live among them all their lives are ever bitten. But if one of a family, for instance, just suits them they'll follow that person to any part of the house, and no matter how carefully he may be covered or screened they will find their particular tipple.

"The stories of their bleeding people almost to death are true only partly. I have known of one boy who was so persistently followed that, while the loss of blood was small from a single attack, after months of the drain he was greatly reduced in vitality. He was always bitten in the same place—the end of the great toe—and it became so lacerated that there was considerable subsequent hemorrhage. This lad was the youngest of four brothers. They all slept in the same room and sometimes changed beds, but none of the others was ever bitten.

"Cattle and horses are attacked always at a spot on the spine just back of the shoulders, where the hair separates in a starlike spot. This in the case of a horse is just where the front end of the saddle comes, and the attack therefore makes a vast deal of trouble where every one rides horseback. A majority of the Brazilian horses and nearly all the cows are bitten by these plagues.

"Fortunately the pests are mostly confined to the forest country. They give comparatively little trouble in cities and villages, though the construction of houses makes it impossible to keep them out. In cities tiles are exclusively used for roofs and in the country palm leaf thatching, and all kinds of bats come and go at pleasure. One rarely goes to sleep without from one to a dozen flying about the room. They are nearly all harmless and are welcome because they catch insects. They all look so much alike that one does not know which to attack.

"How the genuine vampires eluded scientific research so long is a mystery. The species was not positively identified until the visit of Darwin in the Beagle. It was in the seventies, I think, and there is not at the present day, so far as I can learn, a single well authenticated case recorded in the natural histories of a true vampire being captured while feeding on a human being."—Dewey Austin Cobb in New York Tribune.

Here and There.

A man was waiting patiently for a street car the other day at a transfer station, says the Boston Record, when a woman, highly excited, rushed up to him and cried, "Are you the man here?"

"I don't understand," he said.

"Are you the man here?" she repeated.

"No, madam," he said, concealing a smile. "The man here is that man over there."

Money is one thing everybody is after, and yet it always gets left behind.

A CHRISTMAS LONG DELAYED.

Woman's Loyalty Recompensed After Many Weary Years.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

[Copyright, 19[illegible], by American Press Association.]

She was just a common, everyday sort of woman, a woman of the people, a product of poverty and yet a heroine as noble as ever was immortalized by poet's pen. Her wasted form was scarcely hidden by the limp, angular folds of her scanty calico skirt and the shawl about her shoulders. Her name was Mary, and as for her other name—it does not matter. She had hardly dared to use it for eighteen long years, and she thought of this as she drew near the big stores which were lined with happy Christmas shoppers.

She could just faintly remember that first sad Christmas thirty years before when her father, mother and herself were taken to the city pesthouse. She never saw them after that day, for when she left the hospital she went away alone. Mary was only six years old then, and her life seemed to have begun in her uncle's tenement, where the health officer had left her. It was even then a life of poverty and hunger. Her uncle was a strange man and before she came had lived all by himself.

When she was a little older he sent her out upon the streets to beg and then cursed her because she was so timid and got so little. She was begging one night by the Common when she met her first friend, a very kind young man, who took her hand and told her she mustn't beg. He took her down into Pie alley and gave her supper there with the newsboys and promised that she should become a news girl herself next day, which was better than begging. "Mary the news girl" they called her then.

Her second friend was a new neighbor's girl, who moved into the same house where she lived. This neighbor's girl worked as a "cash" in a big store, and when Mary's uncle disappeared one night and did not come back the neighbor's girl lent her a dress, found her a place also as cash girl and persuaded her mother to take the orphan into the family. Then began the best part of Mary's life. Dora and her mother were honest, if poor, and they gave Mary as good a home as they could for her meager wages. But the hours of work were long and weary, with no money for finery and no time for play. It was scarcely easier when Mary became a clerk, with better pay, but with greater expenses for board and decent clothes. She was old already at seventeen, a pale, shy girl, when she came to know Tom Haley, who was a janitor in the store. It seemed very strange that Tom, who was several years older, should care for her and should want to take her to walk on Sunday afternoons, but when they knew each other better and after Tom had asked her to marry him he said that the reason he liked her was because she was so good. That did not clear the mystery for Mary, but she worshiped Tom.

She promised to marry him, and yet she held with timid obstinacy that there was a great deal to be done before then. Homeless as she had always been, a waif of the street, she knew that Tom was scarcely better off than herself, yet she could not bear to think of marrying without a home. A home was her great ambition, and it could not be realized without money—a great deal of money, as it seemed to her, at least $500. And her lover came to share that ambition.

"MARY, MARY, ARE YOU MAD?"

Late one Saturday night when Mary and Dora went home together to the tenement down in the Cove district they saw a fierce looking man sitting on the doorstep. His rough hands stopped Mary as she tried to pass, and she felt the return of the old sickening fear as she recognized her uncle. He did not say why he had deserted her or tell where he had been, but harshly ordered her to pack her "duds" and go with him. The thought of Tom Haley was the first that came to her mind, and it gave her courage to say that she would not go. Then as the tears started to her eyes she jerked away her hand and ran up the stairs breathless and sobbing. A little later the uncle followed and told Dora and her mother that he was Mary's guardian and was going to have his rights. Mary had locked herself in an inner room, and although her supposed uncle swore that he would have the law on them all, he finally left the house defeated.

Tom Haley came that Sunday afternoon, as usual, and when he found what had happened he was pale with anger. He and Mary talked the matter over with the hopeless calm of people who are accustomed to misfortune. It did not seem impossible that Mary's uncle might have the law on them, as he threatened. They could not help sharing the fear that all the old neighbors felt for the man. It seemed to Tom that the only thing they could do was to be married at once. But Mary would not listen to this proposition.

It was eighteen years since all this had happened, yet it did not take Mary a moment to remember it all. She had been wrong. She ought to have listened to Tom's pleadings, and, once married, they might both have escaped the misery that followed. The faded woman drew her ragged shawl closer and shivered from something sharper than the December wind. She was living it all over again. She had not dared to leave the house on that Sunday long ago, not even to take her accustomed walk with Tom. Before he left her lover had promised to protect her on her way home the next night if she would wait outside until he had closed the store. That night she had waited and let Dora go home alone. When Tom appeared they walked together down to the Cove district, and, as they had feared, Mary's uncle was waiting in the doorway of the tenement. He scowled as they stopped before him.

"Who is that man?" he demanded of Mary.

"I am the man she is going to marry," said Tom, answering for her. Mary clung to her lover's arm. She felt a thrill of pride in Tom, followed by a nameless dread of what might happen to him. Her uncle's quick anger was aroused. He cursed Tom as a liar and abused Mary in the vilest way. Suddenly he stopped and, slouching down the steps, said to Tom: "If you are going to marry her I've got something to say to you first. Meet me at Jones' place, and we will have it over."

He brushed them as he passed and disappeared around the corner of the court. Tom's hands were clinched, and he would have followed at once had not Mary hung so heavily upon him. She was more frightened than before. It was so strange, so unnatural. Tom was eager to go to the saloon around the corner and find out what her uncle had to say. He had nothing to fear, he said, and would be right back. When he had gone Mary bolted the door and sat waiting fearfully in the dark. Then the minutes dragged more heavily, because she thought it was time for Tom's return, and she breathed more freely when she heard a man's step upon the stairs and a bold knock upon the door.

"Is that you, Tom?" she said. She hardly noticed that his voice sounded strange when he answered. She drew the bolt, but it was her uncle who put his foot against the door and forced his way into the room. Seizing the almost paralyzed girl by the arm, he held up a bottle which she could just see in the dim light.

"It's vitriol," he hissed. "It will burn like a flame and eat like a tiger. Now, come along and don't make any fuss."

She dared not resist, but went along with him, wondering, with sickening dread, what terrible thing he had done to the man she loved. When they got into the court by the flicker of a street lamp they saw Tom coming toward them.

"Tell him you are going with me and won't have anything more to do with him, or I'll give him the acid," muttered her uncle. Mary, half stupefied with fear and wishing to save Tom from her uncle's fiendish threat, obeyed. She coldly passed Tom by and told him "not to bother her" then, as she had important business with her uncle.

"Mary, Mary, are you mad?" Tom cried, but she walked on, leaving him standing as if he had been stung. Her uncle chose the quietest streets, and they walked rapidly across the city toward the north end. She thought many times of calling for help, but the bottle of liquid fire was still in his hand, and she knew only too well that he would use it. The real terror of the situation seized her when they came to an old wooden rookery that had once been a mansion, but was now dark and empty. Her uncle opened the street door and almost dragged her up the three flights of old fashioned stairs. "I'll have you safe enough in a minute," he said as he fumbled with the key. It was too much for Mary's weakened nerves. She lost all sense of fear and control and, crying, "Tom, help!" slipped from her uncle's grasp to the floor. As the old man bent over her he heard quick steps coming up the stairs and a voice he recognized saying, "Yes, Mary, I'm coming!" Tom had followed them unseen to learn just what the mystery of Mary's coolness meant and was on hand to rescue her. But the thought of the dreadful bottle in her uncle's possession aroused Mary, and, seizing her uncle's hand, she screamed: "I'm all right, Tom! Go away!"

"What does this mean?" asked the panting Tom as he burst into the room and glared at Mary's uncle. The old man was cursing under his breath and, clearing himself from Mary's grasp, sprang savagely toward him.

"The vitriol, the vitriol!" was all that Mary could say. It was all over in a moment. The men grappled. Tom bent the old man over the banisters, only half realizing the danger, while Mary wrenched the bottle from his grasp and threw it away. Suddenly the old banister broke and with a gasp of horror Tom and Mary saw the old man topple backward heavily to the floor below.

When Tom reached him there was no sign of life. The man's neck had been broken, and Tom had just made sure of this fact when a policeman pushed his head in the door and asked in a gruff voice what was the matter. Why Tom Haley attempted to escape he could never tell. He turned and dazed he made a blind rush for the back door, but found himself in a yard surrounded by a high fence with the policeman at his heels. The hand of the officer was on his collar, and his struggles to free himself were soon quieted with stinging blows on his head.

There were long months in jail until the indictment was brought against Tom and more delay before the case finally came to trial.

Oh, justice had been blind! The revolver Tom had in his pocket he had borrowed "for an old man," as the lender testified. Jones said that he had been to his place "looking for an old man." A neighbor had seen Mary's cold greeting as she started away with her uncle and had heard Tom's threat of vengeance afterward. The policeman had seen Tom entering the house and had found him bending over the dead man.

AND FROM THE CHURCHES OF THE CITY CAME THE PEAL OF BELLS.

All hope had left Mary's heart when she heard Tom sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. Even the assurance that it would not be over eighteen years with good conduct on Tom's part failed to brighten her despair, for that term seemed almost a lifetime. The thought of the jail haunted her everywhere, and instead of trying to get back into the store where she had worked with Dora she found a place as waitress in a restaurant down by the market, but she was recognized even there, and when she found that men came to see her as a curiosity she would not stay. She no longer dared to be a waitress and for years lived as dishwasher in restaurants and cheap hotels. The pay was scarcely enough to keep her alive, yet she saved a few cents week by week, never failing in her hope and her trust for Tom. When his time was nearly up she was more feverishly eager to save, for after all her hardships she had but little, scarcely $200, in all these weary years. Then she had a long sickness of typhoid fever that in three months swept all her precious savings away.

• • • • • • •

This was her first day out after her convalescence. She was still very weak and without a dollar. But what did it matter? This was Tom's day of delivery. She knew the hour when he was to be set free.

She wanted Tom, and the long deferred hope of a happy home seemed a slight thing compared to her great longing. The great prison which she knew so well was almost in sight. At last she reached the shelter of the high wall and looked up the passageway that led to the entrance. She felt a sudden consciousness of her ragged clothes, of the limp calico skirt and of the holes in her shoes. She would not disgrace Tom by going inside, but would wait in the street where no one could see her.

What was she bringing her lover after all these years? She had neither youth nor health nor money nor home. She almost dreaded to see him in the new clothes that she knew the state would give him. He was coming. She heard his footsteps on the walk, but she could not bear to put him to the test yet and tremblingly crouched by the great wall.

He came to the street and looked about him. How old and gray he seemed, but how handsome still! Dejectedly he walked away from where she was hiding, failing at first to recognize her. Her weakness and her longing overcame her and, huskily crying "Tom, Tom!" she staggered out before him.

"Mary!" he gasped and ran to her as she was sinking to the pavement.

"I worked for you, Tom, but was sick and lost it all. I have no money for our home," she said.

She was fainting on his shoulder, and the big tears rolled from his eyes and his voice choked him as he replied:

"God bless you, Mary! You're too good for one like me."

And from the churches of the city came the peal of the bells ringing the chimes of Christmas eve.

Home Course In Domestic Science

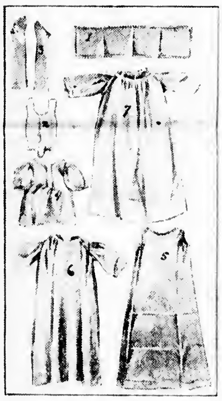
XVIII.—Food For Invalids and Children.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

THE chief difference between cooking for the sick and for those in good health is that the sick person must have his food properly prepared and the one who is perfectly well ought to have it properly prepared. One is a case of necessity in order to regain health; the other is a case of prevention to ward off sickness. There is no medicine more important and powerful than the right kind of food cooked and served in the best way to make it easy of digestion and nutritious. Since this is true there is no part of nursing more important than that of preparing the invalid's meals. Selecting and cooking meals for one who has little appetite mean more than choosing certain nutritious foods and cooking them well. They mean presenting the proper food to the patient in such an attractive way that an appetite will be awakened and there will be a desire to eat. It is essential, then, that special care be taken in arranging the patient's tray. A sick person is unusually sensitive to details. Little things which possibly would pass unnoticed by the person in normal health may cause actual discomfort to the one weakened by disease. The tray should always be covered with a clean cloth. The smallest stain or a rumpled appearance may take away the patient's desire for the food. The prettiest, thinnest china and glass, the brightest silver, should be sent to the sickroom. These in themselves will appeal to the eye and thus aid digestion.

The food should be served in small quantities and by courses. It is not unusual for the sight of a tray loaded with many dishes on which generous helpings of food are served to take away the patient's appetite before he has tasted a mouthful. A well filled tray may be gratifying to the person convalescing from a long illness when food was limited to liquids, but as a rule it is unappetizing almost to every person. Before taking the tray to the patient make sure that his room is in order and that he is ready for the meal. Freshen the air in the room for a few moments, wipe the patient's hands and face with a dampened cloth, straighten the bedclothes and rearrange the pillows. Then bring in the tray with the food on it freshly prepared. Serve hot things hot and cold things cold. Have everything as nearly perfect as possible. Place the tray within easy reach of the patient if he is able to feed himself and then while he eats talk to him of interesting, pleasant things, which will cause him to forget himself and what he is doing. Do not sit down beside the bed and watch every mouthful he takes, occasionally remarking on his improved appetite or the lack of it. Such a procedure is very likely to make the patient feel he has eaten enough before he is fairly started on the meal.



A MODERN OUTFIT FOR INFANT.

[1. Band. 2. Band to be worn after second month. 3. Stockings. 4. Shirt. 5. Petticoat. 6. Nightgown. 7. Outing slip.]

The patient's diet is naturally somewhat limited. There are a great many kinds of foods that he is not allowed to eat, and even those that are permitted cannot be cooked in all sorts of ways. The physician in charge of the case will give a list of foods allowed, and in some cases he will state how they are to be prepared. But his directions are often general, as "give him soft cooked eggs" or "let him have a bit of chicken or a nice cream soup." Any specific instructions regarding recipes or different ways of serving the same food are not often attempted by the doctor. If the nurse—be she wife, mother, daughter or professional—does not know how to serve eggs in a variety of ways, how even beef tea and gruels may be given new forms and flavors, then the patient will probably weary of them, perhaps refuse to eat them. Fortunate is the woman who knows how to prepare simple foods attractively, making old friends appear as new acquaintances. But there are certain "don'ts" that must be observed when cooking for the sick.

Don't give an invalid or little child fried food of any kind. It is hard to digest, and the digestive organs of both sick people and children are weak.

Don't include pork in the invalid's bill of fare. A little crisp bacon or bacon gravy may be allowed occasionally.

Don't serve highly seasoned food. The sense of taste is generally very keen in sickness, and the natural seasoning of food is often enough. Besides, spices may overstimulate the digestive glands. Do not use pepper, mustard or vinegar and use salt sparingly.

Don't boil eggs for either invalids or children. Always cook them in water which has not quite reached the boiling point.

Don't cook milk directly over the fire; it is almost sure to burn. Even if it does not, milk should not be boiled for the same reason that an egg should not. Boiling temperature makes the albumen tough and indigestible.

Don't cook cream soups or boiled custards directly over the fire. Use a double boiler to keep the temperature below boiling.

Don't serve insufficiently cooked cereals. Rice, oatmeal and cornstarch should be cooked for a long time over hot water. Rice requires about two hours and oatmeal at least four hours' steam cooking.

Don't serve fried potatoes. When they are allowed they are much better baked, because they are more quickly digested in that form.

Don't serve cheese and don't cook butter too long. In making cream soups add the butter just before serving.

Nurse's Care of Herself.

The woman who is acting as nurse in her home is very apt to neglect herself. It may be hard for her to do otherwise, especially if there are other demands on her time and strength. But if the patient needs constant care then it is almost imperative that the person who is caring for him should be relieved of other duties and responsibilities. His recovery demands this, for the nurse's mental and physical condition has often a marked effect on the patient. If the nurse is tired out, has been obliged to do without sufficient sleep for several nights, she is not likely to be herself. She will be nervous, easily excited, perhaps irritable and utterly unfit to give her best effort to her task.

She should have regular hours for sleep, when her rest will be unbroken for at least seven hours out of each twenty four. Then a short time should be allowed every day for outdoor exercise. Constantly breathing the air of even a well ventilated sickroom soon tells on even robust health. The nurse should have also good, nourishing, easily digested food at regular hours. When sickness comes into the family such matters as guarding the health of the nurse and keeping the other members of the household in good health are often overlooked and a single case of illness very often becomes two or three just because of this neglect. Everything should be done to hasten the recovery of the patient as well as preserve the good health of the rest of the family.

The nurse should wear comfortable clothing, a washable dress and broad soled shoes, and if the disease is at all infectious she should be careful to wash her hands each time she touches the patient. Professional nurses learn very early in their training the importance of disinfecting and using every precaution to prevent further development of the disease germs, but the inexperienced sometimes find it hard to realize how very powerful and insidious are these minute germs.

It is not at all necessary for the home nurse to be versed in drugs and medicines, nor should she be required to put on complicated bandages, prepare dressings or administer treatments which require professional skill and experience. All such matters will be undertaken by the physician when a trained nurse is not employed. But the woman who knows how to put on a simple bandage, how to stop an ordinary attack of nosebleeding, what to do when some one faints and also is familiar with simple remedies for simple ailments will always find the knowledge useful. In fact, it is a part of the all round woman's education to know these things and be able to apply them in a common sense way.

The Care of Little Children.

No woman should consider her education complete until she has an intelligent knowledge regarding the care of little children. When we consider that the material out of which either heroes or invalids are made is found in the nursery it behooves every woman to see to it that either by her personal effort or by her influence she is doing her part to have the future generation composed of strong men and women, capable of being heroes, and that the number of weaklings is lessened. One of the greatest errors made in the management of children relates to their nutrition. "If the child is properly fed he will stand a great deal of abuse in other directions," says one authority, but more is necessary than food if the child is to develop properly. He must have fresh air, suitable nutrition and a chance to live as a young child should, free from care, with nothing to excite nerves or prevent the proper development of body and mind—as nearly like a young animal as possible.

A Pig Tale.

The southern negro who is not possessed of a big conscience is hard to fool indeed. This is well known to the white people, so that when an ancient darky approached a white neighbor with the request that he "gib him er ha'f er dollar ter help buy er pig, 'case dat yuther pig Ah had is done daid," the desired amount was promptly forthcoming.

A few days later the white man met the old negro and inquired.

"Did you get another pig, uncle?"

"'Deed Ah did, sah, an' hit am a fine shoat, an' Ah shoily am much obleeged to you fer helpin' me, Mars Tom."

"Well, take better care of this one," Mars Tom suggested. "By the way," he added idly, "what did the other pig die of—cholera?"

The old man pulled his forelock and smiled depreciatingly.

"Now, Mars Tom, what for yo' all wanter ax dat?" he said. "Fah a matter er fac', dat yuther pig died 'case Ah hit him on de haid wid er ax, he bein' fat an' de wedder jest right, an' me bein' hongry for fresh meat!"—New York Times.

A Creepy Experience.

The Rev. Clarence Godfrey on retiring one night determined that he would try to "telepath" a phantasm of himself to a lady living in another part of the city, tells H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine. For about ten minutes he endeavored in thought to appear to her. At the end of that time he fell asleep.

About four hours later the lady on whom he had been "exerting his will" awoke with an impression that she had heard a curious sound. She felt nervous and uneasy and thought that if she went downstairs and took a drink of soda water it might have a quieting effect.

Coming back, she was astounded to see the form of Mr. Godfrey standing on the staircase. He remained standing there for three or four seconds, while she stared at him in horrified amazement. Then as she approached the staircase he disappeared.

Wonderful Cactuses.

The largest cactuses in the world are those to be found in parts of Mexico. The curious bristling plants common in greenhouses and even in botanical collections give but a poor idea of the size and beauty of this variety. It is common, for example, to find a single plant growing to a height of eight or ten feet which will weigh several hundred pounds. The cactuses grow in a bewildering variety of forms and colors. Their blossoms are correspondingly large and varied.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable treat to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. The thick, foul discharge is dislodged and the patient breathes freely, perhaps for the first time in weeks. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

How to Know the Twins.

The Beverly twins, Fred and Frank, were such exact counterparts of each other that none of the neighbors could tell them apart, and even their teacher sometimes had her doubts. The resemblance is accounted for by the fact that they are dressed exactly alike.

"How in the world do you ever yourself tell which is which, Mrs. Beverly?" asked a caller one day.

"To tell the truth," she answered, "I can't always. But if I hear a noise in the pantry I call out, 'Fred, is that you?' and he says, 'Yes, mamma,' I know it's Frank and that he's in some kind of mischief."—Exchange.

YOU CAN'T MOVE A LOT OF LAND.

It's there to stay.

Therefore, when buying a lot you want to be sure that it is in just the right location.

It should be in a location where the population is increasing. That will make the lot worth more from year to year.

In case, too, that you should want to sell, location is most important. That is worth considering.

Out of the ground today and on your table tomorrow—that's what makes our Green Goods Department so popular. The green goods and vegetables you get from us are always crisp and fresh, because we buy from day to day, only as much as we can sell. A lot of people didn't know how fine and tasty vegetables could be, until they began to buy from us. You'll get the habit too, when once you start. Begin today. We get them home to you before the dew is off them.

CONVENIENT FOOD

HEINZ BAKED BEANS are very rich in nutritive value because they are really baked. In this respect they are different from most so-called baked beans, which have lost their food value through boiling. Boiling is the cheaper way of preparing beans, but it's not the Heinz way. Try a can of Heinz baked beans and note the difference; if you don't find them better than any others we will return your money.

The last of the series of meetings in Hermann Dudley Murphy's Studio is announced for Sunday evening, June 5th. Prof. Charles Zueblin, having been the initial speaker of these meetings, has also consented to address this final one. The subject will be, "Government and the Common Life." After the discussion following the address, suggestions are asked for as to the desirability (pro or con) of going on with a similar, or different course for next season. Something more public in character and reaching the interests of all; the nucleus perhaps of a People's Forum, as has been done in Braintree and Medford. The influence of some such association of the brain and heart of the community could be very interesting and far-reaching in the formation of public opinion.

The Rev. Edward A. Horton, who for the past 25 years has been the executive head of the Unitarian Sunday School Society, Tuesday evening retired from that office. He is to be succeeded by Rev. William I. Lawrance of this town.

The licensing of more than 104,000 automobiles owned in New York state thus far this year proves that this is indeed becoming a world of wheels. At an average cost estimate of $1250 the automobiles owned in New York state alone represent an investment of $130,000,000. Add to this immense sum the cost of operation and upkeep of the machines and one of the factors in the high cost of living problem is not hard to determine. In the family expense account rubber and gasoline are contending with meat and potatoes for positions at the top of the high cost column.—Christian Science Monitor.

Decoration Day was one of uncertainty so far as the weather was concerned—raining at intervals while it set in hard early in the evening and continued throughout the night. THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXIX. NO. 48. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1910. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

SOUND ADVICE.

Given to High School Pupils by a Man who has Made Good.

Before the pupils of the High school last Friday forenoon Mr. Preston Pond gave an address, which if seriously taken will prove of great benefit to the scholars. Mr Pond's career began at the bottom of the ladder and by hard and persistent work he overcame all obstacles until he became the head of the great Dennison Manufacturing Co. That the young people throughout the town may receive the benefit of his experiences, the STAR prints his address in full, as follows:

In a simple way I want to speak to you about as I have to many young men and women who have come to our store looking for positions. My word to them at such times has, of necessity, had to be brief and to the point. To those who entered our employ and tried to make good, I had from time to time opportunity to make suggestions that many of them have told me were valuable and, therefore, helpful; and some of these points I want to call to your attention to-day, for in a great many instances young people with their education completed have had to confess they had given little or no thought as to what their life work was to be, and, in fact, had made no definite preparation for any.

On the assumption and with the hope that you who are about to leave school to seek employment have already begun to think about this very serious problem, I bring to your attention these few suggestions: and, to those who are to continue for another year in the school work, let me say that, before you realize it, the last opportunity for improving your school days will have gone and you will be face to face with the world of industry in which you have got to take your part.

I realize you were not born yesterday. Whether you realize it or not, you have arrived at years when judgment and discretion should be shown. The conditions under which we are living to-day do not tend toward that thoughtfulness that develops wise decision, and that may be your misfortune, but obstacles are the best things in the world for us if they stimulate us to growth. If we have more to divert our minds from the higher thoughts and purposes than existed forty years ago, we have more to inspire us to make our lives count. How uninteresting a golf course would be without its hazards or the game of ball if the pitcher could do his work without the umpire's decision on strikes and balls, or if the striker could wait all day for just the right kind of a ball!

So it is in life we need obstacles and hazards to inspire us. Now then, who turns out to be the best golfer, the best ball player, the best runner or jumper? He who waits until the later years of his youth before taking up the sport with determination and persistency? No! but the one who starts in earnestly and with a will to do and treat his undertaking seriously in the early years of his young manhood is the one who almost without exception excels and wins.

You can see the point that I would make. It is so plain that I need hardly apply it, and, were it not so very important, I would let it pass with the inference I am sure you will make. The importance of the development of your mind, together with that of your muscle, cannot be too strongly emphasized, for in the great contest of life—and it is a contest—you will find a well trained mind and muscle the best, most efficient and most honorable weapons.

Now, out of these two vital and forceful elements in a young person's character, there evolves and springs the third and foundation factor, the moral. As I have said before, I realize I am now talking to young men and women, and to those who can appreciate the importance of living seriously and wisely. In order to be strong morally, one must want to be, and I think thoughtfulness is the very first habit to form. It is your own self you want to improve and perfect; therefore, study yourself. Work of this kind will develop within you a pride and ambition that will do much to increase your moral strength and decision. Your life up to the present has been comparatively contracted but you have many chances every day to subject your purposes to the test. A good place to begin is in your own home. Up to this time the only firm in which you have been a partner is that institution, and you must remember that even in that firm you are a junior, and junior partners do not, as a rule, dictate the policy but stand ready to work and follow rather than attempt to lead. So be honorable and helpful in your home, doing your part towards its upbuilding and happiness, and you will be surprised to see how much you can do.

Next, treat the remaining days in school as seriously and carefully as you must treat the business in which you enter or occupation you take up, that it may be a success. In other words, be the business person now. Form the habit of application to-day, be very ambitious to succeed and start it at once, so that when you start your course for a possible employer you will be able to present him with a good business proposition. Thoughtfulness and effort to develop a strong character bear good fruit at this time. You can little realize the difference in values even from the money standpoint between the indifferent and careless boy and the one who has improved his opportunities and lived thoughtfully. An employer needs but a glance and a few words to show him the kind of young man he is talking to, and the same judgment that leads him to reject poor material, will lead him to reject the one who applies for employment without evidence of proper purpose or equipment.

Therefore, keep your mind on the day you are to meet your future employer and fit yourself for this very important event by improving every opportunity, for strengthening your mind and character. You cannot begin to realize how much in demand are young men whose thoughtfulness and ambition have led them to become absolutely dependable. Such fellows have no difficulty in getting and keeping good jobs, and with this equipment a boy is bound to advance. "Advance" is a good word, whether it means in position or pay. Either one is good; both are better; for, while you may be more interested in pay than position, yet, when your work has been so satisfactory as to lead to your advancement, then, to the ambitious fellow, there comes immense satisfaction that he has made good. It is at this point that one begins to enjoy his work, for his pride and ambition are aroused and, when that is accomplished, one has made mighty headway in solving the main problem of his life, namely; finding work with which one is happy.

C. GERRY JOHNSON DEAD.

The sudden death of Mr. Charles Gerry Johnson, son of Mr and Mrs. Edward J. Johnson of Highland avenue, came as a great shock to the many friends of the young man in this town. Mr. Johnson died on Saturday at Bulzura, California. He was in his 24th year.

C. Gerry Johnson has made his home in California for the past six years, having gone there on account of his health. He was occupied with ranching, raising angora goats. Reports were that he had practically regained his health, and the sudden news of his death came as much of a shock to his family as to his friends. Besides his parents he leaves two sisters.

PROGRESSIVE WINCHESTER BOY

His Success as a Pacificator in New Mexico.

Mr. John T. Wilson received the following letter from his son, Earl, a very bright Winchester boy, who is forging to the head in New Mexico, in which he tells of an exploit of his brother Frank in which he quelled a threatened uprising of the Indians:

May 3, 1910.

Dear Father:—

I have been very busy the last few days, or rather evenings, in drilling, preparatory to turning out Memorial Day. You know I belong to the 1st Reg. N. M. N. G. Out here the fellows take much more interest in military matters than they do in the east. There are between fifteen hundred and two thousand Americans in Santa Fe and we have a company of sixty members, and altogether in the territory we have a full regiment of Infantry, a couple troops of Cavalry and a battery of light artillery. About every place in the territory having enough young fellows has a company. I imagine every eastern town of two thousand having a company.

The 1st day of March I left Santa Fe with a U. S. Examiner of surveys and we were gone till about the 7th of May. All March we were out on the staked plains east of Carlsbad, and during April and a part of May we were in the mountains west of Carlsbad. During our trip we walked about four hundred miles and we also smashed the government record for surveying in one day. While on the Plains we ran eighteen miles in one day. Both on the Plains and in the mountains we three assistants would sleep on the ground without any cover other than our blankets unless it looked cloudy, and then we would pitch our tent. We had to pitch one for the cook to cook in and the boss to sleep in. They were both big tents 16x14x9 feet.

Even in March it was hot during the day out on those plains. A scattered but very nutritious grass grows there and also plenty of cactus, soapweed and mesquite. The staked plains used to be one of the largest ranching regions in the country, but the ranches depended on the open range for their grazing, but the government had it surveyed and we examined it and it will soon be open to settlement and that means the ranches must move on. One old man who has made about a hundred thousand off of cattle has sent his three sons to Arizona to look up some new range and he says he will soon move on.

I returned to Santa Fe just in time to be in on the Indian trouble. There are two companies of militia here. Co. E. (Mexican) and Co. F. (American). When news arrived of the alleged Indian outbreak in Taos, twenty six picked privates with their officers were taken from each company and I was lucky enough to be one of the picked men. We were sent to Barranca by a special train which left Santa Fe at midnight. Barranca, which is about twenty-five miles from Taos, is the nearest station to the Pueblo. We arrived a little before daylight and instantly ate our breakfast; as soon as we finished eating we started over the mountains. That road goes over some of the roughest country in New Mexico. They pushed us mighty hard so that before noon we had covered half the distance, but some of the fellows were about all in. We were carrying a pretty heavy load, namely, rifle, sixty rounds of ammunition, blanket roll and belt with bayonet, canteen and full haversack. The Adjutant General of the territory went along with us and he is a West Pointer, so you can imagine things had to be rather exact. Co. F. is considered the crack company of the territory and we are commanded by an ex-roughrider who was Roosevelts' personal aid during the war. There is also another roughrider who is a private, he also served two years in the Phillipines; another one of our privates served two enlistments in the regular army. The last fellow has a medal as expert marksman in the regular army, he made four bullseyes out of five shots at two hundred yards, on our range. Our first squad were all six footers or over, although if it had come to a fight they wouldn't have been any better than the rest of us, they looked rather imposing. We were ordered back after our noon rest as the trouble had all been settled.

As attorney for the Pueblo Indians, Frank had left the afternoon before in an auto and arrived at Taos early the next morning. The trouble was not much and he was able to settle it without trouble.

I hope your exercises went off smoothly on Memorial Day. I received the program, also your last letter.

Lovingly your son

Earl Wilson.

MARRIED AT NUPTIAL MASS.

Haley—Maguire Wedding.

A nuptial mass was celebrated at St. Mary's Church, Wednesday morning, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Katherine Louise Maguire and Mr. James Vincent Haley.

The young couple are well known in town and about 250 friends had received invitations to attend the ceremony at the church. Rev. Fr. Merritt, pastor of the church, celebrated the Mass and performed the marriage ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Elizabeth Roache of Woburn as bridesmaid and Dr. James O'Connor of Winchester acted as best man.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white satin with pearl and chiffon trimmings. The bridal veil was caught with orange blossoms and the bride carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore pale blue satin with silver and gold trimmings, and a large black picture hat. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

Miss Mary Holland played the wedding march.

Messrs. John J. Costello of Woburn and Frank Rogers of Winchester were ushers.

Guests were present from Bath, Me., Fall River, Somerville, Stoneham, Woburn and Boston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Edward Maguire of Swanton street, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Haley, the well known patent leater manufacturer of Canal street.

After the ceremony at the church the wedding party sat down to a breakfast served on the lawn at the new home of the bridal couple, 7 Canal street, about 150 guests participating in the festivities. The couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Haley and Mr Edward Maguire. Many beautiful presents testified to their popularity.

After a wedding tour which will include a visit to New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Haley will make their home at 7 Canal street, where they will be at home to their friends after September 1st.

VISITING NURSE ASSOCIATION REMEMBERED.

The confidence of the Visiting Nurse Association in the generosity of the people of Winchester has been fully justified by the result of the request for contributions to the June Breakfast. The amount received is $635 and the Association heartily thanks all who have come to its aid.

The increase in the amount of medical supplies distributed, as well as in their cost,—in the number of extra nurses furnished, and the support of patients in State Sanitoriums have added greatly to the expenses of the Association, and although the membership increases, the list of patients grows also.

Among the cases there have been many which have required from the nurses more than the specified time for a visit—these are faithfully attended to, and in the case of a paying patient, for whom the maximum charge is fifty cents, half the fee is charged for a second hour.

The price is carefully graded to fit the patient's means, and the lack of ability to pay does not shorten the visit nor lessen the care.

The assurance of the interest and support of the community is a great help to the Association in its work and an inspiration to do its best to make good home nursing possible.

WINCHESTER'S POPULATION NEARS 10,000 MARK.

The Assessors estimate the population of Winchester at 9180. There will be some curiosity to see how these figures will compare with the enumeration just completed by the United States Census Bureau. The difference if any, will be trivial as the Assessors made a house to house canvas, the same as was done by the government. Winchester is rapidly nearing the 10,000 mark, and it is pretty safe to predict that ten years hence, when the next census is taken, that those figures will be reached.

Winchester is growing quite fast; conservatorily however, which is far preferable to the mushroom growth, so commonly noticed in some of the suburban cities and towns that are closer to Boston.

CLAY—BARTLETT.

A very attractive wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherared Clay, 22 Lloyd street at high noon, June the first, when their niece Miss Ethel Maude Clay was united in marriage to Fred A. Bartlett, M. D., of Quincy, in the presence of relatives and friends.

The bride was attired in a travelling dress of gold cloth and carried bride roses. The double ring service was used, Rev. John R. Chaffee was the officiating clergyman.

After a wedding trip to New York Dr. and Mrs. Bartlett will make their home at 62 Billings road, Norfolk Downes, Quincy, Mass., where Dr. Bartlett has a flourishing medical practice. Mrs. Bartlett has been a great help in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Winchester and will be very much missed.

A MEMORIAL TO THEIR SON.

The former president of the Boston-Dartmouth college alumni, Lewis W. Parkhurst, and his wife, Emma Wilder Parkhurst, are the donors of $50,000 for the erection of a handsome administration building to be added to the college equipment at Hanover.

The administration building will be a memorial to the Parkhursts' son, Wilder Lewis Parkhurst, who died, in his sophomore year at Hanover in 1907. Young Parkhurst gave promise of great scholarly attainments.

Plans for the new building have been submitted to the trustees, and the work of construction will proceed at once under the supervision of the building committee.

Mr. Parkhurst graduated at Dartmouth in 1878.

BLOCK SYSTEM INSTALLED ON WOBURN LOOP.

The block system of signals which has been in course of construction on all divisions of the Boston and Maine railroad has been completed on the Woburn Loop between Winchester and North Woburn junction and on and after this week, the trains will be governed by the block system.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

A promising young Winchesterite is not so good as a performing one.

When an individual asks a favor at The STAR office and states that he has been a subscriber for a number of years, a denial becomes an impossibility. The argument is clinched, and he can have the entire plant for the asking.

The Spectator has the acquaintance of at least two Winchesterites who are so eager to get something for nothing, that he almost believes they would be willing to die at short notice, were they presented with gratuitous coffins, with the understanding that they should shuffle off.

A Washington street gentleman suggests to The Spectator that the names of all of Winchester's delinquent poll tax payers be published once a year in The STAR. Over in Everett last week a councilman introduced a similar proposition but it was defeated. Personally, The Spectator believes the idea has a great deal to commend it.

A certain Winchester business man inquires of The Spectator to know whether a camel would have any more difficulty in going through the eye of a needle than would be encountered on the way to heaven by one of those men who "enclose fifty cents in stamps," and expect their correspondent to pay the postage on the answer out of the fifty cents.

Next fall The Spectator wants to see the proposition for a Young Men's Christian Association in Winchester taken up with a will. The Spectator does not believe that the proposition can fail and that Winchester will measure up to a new standard of civic pride and philanthropy. A community does not know its latent strength in any line of material progress or philanthropy until put to the test. Winchester when subjected to the test will respond nobly. The Y. M. C. A. proposition will put the croakers and "knockers" to shame, proving that Winchester is no mean town, and that its residents, whether well-to-do or poor, stand ready to respond where a worthy cause appeals for their support.

Last week The Spectator had the privilege of seeing one of the first street cars to be run in Winchester and it was an object lesson which did not fail to impress. A mere exhibit of the equipment of those first days would show the good people of Winchester why they have reason to congratulate themselves that they do not have to get about with such service as the last generation had to put up with.

There may be some grounds for kicking—it is not pleasant for a Winchesterite to have to hang on to a strap when he is coming home tired from work—but with all the grounds for reasonable criticism considered, we may be glad that the street transportation facilities of to-day are so vastly superior to those of twenty-five years ago.

When a good umbrella can be purchased for a dollar, there is no reason for a Winchesterite stealing his neighbor's by that familiar method of failing to return borrowed property.

There is one man here in Winchester who is going to be severely lectured by The Spectator one of these days. Several times now he has borrowed The Spectator's pencil (he never had one of his own), then shoves it into his vest pocket and walks away with it.

RICHBURG—CHRISTIE.

Dr. C. W. Stegmaier of Plymouth, a classmate of the groom, was best man, and Miss Minnie Devine of Boston was Bridesmaid.

Dr. and Mrs. Richburg will be at home to their Winchester friends after September the first at 31 Howe street, Dorchester.

The accident occurred in front of the lad's home, where he was taken and a physician summoned. No blame is attached to the driver of the car.

Arthur P. Briggs has resigned as superintendent of the Chelmsford-Carlisle-Dunstable school district to accept the position as master of the Shepard grammar school in Lynn. Mr. Briggs says he was induced to accept the position by the offer of $400 a year increase in salary over that paid in the present position and by his desire to broaden his experience by teaching in the schools of a larger city.

Mr. Briggs will be remembered as a former master of the Wadleigh school.

Rev. and Mrs. D. A. Newton are at their cottage at Bass Rocks, Gloucester, for the month. Mr. Newton will continue supplying the Congregational pulpit at Reading.

The letter of Lewis Parkhurst on the fatalities caused by the grade crossing is an eye-opener. The simple fact is, that the terrible crossing of the B. and M. R. R. over the street is really a harmless affair, and has never been worth the hot air, time, money, and investigation it has cost.—Woburn Journal.

A SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT.

Jay B. Benton and E. R. [illegible] arrived in Boston Monday after a balloon trip which took them from Pittsfield, Mass., to Bennington, Vt., where they narrowly escaped landing on the monument marking the battlefield at Bennington. They were fortunately carried aside by a sudden current of wind. The balloon was in perfect condition when shipped back to Pittsfield.

The aeronauts' first course took them into New York over the Hudson river near Troy, from whence they were headed into Vermont. The highest altitude reached was 728 feet.

The landing was witnessed by a large number of guests at a hotel, over which the balloon had passed, who immediately made up automobile parties and followed the air craft for a short time till it descended.

PROGRAM A HELPFUL ONE.

Annual Convention of Mass. S. S. Association.

The Woburn district of the Massachusetts Sunday school association met in annual convention at the North Congregational Church last Friday evening. Twelve pastors, as many Sunday school superintendents and a large body of delegates were in attendance.

Preceding the business program there were department conferences conducted by Hamilton S. Conant for the adults, and Miss Dickinson of the Dudley street Church, Boston, for the primary and intermediate grades.

The convention, which proved to be one of the most helpful in the history of the district association, now in its 18th year, was opened with devotional exercises, led by Rev. John R. Chaffee of Winchester.

The officers elected were F. B. Jordan, Winchester, pres; C. A. Owen, Stoneham, vice pres.; C. Forrest Richardson, Woburn, sec treas.; department secretaries, Charles H. Kimball, Woburn, elementary, including the junior, primary and kindergarten grades; Rev. Arthur Stanley Beale, Stoneham, senior, and E. C. Folkins, Wilmington, advanced grade, executive committee, Selwyn Graham, Burlington; W. G. Frazee, Wilmington, A. S. Hovey, Stoneham; S. G. Fenimore and Henry E. Langham, Winchester. Percy A. Yarnold rendered a vocal solo.

Rev. Thomas Simms of Melrose gave an address on "The Personal Element in Religious Life."

After congregational singing there were addresses on "What Are We Doing in Our Sunday Schools?" by Rev. Henry B. Williams, DD., of Woburn, Rev. Henry E. Hodge of Winchester and Rev. Arthur S. Beale of Stoneham. The closing exercises were in charge of Rev. George H. Tilton of the North Church.

HE SAW THE "SHOWER OF STARS."

E. B. Saunders tells of the Shower of Stars which he saw in 1833 which is so frequently alluded to in connection with the appearance of Halley's comet. He says:

"I remember the time well. I was living in Framingham at that time. I woke up and went to the window and looking out saw a wonderful sight. I have never met any one who said they saw the same sight. The air seemed full of stars. They looked larger than snowflakes.

"I have never heard what was the cause of that wonderful sight. They looked like fire. I have often thought I would like to see someone who could remember seeing the same sight. There cannot be many living who saw that beautiful sight."

Mr. Saunders was born in 1825 and is now 85 years old, but is still an interested [illegible].

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SOUND ADVICE.

Keep in mind the fact that this is possible for nearly every boy. It does not demand brilliancy, but simply thoughtfulness and application. The brilliant boy is the exception and too seldom found on on which to base any rule, and even that exceptional mortal will find that, when he "mixes it up" with the world, he will have to put up a good article of work and application to render his asset of any real value.

I have up to this point emphasized the importance of careful preparation for your life's work, and you will see that no very difficult or involved propositions are put before you. Keep in mind, therefore, that life at its best is simple and, if treated honestly and with sincere purpose, can be made successful in the broadest and best sense. But begin to day.

Let me at this time add that much of what has been said applies to the young woman as well as to the young man, for she is sharing to day as never before the responsible and paying positions. Opportunities for profitable and dignified employment for young women are practically without limit, and I know personally of many women who are filling positions of great responsibility who are satisfied and happy in their work because they are finding that faithfulness in effort, and a purpose to improve their position are being appreciated and rewarded.

To those of your members who will graduate this year and enter business in the early summer and fall, let me suggest if the work you are to take up is not decided on, settle this question at the first possible moment, for you need all the time obtainable to make a wise decision as to the line of business or work you wish to undertake, and it is demoralizing to change after you have taken a position.

To those who will have one or more years' opportunity to fit themselves here in school for their work, I would say, business at its best, is today recognized as a profession, a very exacting and broadening one. Therefore, make these years your post graduate course, exactly as the young lawyer or doctor fits himself for his profession by special study. You should begin at once to decide on what your life work is to be and to work, observe and think along that line in some measure as you would were you today to be engaged in any of the leading businesses of the times and your employer decided to send you to school for further training.

I think I have spoken enough on preparation, and, if these lines which have been very imperfectly [illegible], shall be followed, there will need to be little said suggestive of your conduct [illegible] I would [illegible] [illegible] generally accepted ideas of the times, and I mention them here and at this time because they are important and liable to be overlooked in the rush of life.

Having entered upon your life work there are three principles that should have an important place in your individual equipment, and they are these:

Initiative, Co-operation, Service.

Initiative. A mighty word, full of meaning and the basis of accomplishment, one of the highest and most desirable qualities, for it means giving to the world the result of one's own thought and constructive ability. It is the outcome of studying yourself and your work or undertaking. Be satisfied to work on the lines laid down by your superiors until you can, by study, devotion and enthusiasm, evolve lines that can be shown to be better. This creative force will be recognized and rewarded, for every department of the World's Work stands in perpetual need of it. Realize for a moment the changed and advanced conditions under which we are living in comparison with those prevailing in your father's day, only a short generation ago, and realize that we owe it all to the initiative of the individual. We lose sight of it in its cumulative condition but, if you stop to think, you will realize that it is all through result of individual thought and ambition. Therefore, contribute your share to the advance in accomplishment and civilization that is bound to take place during the next twenty-five years, during which time your powers will attain their highest and most effective strength.

Lorin Deland, in one of his books, cites the case of a salesman in a large clothing store who applied for an increase in salary. His superior said "You are now being paid all you are earning but, if you will within the next month, suggest some plan by which this business can be increased, even in a slight way, I will recommend you for an increase at the end of the month." At the appointed time the salesman appeared but had to acknowledge his inability to suggest anything that would increase the business. He was [illegible] [illegible] the expenses of the store could be decreased, [illegible]

[illegible] the service he was then rendering, and few concerns care to load themselves with that kind of material. If the concern is to grow, then it must have an organization that will grow too, and in your seeking for a position, make sure to connect yourself with a company that is a growing one, and, remember that if the concern grows and you do not, there will be a separation which you will regret. So determine within yourself to grow by thoughtfulness and initiative.

Co-operation. Co-operation is a large word, and it is well that it is, for it has a large meaning. None of us who ignore the importance of working with others can live and develop broadly. This does not mean that our individuality or character must be dwarfed by compromise. It does mean that we must contribute and combine the strength and talent that is ours with that of others of like purpose to ours in furtherance of the object for which we are striving. Here again we may find a comparison in your athletics. It is not the team whose members are starring all the time that wins the most games, but the perfect co-operation of catcher and pitcher, catcher with the basemen and the sacrifice of the batsman to the men on bases that really wins the largest number of games, and this principle is being recognized more in the field of athletics than ever before. The player who will not blend himself in the whole team is not thought highly of and his powers for usefulness are very much limited. It is exactly so in business, and you must carry into any undertaking the spirit of "Give and Take" that will enable you to work cheerfully with others. At no time in your business or professional life will you find it possible to ignore this important principle and succeed, for, if you should become an employer and the head of a large business, then even more than at any other time will you need the hearty and happy co-operation of those who make up the organization.

Here is another very important feature in your life that you can begin to develop to day by co-operating with your parents and teachers. You may not have thought of it but there has been considerable capital invested in you already and it is being increased in amount every day. You can make this investment satisfactory and profitable to all concerned by economizing your time and effort. Wise and prompt decision on this point is the most important thing in your life at present.

So, co-operate. Work with others. Team work is the ideal. This need not stifle your ambition to excel or to lead. The nearer you can get to the leader by honorable methods, the more enjoyable and satisfying your work will be. Unworthy or selfish ambition, however, finds no place in this plan of life. You [illegible] this out in your school life and [illegible] more than ever before. The leader among you must have his heart and brain developed as well as his muscle and physique and the person who relies on his "chestiness" to impress soon finds his influence and leadership gone.

You should study to observe the conduct and carriage of successful men. You will find that observation will be of greatest service in your life's work. It will be the most economical and effective method of adding to your knowledge. It is being recognized by educators today that the aim of schools and colleges should be, not only to train one how to think, but how to make use of one's advantages, and one of the greatest advantages that can come to a young man is to be brought into daily contact with men of broad business and social accomplishment. It is impossible to over estimate this opportunity. You should bring the greatest respect and reverence to it, for it is an asset that has been gained by years of service, devotion and sacrifice. Realize this and realize your good fortune in having it placed at your disposal free. It is simply your part to think and act on the suggestions and directions resulting from a life of accomplishment built up by years of application patience and persistence.

Just at this point let me dwell on this very important word of "patience." The thoughtful person will do well to appropriate this characteristic, for it is one of the most valuable traits to cultivate and it is one the whole American nation needs to observe carefully. How often we see instances where impatience to become rich or powerful results in disgrace and disaster. It need not always take the form of recklessness to the extent suggested by these words, but I have seen many instances where impatience with conditions and a restlessness resulting from lack of thought and consideration have resulted in fellows throwing up good positions and every opportunity for advancement and growth. Of course, I do not suggest lack of ambition and hustle to succeed but you must learn that growth is based upon knowledge and experience, and the right use of these very important [illegible], and these can be gained only [illegible] day by day count [illegible] all this work is [illegible] In every detail is [illegible] comparable to the kind of work [illegible] must do in building [illegible] character and accomplishment.

While the qualities I seem to emphasize [illegible] yet they are attainable if we strive [illegible] to grow in that direction.

When I seem to place [illegible] importance upon individual effort to excel and succeed I would not have you feel that it was for your own happiness and contentment that I placed. All these features or characteristics I mention as of importance, if persistently sought for and developed, tend toward strength and self-control, and it is the individual who possesses these qualities who can be of greatest service to the world and that should be the goal of all our striving and ambition.

While I have endeavored to suggest lines which, if carefully followed, would render your success in a worldly way possible, yet we all know that worldly success is in itself not a high or inspiring ideal. The business and professional world has thousands of examples of men who are from the purely worldly or selfish standpoint successes but sadly deficient when considered from the standpoint of service to their fellow-men, but even they are fast learning that such success is shallow and unsatisfactory, and the ranks of those who live to serve are gaining additions every day.

So, I would in conclusion urge you to strive, by making it a part of whatever occupation you undertake, to develop and build yourself morally and mentally through the discipline which determination to fight your battles honestly, courageously and thoughtfully will bring. You will then have gained an experience and an inspiration that will make the service you render to mankind one of real and lasting benefit. Then, whether riches and distinction from the worldly stand-point come to you or are withheld you will have the greater and fuller satisfaction in having developed the best side of your nature and of having devoted it to the service and upbuilding of your fellow man, and in the last analysis, that should be the motive of our life.

The Middlesex County Taxpayers Association have employed a leading Boston Lawyer to manage their case against the Middlesex County Commissioners, Sheriff and others composing what is called the "County Ring" before Attorney General Malone, who will hear and investigate it at an early date.

Dr. Campbell, bacteriologist for the milk inspection department, testified to his examination of samples of milk taken from a wagon in South Boston, and estimated that one sample contained 800,000 bacteria and from estimate there were 3,000,000 bacteria in the other sample. Is life worth the living amid so much bacteria!

When corn could be laid down "on track" in the east for 30 cents a bushel there may have been some excuse for the New England farm depending on the "corn belt" for this important product. For the past ten years, however, the price in the eastern States has ranged from 70 to 90 cents a bushel. Careful calculations show that corn can be raised on New England farms at a cost of from 30 to 45 cents per bushel (shelled), hence it is a profitable crop to raise.

Chancellor Day of Syracuse University in his annual report Wednesday said: "We believe that but for the insane assaults upon the commerce of the country, upon railways and manufacture, from which there is small immediate relief, as the politicians do not seem to have discovered any other issue of equal demagogic effect, we would be able to report a couple of million more of increase in our endowments. The present aspect of the country are not flattering. No one can really tell what property is, until after the supreme court's decision in the coming autumn"

A Good Selection.

It is believed quite generally that the Selectmen made no mistake when they elected Mr. George H. Eustis to fill out the unexpired term of Town Treasurer Spurr, who retires at the end of the present month owing to the demands of his private business. Mr. Eustis has been a resident of Winchester for a great many years, is a man of the highest integrity and has always been deeply interested in the affairs of the town, at the present time being a trustee of the town library. Of his fitness for the office it may be mentioned that for many years he was the bookkeeper and financial man for a large business concern in Boston, also treasurer of the Unitarian Society. At the present time he is the treasurer of the Calumet Club. In all of these positions he has given entire satisfaction and undoubtedly he will also do so as the town treasurer of Winchester.

Mr. Pond's Address.

The STAR prints elsewhere in this issue the address given by Mr. Preston Pond at the High School last week. Coming from one of our own townspeople who has achieved notable success in the business world, these observations and reflections should convey to the youth of Winchester a lesson to be taken seriously to heart. In these modern days young people have life made rather easy for them, perhaps too easy; they are spared not only the hardships, but, unfortunately, much of the training and discipline which contributed so markedly to the achievements of their fathers. It is well to pause a while and earnestly weigh the words of a man as sensible, clear-headed and public spirited as Mr. Pond.

GALA DAY JUNE 17TH

The Winchester Boat Club will open its season on June 17th with one of the best programs of racing and entertainment yet given in the history of the club. The entertainment committee have been hard at work preparing for the day, and as a result of their labors a most interesting regatta is assured.

The sports will open in the afternoon directly following the Lawson Trophy Race for the High school crews at 2 o'clock. Eight events are scheduled, consisting of the following races.

Tandem lady and gentleman
Tail end race
Single blade
Tandem—gentlemen
Tip over race
Tilting
German novelty race
Hurry-scurry race

In the evening, commencing at eight o'clock, an entertainment will be given of a musical nature. Among the artists who will take part are Miss Rachel E. M. Morton, soprano; Miss Lena E. Tufts, contralto and Mrs. Mabel Dearborn Schofield. Following the concert dancing will be enjoyed until the close of the evening

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

Faster than in our own country which poses as a democracy goes on the cause of justice to women, east of the Atlantic. The Woman's Journal recently announced that "In Norway, by a great majority, the Odelsting has voted to extend municipal suffrage to 200,000 women who have thus far been deprived of it because they lacked an income amounting to about $100 a year.

In 1901, municipal suffrage was granted to the 300,000 women in Norway, who had such an income or whose husbands had it. Six years later, full Parliamentary suffrage was extended to the same 300,000 women: but the 200,000 poorer women remained up to this time without any political rights. Now too they are beginning to come into their own."

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank all our friends for their words of sympathy and their deeds of kindness on the occasion of our recent sore affliction. We wish to make especial mention of the singing by Mr. Lidman and of the comforting and helpful address by Mr. Osborne at the funeral services, and to express our sincere gratitude for the beautiful floral offerings presented by the school children, the members of the Winchester Brass Band, the Sunday School of the Second Congregational Church, and other kind friends. Surely our friends have borne with us the burden of our experience, and have shared with us our deep sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill and family.

HOW TO CLEAN A HORSE.

A Central Park West woman has a coachman who has some ideas of his own. Of late the horses have looked particularly well groomed and sleek.

"What have you done to the horses," inquired the pleased mistress, "that they look so much nicer than they used to."

"Well, you see," replied John, "I've been borrowing the vacuum cleaner from the maid and using it to clean the horses every morning. It certainly does th' work in good shape, ma'am." N. Y. Sun.

Winchester A. A. will play Medford A. A. Saturday, June 11th at Manchester Field, and North Woburn F. C. June 17th at 3.30. Both of these teams scored a win over Winchester last year and the local boys will see that they don't repeat the trick this year.

"That bringeth forth its fruit in its season."

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

There is nothing in the bill prohibiting blank cartridge pistols and cannon crackers over two inches in length which prohibits fireworks, but leaves that to the cities and towns to regulate by ordinances and by-laws. Those places which attempt to be too strict on the 4th of July will overdo it, for reasonable use of fireworks and fire crackers cannot be stopped, as the people will not stand for it. We do not want flower shows or pink teas to celebrate the national holiday with, but appropriate and civilized exercises without the death-dealing actions of the past.

Representative Fay seems to be following in the Lawrence wake in his votes on railroad bills lately.

The Attorney General says our grade crossing question will have very careful consideration before the petition's dismissal is agreed to. It should have very much more than the last town meeting gave it certainly.

It looks as if the legislature would finish up next week. On the whole it has done pretty well.

LAWSON TROPHY RACE JUNE 17TH.

The final arrangements for the Lawson trophy canoe race have resulted in the decision to have it paddled on the afternoon of June 17th. The finish of the race will be off the Medford Boat Club float at the lower end of the lake. The race is scheduled to start at 2 p. m.

The Winchester crew has shown up the strongest this season in the history of the High school, and with such an excellent crew, a new boat especially designed and built for this one race, should win the event. Arthur Mather, well known as a paddler of the Medford Boat Club, has been coaching the boys, evidently picking them as winners over the Medford High crew, as he always favors the best material.

In a practice race two weeks ago, the Winchester boys defeated both the first and second crews of the Medford Boat Club. This is pretty fast work, as that club usually has among its paddlers the best men in this vicinity. The Winchester crew is composed of Harry Locke, stroke, John Sheridan, 2, Leon Tuck, 3 and Andrew Hanson, captain and stern.

PLAYGROUND.

Mr. L. R. Martin of the International Y. M. C. A. Training School of Springfield, Mass. has been engaged by the Park Board to take charge of Manchester Field this summer. Under his supervision this will be developed into a typical playground for children of all ages. He arrived last Monday and is busily at work laying his plans for the summer. A further notice in more detail will appear later.

BASE BALL.

In a fast, interesting game at Everett, Wednesday afternoon, Winchester was defeated by the speedy Everett team 7-1. Excepting for the second inning the game was very close and well fought throughout. Winchester outhit their opponents and the game would have been much closer but for Tuck's wildness in the second combined with a slip-up on a fine chance to make a double play. With the bases full and one run in, Brickley hit to Mathews who threw to Meinke at the plate getting his man on a force out. Meinke waited to tag the runner, losing Brickley at first. Morando followed with a three bagger which cleaned the bases and settled the game. Grant was injured in the first by sliding into the plate and Flinn took his place. Hilton going to right field.

Meinke caught a good game considering the fact that this was the first time he has played with the regular team. The team as a whole played well and Everett secured but one run due to any fielding errors.

Winchester's run was scored on Mathew's hit followed by a three-bagger by Saltmarsh.

Winchester Public Library.

Winchester Public Library, May 31—June 18. Exhibition of Photographs loaned by The Library Art Club. The Medici Family in Florence. Presented by Miss Anna Blake Shaw.

The city of Florence was governed by the Medici family from the elder Cosimo, 1389–1464, to Gian Gastone, 1671–1737, first as a republic, later as a duchy. With the death of Gastone the family became extinct. It was celebrated for the number of statesmen which it produced, and for its patronage of art and letters.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The season of the John Craig Stock Company will end next week with a special double entertainment. Opening the programme will come the merry farce in three acts, "Mrs. Temples Telegram." The comic tangle is highly amusing, and Mr. Craig's players will have the best opportunity to make the most of its humors. Mr. Craig will play the leading male roll, Miss Young the heroine, and there will be a good part for everybody.

As a wind up to the program, the double bill will have for its second part, Sheridans farce, "The Critic," in which Mr. Craig made a hit some years ago during his management of another Boston theatre. This play will give the actors a chance for the liveliest and most novel of fun making, and it will certainly be a pleasure to the audience to hear Mr. Craig, Miss Young, Miss Bailey, Mr. Meek, Mr. Hassel addressed by their own names and in their own persons behind the foo lights.

A week from Monday, June 20th, the summer opera season opens at the Castle Square with the "Mikado" as the opening piece. Harry Davies, Donald Meek and George Hassell among old favorites, and Ethel Balch, Mary Sherwood, George Crampton, Vera Roberts and Clarence Chute among newcomers, will constitute the leading members of the company.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

There has been nobody on the stage in recent years who has attracted more attention and caused more widespread comment than Madam Chung, the little Chinese actress who is appearing at Keith's in Loie Fuller's remarkable production, "The Dragons of Wrath." Madam Chung has certainly a remarkable personality. She is petite, typically Chinese, and with all the dignity of a princess, the part which she takes in this big spectacle. Of course it is something intended entirely for Americans, and for this reason Madam Chung has not had as much opportunity as she would in a Chinese play.

Other features of the bill will be Augusta Grose, the famous entertainer who gives impersonations of store models; Bert Leslie and his company in the slang classic, 'Hogan in Society;' Wynn and Lee with their quick fire comedy; Melrose and Kennedy, the knockabout comedians; Cross and Josephine in songs and dances, and Gallaway, the famous cartoonist from "Puck."

Newsy Paragraphs.

Mrs. Eugene E. Young of No. 14 Glen road, Winchester, has sold her house and about 15,000 square feet of land to Emmelyn S. Rogers of Lynn, Mass. Edward T. Harrington Co. were the brokers. Through the office of these brokers the following houses have also been rented Marcellus Coggan's No. 11 Sheffield road to A. B. Conant of Boston. Mrs. E. J. Call's, No. 26 Ogden avenue to Mr. B. T. Stephenson of Winchester. Blank Bros., No. 1 Eaton Court to Mr. C. C. Douglas of Boston.

Last Friday afternoon two youngsters said to live in the neighborhood of Park road, received a bad spill when riding a bicycle down Main street near Black Horse terrace. One boy was on the handlebars, and the steep hill proved too much for the steersman, who ran into the curbing. The boys were badly cut and bruised and were taken into the office of a nearby physician who patched them up and had them conveyed to their homes.

The wedding of Miss Amy Worden to Mr. Frederick S. Osgood will take place on June 28th at her residence 5446 West Indiana Street, Chicago, Ill. Owing to recent death in the family, the wedding will be private, only family and intimate friends attending. The wedding trip will be spent in the Canadian Rockies, returning via Vancouver and Seattle. Mr. and Mrs. Osgood will make their home at Rangeley, Winchester.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The June meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held Friday, the seventeenth, in connection with the outing for the Willard Settlement class at the home of Mrs. Hamilton, 31 Vine street. It will be an out door affair if the weather is pleasant, consisting chiefly of a brief business session aside from the social features. Visitors are welcome, especially those interested in the settlement.

Members of the Union are reminded that the annual fee is due and those who have not already paid may do so at the meeting or at any time by sending to Miss Eugenia E. Elliott, treasurer. Also those who wish to give something to the Flower Mission Fund in memory of Mrs. Rowe may hand it to Miss Elliott or to Mrs. J. C. Adams, who has charge of the Flower Mission work. Contributions of flowers for the Saturday distributions are also solicited.

Last week was held the second of the series of Loyal Temperance Legion meetings at the Methodist Church, Mrs. Clara A. Hogan of Watertown was the speaker and after the meeting ice cream was served by members of the Union in charge of Mrs. Dover. It is hoped in the fall to have a regular L. T. L. organization, affiliated with the Junior League.

This week the World's W. C. T. U. is in session in Glasgow and judging even from the scanty reports in the Associated Press it is a record breaker for size and enthusiasm. Mere meetings for the best of causes do not warrant as much space as a sensational divorce case or an aviation meet, at present. It is however the duty of those interested to educate the public up to the point of demanding better reports of the things that make for good and then the press will gladly furnish as much as is needed.

OUTDOOR VAUDEVILLE.

Boston is to have one of the biggest outdoor vaudeville and hippodrome entertainments in the country beginning Monday evening, June 13 when the American League base ball grounds, Huntington avenue—the home of the famous "Red Sox" team, will be converted into the "Airdome."

The plan is to offer the highest priced programme that can be gotten together at the very lowest cost to the public and still profit through the immense seating capacity of the grounds. There will be 15,000 seats at 10c, 3000 at 15c, 2000 at 25c in addition to the hundreds of box seats and it is promised that the entertainment will include "Everything new under the moon" and "The best of everything under the sun."

For the opening week of the Airdome the management promises a bill of sensational interest. The programme will be marked by variety and "class" and will include acts of daring and acts that will amuse; graceful acts and grotesque acts, in fact, the fifteen big numbers in the ring and on the open air stage will run the entire gamut of clean, bright outdoor entertainment.

Feel's famous Band will contribute the musical part of the entertainment every week day evening and Saturday matinee, while a special concert by this organization will be given on Sunday evenings together with the very latest of moving pictures.

A PRISON HORROR.

Awful Fate of a Russian Political Offender.

David Soskice writes in McClure's Magazine of the horrors of the Schluesselburg, Russia's political prison.

"Grachevsky, unable to stand his life any longer," says he, "struck a guard in order to be executed. But the commandant of the fortress declared him to be insane and therefore exempt from punishment.

"'Then,' said Grachevsky, 'it remains for me but to kill myself.' He was taken to the 'stable' and kept there under most vigilant watch.

"'One night,' related Ludmilla Volkenstein, 'a terrible, inhuman shriek was heard. Footsteps hurried toward Grachevsky's cell. Feeble groans followed, and then his door was quickly opened, and it was evident that something terrible had happened to him. Smoke and the smell of burnt clothing and flesh pervaded the building and hung about it till the following day. We then knew that Grachevsky had burnt [illegible]. He had soaked his clothes and bedding with the oil from the little night lamp and, rolling himself up in his blanket, had set it on fire. For several days beforehand he had disarmed the suspicions of his guards by exceedingly rational behavior, so that they had relaxed their watchfulness a little and enabled him to commit the dreadful deed.'"

STONE AGE CUSTOMS.

Ancient Habits Still Endure Among Natives of Rural Roumania.

Customs and habits directly traceable back to the end of the stone age are still observed by the inhabitants of the remoter parts of rural Roumania, says Dr. Emil Fischer of Bucharest in the Umschau. The latest statistics show that there are still in Roumania over 51,000 cave dwellings in existence, in which a quarter of a million peasant folk live. These caves are almost as primitive in their arrangements as the original cave dwellings of the stone age.

As recently as in the eighties millet, the oldest Indo-Germanic grain, was still crushed in Roumania by means of hand mills and stored in peculiarly shaped granaries similar to those used by the natives of central Africa. To-day the Roumanian peasants still use an ancient plow. At funerals a repast named coliva is partaken of consisting of scalded and boiled corn the exact way corn was first prepared and eaten by the tribes of Europe.

Even today wild apples and wild pears are the only fruit known to the Roumanian peasant, and his vegetables are wild herbs boiled with oil pressed from sunflower [illegible] and [illegible] seed. Medical men are [illegible] known among the peasantry as wizards.

He Had Learned It.

Willie, five years old, was in his father's office one afternoon waiting to go home with him. Mr. S. was very much occupied, in fact, so much so that he had quite forgotten that his young son was sitting behind him. At length the telephone rang, and Mr. S. was told that there was a long distance call for him. He called "Hello" a number of times, and just when his patience had about given out central rang vigorously while the receiver was still at his ear. At this Mr. S. uttered a terrible and forbidden word.

The words were no sooner out of his mouth than he remembered that his son was but a few feet from him. Wheeling about in his chair, he said, with humility:

"That was very wrong of father to say those naughty words, Willie. I hope," he added, "that my little boy will never use such dreadful language."

"I—I won't never say it, papa," replied the child, with a mischievous twinkle in his eye, "but I l-learned it all the same!"—Harper's Magazine.

The Pun.

The golden age of the pun in Britain was the reign of King James I., the "Stuart Solomon." That learned sovereign was himself a passable punster and made few privy councilors or bishops who were not reputed to be good at a quip. It was therefore in his day that the pun appeared with pomp and dignity. It had been before admitted into merry speeches and ludicrous compositions, but was now delivered with great gravity from the pulpit or pronounced in the most solemn manner at the council table. The greatest authors in their most serious works made frequent use of puns.—London Globe.

Mistaken Identity.

"Oh, doctor, he growled so savagely I was sure he was mad even before he went on in such a biting way."

"I beg pardon, madam, but is it your large dog or your small pet one you are speaking of?"

"Law, doctor, it isn't my dog I am talking about. It's my husband."—Baltimore American.

SYLVESTER CALL.

VETERAN B. & N. R. R. EMPLOYEE.

Last Sunday Sylvester Call, known all over the Boston and Northern as "Vet" rounded out his seventieth year and quietly celebrated his seventy-first birthday. He is hale and hearty and today at his work, was much more active than many men at forty.

"Vet" first saw the light of day in the little town of Newport, N. H., and was the son of Calvin and Eliza (Brockway) Call. His father was a soldier and served 7 years in the war of 1812. He died at the age of 85. When a young man of twenty "Vet" moved to Burlington, Mass., where he worked as a market gardener for a few years. In 1866 he moved to North Woburn and found employment in the Cummings tannery where he stayed eight years. In 1874 he entered the employ of the horse car company as driver and with the late John Russell as conductor, piloted a horse car to Woburn from North Woburn village many years.

Later when the tracks were extended to Medford, he continued and when the electric car took the place of the horse car "Vet" acted as motorman.

To him belongs the honor of driving the first horse car and first electric car that ever entered Winchester and Medford from Woburn.

Some years ago, "Vet" retired from the arduous duties of motorman and was given a position with the Company which gave him the the care of all the switches, curves, and turnouts on the North Woburn division and his superintendent commends his work highly.

A VINDICTIVE KNIFE.

The Weapon That Tried Several Times to Kill Kipling.

My mind has flown back down the years to London and to the large corner room on the second floor, Villiers street, Embankment Gardens. On the wall fronting the Thames hangs the most vicious looking knife I have ever seen. It is serpentine in shape and its downward point is as sharp as a needle.

"What a villainous weapon!" I said.

"Yes," replied Kipling, and I forgot the name he gave it or the section of India from which it came. "That knife has tried to kill me several times. It's always on the watch. When I got it there was affixed to it, like a button on a foil, one joint of a man's backbone. The knife had been run into the vertebrae, given a savage twist and brought away with it a piece of human framework."

As he spoke he approached the glittering, snakelike knife.

"Don't touch it!" I cried. "You ought to keep it in a locked box."

He didn't touch it, so far as I saw, but as he raised his hand the knife dropped like a plummet and stood quivering in the floor within an inch of his foot.

"Look at that!" he said and stood there without moving a muscle until I saw how nearly the sinister blade had come to [illegible] his foot.—Robert Barr in [illegible]

How much time do you lose making the trip to the Pay Station?

A COSTLY ACCIDENT.

The Wave of a Hand, an Upset Ink Bottle and Bankruptcy.

The mere motion of a hand ruined Cobbett & Co., one of the largest and wealthiest of English engineering firms. They and an American firm tendered bids for the building of the great Kaura bridge for the Russian government. Jacob Cobbett, who was the brain and center of the business, spent six months in the designing and contracting and had all his plans ready. His bid was accepted, and material was bought in enormous quantities. A time limit had been set both for the commencement and finish, and Cobbett was perfecting his plans and making sure of the smallest details, with all the formula spread out on the table before him, when he stretched out his hand, overturned an ink pot and drowned the most important of the papers in a black sea.

Cobbett had a poor memory. In a fever of anxiety he tried to reconstruct his plans from stray notes. It was impossible, and he asked of the Russian government for more time. Time was refused, and Russia repudiated the contract on the ground of delay, as the agreement allowed. Cobbett could not get his work through in time, and the Yankee firm, which now advanced a cheaper tender, with cut and dried plans, got the job. The loss drove Cobbett & Co. to bankruptcy, and the great Kaura bridge in Russia is American built.—London Scraps.

THE WOODEN HORSE.

An Old Time Form of Military Punishment In England.

Torture on a grand scale in England went out with Felton, the assassin of Buckingham, but torture on a small scale continued to be practiced on military offenders down to the eighteenth century. The form most frequently resorted to was that known as the wooden horse, to ride which was the punishment accorded for petty thefts, insubordination and so on. The wooden horse was made of planks nailed together so as to form a sharp ridge or angle about eight or nine feet long. This ridge represented the back of the horse and was supported by four posts or legs about five feet high placed on a stand made movable by truckles. To complete the resemblance to the noblest animal in creation a head and tail were added.

When a soldier was sentenced, either by court martial or by his commanding officer, to ride the horse he was placed on the brute's back with his hands tied behind him and frequently enough, in order to increase the pain, muskets were fastened to his legs to weigh them down or, as was jocularly said, to prevent the fiery, untamed barebacked steed from kicking him off.—London Graphic.

Decayed Families

We have known Morleys who were entirely ignorant of the race from which they came. Sometimes it is far otherwise. The family of Conyers is a remarkable example. It ceased in the last baronet, Sir Thomas, who died in 1810 without male issue. He would have passed away in the parish workhouse of Chester-le-street had not Robert Surtees of Mainsforth, the historian of the county palatine of Durham, and other generous neighbors intervened. To the last he showed that he was well aware of the dignity of the house he represented and for some time declined to receive assistance from his friends. Another remarkable case is that of Grenville. This family was noteworthy in the wars of the Caroline period, yet as time passed sank so low that two of its members were at one time receiving parish relief, and one of them, evidently by some mistake which it is difficult to account for, was twice picked for high sheriff at the very time he was a pauper.—London Athenaeum.

Four Useful Senses.

The naturalist of Wobrook-in-the-Hills had pointed out a rabbit squatting close under a bush, and the ladies had declared in chorus that they could not see the little animal.

"How do you manage to see everything?" asked one of the party, with flattering inflection.

"Well," began the naturalist confidently, "'tain't altogether seeing. Sometimes I see, but when I can't see with my eyes I smell things with my nose, and when I can't smell things with my nose I hear 'em with my ears, and when I can't hear with my ears I prickle all over."—Youth's Companion.

Curacao's Good Schools.

In all Curacao schools, from the most exclusive to the humblest government school, in which the little black or parchment Dutch twigs are bent, Dutch, French, Spanish, English and Papiemento are used and taught. By the neighboring islands and even on the mainland and as far away as Central America these schools are highly regarded, and a large number of foreign children are sent to Curacao to get their education.—Charles Johnson Post in Century.

ONE CHANGE ON TICKET

Republicans Do Not Expect Any More Than That

FITZGERALD ON MR. LODGE

Mayor Very Much Disturbed at Acts of Civil Service Commission—Outlook For Business Not Improving

It looked at one time as if the poor health of Henry E. Turner of Malden would probably necessitate the nomination of a new man for state auditor. Mr. Turner has now returned to his duties after a considerable period spent in the south and is at his office every day. He is very much improved in health and will be a candidate for re-election this fall. Several other names have been mentioned in connection with the nomination, among them that of Representative Albert P. Langtry of Springfield. Mr. Langtry, however, is said to have assured Mr. Turner that if the latter wishes to retain the position, he will not himself be a candidate.

There will, however, be one vacancy to fill on the state ticket, that of a nominee for attorney general, as Hon. Dana Malone, who now occupies the position, has announced his intention of retiring at the expiration of his present term. The position of attorney general is one of the highest to which a lawyer may aspire in the line of his profession, and is usually a coveted prize. So far two have announced their intention to be candidates—District Attorney James M. Swift of the southern district, and District Attorney W. Scott Peters of the eastern district. Mr. Swift is an aggressive candidate, while Mr. Peters is willing to accept the nomination if the people of the state desire it, but has said that he will not make any break-neck race to secure it.

Fitzgerald's Attack on Mr. Lodge

Republicans have read with considerable interest Mayor Fitzgerald's recent utterances in regard to Senator Lodge and the possibility of his defeat for re-election to the United States senate. It is doubtful, however, if his plan for a combination of anti-Lodge Republican and Democratic members of the legislature will appeal to any except Democrats. Party leaders regard Mr. Lodge as one of the very ablest and most powerful men who have ever represented the commonwealth in the senate of the United States. The number of those in the Republican party who do not desire his re-election is comparatively small. Even these can hardly be pleased at the alternative which Mr. Fitzgerald presents of electing a Democrat to succeed Mr. Lodge.

The Civil Service Commission

It is evident that Mr. Fitzgerald is considerably disturbed because of the rejection by the civil service commission of some of those whom he has appointed for public office in the city of Boston. It has been his fond hope that he might secure such changes in the Boston charter as would give him an absolutely free hand in the appointment of men to office in that city. Many believe that he has made appointments which he knew would not be confirmed in the hope of creating so much feeling against the civil service commission as to induce members of the legislature to amend the charter in this respect. He seems to many to be bending his energies in that direction, and he did not hesitate to try to use to the recent untimely death of former Mayor Hibbard to make political capital against some of his opponents in particular and the Republican party in general. Unfortunately his campaign along these lines has been taken in good faith by some people who ought to know a real issue from a sham. It would have been well if those people could have been reminded of the repeated attacks which Mr. Fitzgerald made on Mayor Hibbard a few short months ago, while he was alive.

Confidence Begets Good Business

It has seldom been more apparent than it is at the present time that the foundation of good business is confidence. The outlook for the future is not as promising along business and manufacturing lines as it was a few [illegible] ago, and it is probable that business and manufacturing will not be very brisk until after the state and congressional elections in November. The threat of a Democratic congress is causing people to hesitate in regard to making any radical moves along the lines of business or manufacturing expansion. The country has no confidence in the ability of the Democratic party to promote the prosperity of the country if its blunders of 1895 were forgotten and it was given another opportunity. There are many persons who have large business interests even among Democrats who are sufficiently frank to admit that while they believe in most of the Democratic principles, they do not believe the Democratic party is sufficiently trusted by the business, financial, and manufacturing interests of the nation to make government by that party a success. For that reason many of these Democrats vote the Republican ticket in self-defense when there seems to be a prospect that their party may carry the elections. No one can expect good business on a foundation of uncertainty and fear. It is seventeen years since the Democratic panic of 1893. A large proportion of this year's voters were not voters then and do not realize what a lesson the country was then given of the dangers of unrest. Business interests have longer memories, and for their own protection and the protection of their thousands of employes, they will be found working for gradual constructive progress along Republican lines rather than for hasty destructive action along Democratic lines.

THE BEST MAN.

At One Time He Was More Useful Than Ornamental.

Do you know how "the best man," who plays so important a part in marriages that have any pretense to be fashionable, once upon a time in Sweden occupied a position that was useful as well as ornamental?

In olden days the Swedish bridegroom found it desirable, in fact, to have several "best men" to defend him from the assaults of rivals and prevent them from carrying away his bride. The Scandinavian warrior of ancient times was far too lofty in his ideas to condescend to plead for a maiden's hand. So he patiently waited until some other man who was more gallant had obtained the fair one's consent.

Then when all the details had been nicely arranged the proud warrior, with a body of well trained retainers, dashed down on the wedding party and, if strong enough, carried away the bride.

The "best men" (and it was very essential that they should be the best men in those days) therefore became necessary fixtures to marriage ceremonies, and they were so well esteemed and their popularity became so permanent that when the reason for their existence was in course of time removed they were still retained.—Pearson's Weekly.

A HARD WORKER.

His Soiled Appearance Brought Him a Raise In Salary.

The eccentric proprietor of a large newspaper in London had a way of appearing in the composing and press rooms at the most unexpected times, and as his visits often resulted in a general shakeup of the working forces of the paper they were awaited with fear and trembling by the employees.

One time one of the pressmen, an excellent workman, who had been there many years, but was sometimes guilty of a lapse of sobriety, had a black eye and was in a quandary as to what excuse he should offer if the proprietor noticed it. By a sudden inspiration he seized an ink roller and daubed some ink on his face, quite covering the discoloration. Presently the governor came in and, with the foreman, went through the room, commenting on every detail and looking very sharply at every workman. When about to leave he suddenly pointed to the inky pressman and said, "What is that man's name?"

The man quaked in his shoes until he heard the governor continue slowly: "I want you to give that man 5 shillings a week more wages. He is the only man in the room who looks as if he had been working."—London Telegraph.

I manufacture all kinds of good mattresses and sell them at retail. I find that among the best sellers, or those that are the most in demand are, first, my combination mattress, made of African and Poplar Fibres, with a good thick layer of clean cotton on the top and bottom, made up in the celebrated Webster [illegible] ticking in two parts, and sold for

This mattress is made to sleep on and for wear, as well, and is the best mattress that can be made for the price.

Another mattress that is fast growing in favor is one that I make of Silk Floss, the same kind that is used in sofa pillows. Silk floss is a non-absorbent vegetable fibre which grows near the equator. It never gets lumpy, and is extremely light and fleecy. The strong points of a Silk Floss Mattress are its lightness and softness, great qualifications for a mattress.

The Price is $12.00

I use the best hair ticking on this mattress, and if you have one in your guest chamber, you need not hesitate to ask your guests in the morning if they rested well.

A mattress that has always proved satisfactory in every way, and has added more to my reputation for making first class mattresses than any other, is the mattress that I make of pure South American horse-hair. This hair is taken from the manes and tails of live horses, and is thoroughly cleansed and purified, rendering it absolutely clean and wholesome. It does not absorb moisture, and will last a lifetime. It has great resilient qualities, and for sound sleep has no equal.

Price $20.00

Made in best ticking, two parts, five inch box, and full weight.

YOU CAN'T MOVE A LOT OF LAND.

It's there to stay.

Therefore, when buying a lot you want to be sure that it is in just the right location.

It should be in a location where the population is increasing. That will make the lot worth more from year to year.

In case, too, that you should want to sell, location is most important. That is worth considering.

BENEFITS OF FIRE INSURANCE.

Fire insurance has been thoroughly welded, as it were, at a white heat, into the fabric of modern enterprise, and is today as much of a staple among man's necessities as iron, wool meat or flour. It has passed into a proverb among business men that a business not worth insuring is not worth doing. Careful wholesale merchants will not knowingly sell to retail dealers who are not insured, and a prudent man would not engage in business at all did not insurance afford him a secure foundation. At this late day it is not often necessary to argue the necessity for fire insurance with those who have the intelligence to acquire insurable property. It is not only insurance, however, that is needed, but good insurance, such as is written by

THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXIX. NO. 49. WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1910. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

PLAYGROUNDS SOON TO BE OPENED.

Mr. [illegible] Chairman of the Park Board of Commissioners and Mr. R. [illegible] Martin, Supervisor of Playgrounds have been busy during the last week or two [illegible] apparatus for the playgrounds which are to be opened in Winchester during the next couple of weeks for the benefit of boys and girls of the town as well as for the older citizens.

An order has been placed with the Winchester News Co., for the latest approved Playground apparatus made by the A. G. Spalding and Bros., Manufacturers of Playground apparatus at Chicopee, Mass. The first order consists of swings, teeters, equipment for base ball, basket ball, playground ball and volley ball while sand boxes and other playground necessities are being made by a local contractor. If interest in the playground justifies the installation of more apparatus, it will be done later and will consist of more swings and teeters, giant stride and playground slide.

The School Committee have recently granted the use of the Chapin School grounds for playground purposes which with Manchester field will make two equipped and supervised playgrounds in Winchester. The Chapin School ground will be equipped for the use of the younger children and Manchester field for the older boys and girls.

Manchester field playground will be open from 9-12 in the morning and from 2-5 in the afternoon. The hours at the Chapin school grounds have not been fixed as yet owing to the fact that the Vacation school will be held there this summer and a conflict of these two activities will be avoided. Definite announcements as to the time will be made later.

A number of base ball teams are being organized by the boys of the town and within a short time a schedule will be arranged and leagues formed of these teams. Group games of various kinds will be introduced during the summer as well as a number of athletic competitions. With these various forms of amusement and recreation at their disposal the boys and girls of Winchester will have a summer full of enjoyment and pleasure and clearly justify the expenditure for establishing and maintaining playgrounds in this town.

NEW TRAIN TIME MONDAY.

The summer arrangement of the [illegible] railroad will go into effect on Monday, June 2[illegible]. As usual Winchester will receive the same excellent service as in years past [illegible] over the winter schedule. The changes are mostly confined to trains leaving during the middle of the forenoon and in the early evening, and with the exception of a few trains are simply a difference of from one to ten minutes from the old schedule.

Wedgemere will benefit by the addition of three inward and one outward trains.

The following changes in the Winchester time are worthy of note. The train now leaving at 10.27 for Boston will depart at 10.35 a. m.; the 11.25 at 11.37; the 11.53 will be discontinued, a new train will leave at 5.27 p. m.; the 6.19 will be discontinued, and new trains will leave at 6.33 and 9.03.

The 7.[illegible] a. m. train from Boston will leave at 6.55 with other changes of one or two minutes in the arrival and departure of the present trains.

Two new Sunday trains will be added, one leaving at 8.25 a. m., and one leaving at 10.15 p. m., both for Boston.

Wedgemere has three new trains for Boston, leaving at 5.55, 6.35 and 9.05 p. m., and the last train out at night, the 11.55, will stop there.

The [illegible] trains from both stations will remain the same up to [illegible] o'clock.

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday evening, June 11th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. McMillan, 11 Cottage avenue when their sister, Miss C. Madge McMillan, was married to Mr. Thomas Lupton, of Brookline, late of Windermere, England. The Rev. J. R. Chaffee officiated. The bride wore a very becoming dress of white net, and carried bridal roses. She was given away by her brother Mr. G. Henry McMillan, and was attended by her nephew Master Francis McMillan, bearing pink carnations. Mr. Joseph Cannon, of Brookline, was best man. The rooms were prettily decorated with flowers, ferns, etc., and the ceremony was performed beneath an arch of wild flowers, the effect of which was most pleasing and tasteful. Friends were present from Marion, Cambridge, Brookline and Dorchester. The couple will reside in Brookline.

THE FIELD OF POLITICS

Auditor Turner Has a Clear Field for Renomination

FITZGERALD'S APPOINTMENTS

Congressman Keliher Looks Like a Winner in Ninth District—Roosevelt Slated to Speak in Massachusetts Next Fall.

The events of the last few days have fully borne out the statement published in these columns last week that State Auditor Henry E. Turner of Malden will be a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket this fall. During the week Ex-Senator Potter of Worcester was quoted as saying that he understood that Mr Turner would retire at the end of his present term and that he would be a candidate to succeed him. Representative Albert P. Langtry of Springfield is for Turner. The public statement of Mr. Turner that he would stand for renomination apparently settles the matter, especially as party leaders generally believe that Mr. Turner would probably be able to secure the renomination even if some candidate were to enter the field against him.

Mayor Fitzgerald's Appointment.

Thus far Mayor Fitzgerald has made between 50 and 60 appointments to office to the approval of the State Civil Service Commission. Out of this number 13, or something like 25 per cent, have been rejected by the board. Considering the fitness of some of the appointments this does not seem such an exceedingly large percentage. Very few aside from the mayor himself appear to be much disturbed at the rejections which have been made, and there is [illegible] question as to just how much he himself cares, about some of the rejections. It [illegible] in his criticisms of the board he is talking for political effect rather than expressing his own [illegible] opinions, and that [illegible] he is really much better pleased at the action of the Civil Service Commission than he would be willing to admit to the men whose names have been rejected. By [illegible] of the commission he is able to pay political debts without [illegible] do [illegible] anything for those to whom he [illegible] and [illegible] one office can be made to [illegible] the work of repaying several [illegible] supporters for their interest [illegible] in the past. The Civil Service Commission has been severely criticised in some quarters but it has the complete endorsement of the Finance Commission of the city of Boston the head of which, former Congressman John A. Sullivan, is an ardent Democrat, and many other people in Boston believe that the commission is doing a splendid work, and that if the same system could be applied to some of the other cities in the commonwealth it might have beneficial results.

As to a Re-Call for the Mayor.

A great deal of amusement was aroused during the week by the frenzied claim of Mr. Fitzgerald that James J. Storrow, his opponent in the recent city election, is conspiring to bring about his recall. Mr Storrow indignantly denies that he has mentioned such a thing to any living person. The new city charter provides for the recall of the mayor after two years in case the people find occasion for such action. Many feel that Mr Fitzgerald is getting scared early in the game and wonder why an innocent man should be seeing ghosts just at this particular time.

So far as any one can see there is no probability of a movement to demand the recall of Mayor Fitzgerald. All that, however, will depend on the manner in which he conducts the office [illegible] or [illegible] has not strengthened [illegible] known his fears.

It is suspected by many people that Mr. Fitzgerald's chief political advisor is [illegible] Mayor [illegible] of Boston [illegible]

[illegible]

Keliher Looks a Winner.

[illegible] Congressman John A. Keliher [illegible] other candidates already [illegible] Councillor [illegible] P. M[illegible] of Charlestown, Representative [illegible] B. Shaw [illegible] Tim[illegible] [illegible] Representative Joseph M[illegible]

The friends of Mr. Keliher are pleased at the number of candidates against him. The more there are the easier will be his fight for the nomination. Politicians generally believe that it will be impossible for the opposition to the congressman to unite on any one person and that because of this Mr. Keliher is likely to be successful. Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is still an anti-Keliher man and will probably support one of his opponents. Several of them already claim that he is behind them, but thus far he himself has not admitted his position in the matter. Of course, Martin L. Lomasney of Ward 8 is against Mr. Keliher as he has been for several years and he may put forward a candidate of his own later on.

Roosevelt in Massachusetts.

The report from Washington that former President Theodore Roosevelt will speak in Massachusetts during the fall campaign has aroused intense interest among the politicians and people as well. Probably no man in public life today would call together so great an attendance as Mr Roosevelt. It is several years now since he was heard in Boston on a political subject. Away back in 1893 he was one of the principal guests of the Republican club of Massachusetts in old Music Hall, and that was one of the red letter events of the club. It was during his term of office as police commissioner of the state of New York. Mr. Roosevelt is one of the staunchest friends of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and it is understood that the speech which he will make will be in the interests of the senator.

The legislature of 1910 has been a fairly good one. It has passed some bills which were not all that they should have been and rejected some which might well have been enacted. On the whole, however, it has been an average legislature. One of its timely enactments was the bill limiting the size of fire crackers and other explosives which might be used on festal days, like the 17th of June and the 4th of July. This measure was in a line with the movement for a sane celebration of the 4th of July. A new holiday Columbus day to be observed Oct. 12 has been added to the list already existing.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Owing to serious illness in the house, it has become necessary to abandon the plans for the outing for the Willard Settlement group Friday, the 17th. As most of the children are employed during the week days and cannot come on the Sabbath (Saturday) for religious reasons, it has been decided to wait until fall before doing anything further in the matter. The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Daniel Kelley, 13 Park street, instead of Vine street as advertised. It is hoped there may be a good attendance as it is the last for the season, and there is important business. Meeting at 3 p. m. All interested are invited.

The Union is planning to give a library of some fifty volumes to be placed on some of the boats plying from Boston for the use of the sailors, and members and friends are asked to lay aside any good books they may have for the purpose until fall when Mrs E. N. Lovering superintendent of the work for sailors will be glad to receive them. Good stories, live biographies, histories and descriptive books are especially desirable, and if more than enough for one library should be sent the overflow can be utilized. These libraries are transferred from boat to boat so they are widely circulated and do much to cheer the sailors on their long voyages.

During the summer there are many things that may be done by those who have to have light work to occupy their hands during the vacation season. Mufflers for seamen, comfort bags for the Christmas distribution of the Flower Mission, work bags, needle books, and other bags for the poor women near the settlement to encourage them to sew and [illegible] W. YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

In the study of a ministerial friend of The Spectator's a few days ago, funerals and mourning were discussed. The clerical gentleman commented on the custom of avoiding all unnecessary expense for flowers, and that the burial service should be brief and simple; even urging private funerals with which The Spectator is in hearty accord. It was also suggested that long-continued mourning be discontinued as "inconsistent with a Christian spirit of submission to God's will and with Bible examples of mourning." There have been many instances in history where restrictions were placed upon extravagance in funeral shows and manifestations of grief. In the Twelve Tables of Rome there is an article forbidding the lacerating the face with nails or with pointed instruments, and two other notable laws in the Roman system limited the duration of mourning to a period of ten months at the most and put a check to the practice of enfranchising slaves pileati in order that they might walk as mourners in the funeral procession.

The Spectator has heard many, but few satisfactory reasons given for the great increase in number, during the past quarter century, of those who lose their hair at an early age. Baldness in former times used to be looked upon, in common with wrinkles, failing eyesight, and loss of teeth, as a mark of old age; but nowadays no Winchesterite would think of judging a man's years by the absence of hair from the top of his thought dome. Youthful baldness as The Spectator sees it among his acquaintances here in Winchester and elsewhere, must unquestionably be traced to a disregard of certain necessary conditions whereby the healthfulness of the hair and the scalp are maintained. A leading Winchester medical gentleman has suggested that bodily cleanliness, which has become a paramount virtue with people of refined training, has a great deal to do with the falling of the hair, and the idea is certainly worthy of consideration. There are numberless people here in Winchester who would feel uncomfortably dirty all day if they were obliged to forego their morning bath, and hence the body is now with many subjected to a thorough washing at exceedingly short intervals. Without denying the many advantages to be derived from this treatment, it must be added that it puts the lubricating functions of the skin to a severe test, and one which in most instances they cannot maintain. The dislike to smear one's self over with oil after a bath is reasonable enough, but the failure to do so is none the less detrimental to the complete healthfulness of the skin. Deprived of a nourishment that is absolutely essential, the hair, it is claimed, is the first to suffer. This theory is certainly a plausible one, and easily tallies with what must have been the experience of a great many. It is not to be denied that in those countries where the biblical custom is still retained of "anointing the head with oil," the men do not often lose their hair until they are nearly three score years old.

A certain young lady here in Winchester is so refined that she invariably alludes to the Spitz as a "cuspidore dog." Fact!

A certain Winchester small boy who stuck his fist through a glass door remarked, as he bandaged a severe gash in the back of his hand, that it was a paneless operation for the door.

A Main street gentleman, who has been reading about "Balder the beautiful," informs The Spectator that he has never been praised for his beauty, and he is only a little bald. He wonders if he would be thought beautiful if he were balder.

In the race of life many foolish Winchesterites catch—cold.

A Pleasant street gentleman recently remarked within hearing of The Spectator if there is anything more cheering than to hear the barber shout "Next," it is to hear the preacher say "Finally," in an extremely long sermon.

The Spectator has no patience with the Winchesterite who will state his views in a dogmatic manner, and, because the persons whom he bores out of politeness agrees with him, becomes more intolerable than ever by going up and down the town telling that everybody he has heard say anything about the matter thinks exactly as he does.

"There is nothing impossible," exclaimed a Washington street gentleman who was discussing Edison's achievements. That gentleman to find out how egregiously he is mistaken, has only to attempt to cut his own hair.

The Spectator wonders if a fish enjoys to have a hook extracted from his mouth as much as a Winchesterite enjoys having a dentist digging at the roots of his molers? However that may be, the man is more merciful to the fish than the dentist to the Winchesterite. The man never asks the fish, "Does it hurt you?"

Winchester has a musical prodigy. He is twelve years old and hates the sound of a tin horn.

"The business outlook in Winchester was never better," said a leading merchant to The Spectator a few days ago. "I attribute my own success to advertising in The Star."

A well known townsman who had a leisure hour the other afternoon was led, while considering the wear to which a watch is subjected, to go into a calculation of the distance the second hand travels and the result, which even The Spectator [illegible] guess is this: The hand travels 240 feet a day, and nearly seventeen miles a year, to exact figures, sixteen miles one hundred and eighty rods and eighteen inches not counting the extra quarter of a day, which should be counted, and which adds sixty feet. The watch is of the ordinary size of a Swiss pocket watch the second dial being five eighths of an inch in diameter. The sum is a simple and easy one, which anybody can figure out who chooses to give a few minutes to it.

It is a mighty mean Winchesterite who will buy a new pair of shoes every morning merely for the pleasure of seeing a bootblack perspire in his effort to give them their primeval shine.

When a certain citizen of [illegible] who The Spectator won't be more specific—was asked to pay fifty cents for having his coat checked at a dinner which he attended as a dead-head, he exclaimed, with the Queen of Sheba, "The half was not told me."

The Spectator.

THE STATE TAX.

The ways and means committee has fixed the state tax this year at five and a half millions, an increase of a million over last year. The increase is due to the larger demands upon the state and the necessity for appropriating about $11,000,000 for addition to public buildings. Of that amount all but $355,000 is to be paid out of the tax levy. The bonding of so small an amount is due to the efforts of Governor Draper and Speaker Walker, who desire the state to get on to a better pay-as-you-go policy. The putting of $800,000 of that into the tax levy makes quite an increase in the tax this year. The total appropriations foot up to over $13,000,000 while the revenue and cash on hand is estimated at $8,800,000. The sinking fund requirement amounts to $326,571.

DECORATED GRAVES OF DECEASED COMRADES.

The Firemen's Memorial Sunday was observed by the various companies in the Winchester Department on Sunday afternoon, notwithstanding the heavy downpour of rain. Fifty five graves were decorated in Wildwood, Calvary and Stoneham and Medford, special delegates being sent to the latter towns during the morning, there being one grave at each place.

The firemen, numbering about 35 formed at the centre fire station at two o'clock, and headed by a platoon of police and the Stoneham brass band, marched first to Wildwood and then to Calvary. Each man carried a bouquet of flowers, which were placed on the various graves. The Firemen's Memorial Sunday, coming on the second Sunday in June, is now generally observed in the majority of towns in this state.

BAD TRAINING.

"Smoking is not a crime," says the Andover Townsman, "but the kid on the street with a pipe in his mouth is not an evidence of good training either at home or in school.

The kid in the back corner who tells vulgar stories, who ridicules his parents, who makes cheap talk about his young lady acquaintances, is not a credit to the system under which the boy is being developed today.

There is no more vital problem before the public than this, and its solution lies not in giving the boys more of the cream of life as many cranks would suggest, but the use of a deal more of the essence of birch vigorously applied by the head of the family."

ITALIANS TO CELEBRATE.

It is understood that the Italians in town plan to hold a great festival on the 15th of August, which is their national holiday. It is said that over $150 was contributed to the general fund for the celebration last Sunday. It is planned by these people to have exercises in the Town Hall and a grand display of fireworks. Last year only half of the day was used in the observance, but this year the entire day is to be given over to the celebration. In addition to the fireworks and exercises, band concerts are to be given. Efforts are being made to secure the use of Fitzgerald's Field, off Florence street, for the fireworks.

Children's Sunday was observed in the Methodist Church last Sunday at the morning service by a concert given by the Sunday school, assisted by the church quartette, with a service of infant baptism. In the evening solos were given by Miss Mary Hall, Mr. Milton F. Powers and the pastor gave addresses on "The Message of Prayer." Miss Snow, Mr. Fowle and Mr. Dutton lead the praise service.

There is a peddler of vegetables who considers that the corner of Highland avenue and Lebanon street is a good place to sort his wares and throw the decayed onto the street. WINCHESTER.

THE GAME SITUATION IN NEW ENGLAND.

The chief cause of the destruction of game is the market demand. The man who lives by shooting for the market makes every effort to kill all the game possible each day. Bevys of quail are enticed to some spot by scattered grain and there massacred by a "pot shot," or they are followed until the last one is bagged. The market hunter who sees a flock of teal or wood ducks is satisfied only when he gets them all. A good shore bird caller who is also a good shot will sometime kill an entire flock of bay snipe.

Not many years ago market hunters on the coast of Texas were not satisfied with less than 200 ducks a day each. Batteries, swivel guns, traps, snares and every known trick, by which advantage may be taken of the birds have been used by the professional market hunter. When expert shooters, trappers, netters and snarers are kept in constant practice by the daily exercise of their craft the game will always decrease. Such men were the chief cause of the extirpation of the passenger pigeon, the wild turkey and the prairie hen from regions where they were formerly abundant.

The prohibition of the sale of all game is the logical sequence of our present system of game laws. If the sale of all game were prohibited by law and the law enforced most of the market hunters would go out of business. The sale of wild fowl is still allowed in the New England States. Market hunters assume that they should not hunt at all if the sale were prohibited. Possibly a few would evade the law, but its result on the whole would be to protect the birds. The birds would have some respite for a time, but it would not be permanent, for as population increases the number of those who shoot for recreation will increase also until, because of their numbers, they will become as destructive to birds as the market hunters now are. In the most densely populated regions of the country where the market hunter no longer finds hunting profitable, sportsmen or amateur hunters are one of the chief causes of the scarcity of game.

The time is at hand when under our present system there will not be game enough for the sportsmen alone and when the stoppage sale of game will not suffice for its protection.

The chief objection to prohibiting the sale of game is that under such laws no one can have game to eat, except the sportsman who has the time, money and skill required to kill it.

Another objection that is urged against the prohibition of the sale of game is that a very large business interest is injured thereby. But were game eliminated from the market the farmers and poultrymen would be called upon to supply more poultry to take its place and the people who now eat game would merely get a larger variety and a better supply of poultry. The volume of business of the market men would be the same and that business would soon adjust itself to the change. Nevertheless it must be admitted that it is something of a hardship to deprive the people of the privilege of buying game if it is possible in any way to supply the markets and at the same time to increase rather than diminish the game supply. Undoubtedly this can be done as it is now done in European countries by the protection and propagation of game on game preserves.

This is no experiment. Game under proper management may be bred for the market almost as readily as poultry. The solution of the problem of game supply for our markets must come, if at all, through some system of propagation on game farms.

PROPOSED TELEPHONE RATES

Editor of the Star:

The Winchester Telephone Station serves 974 "Main Telephones" or sub-stations, and according to the new proposition will be the center of a zone of 69 square miles, containing 4528 subscribers, situated in Arlington, Bedford, Lexington, Medford, Stoneham and Woburn. The entire Boston and Suburban district contains 8?,000 subscribers in an area of [illegible] square miles. Thus, the so-called "[illegible] District" contains about 16 per cent of the area and 5.6 of the subscribers of the entire system. Any telephoning outside of this district means an added toll charge, except in a very limited class of Coin Box Telephones, when the distance [illegible]

[illegible]

The proposed schedule of rates is as follows:

A Single Party [illegible]

A Two Party [illegible]

A Single Party [illegible]

A Single Party Coin Box [illegible] A Four Party Coin Box [illegible] with a yearly guarantee of $[illegible] which figures out at the five cent rate, [illegible] calls, more calls than this must be paid for at five cents each.

The lowest possible telephone service will cost a resident $[illegible] per year, and unless they use [illegible] calls they will pay more than 5 cents per call, and the records of the Telephone Company shows that the average price is much nearer 6 cents. There can be no attraction in the measured service shown above and it is [illegible]

[illegible]

The Four-Party Subscriber will probably make 1,092 calls, 11 per cent of which will be outside of the "zone" and if figured at the lowest rate will make his future telephone service cost him $51.6? in place of $[illegible] which he now pays. If any of these calls are outside the 5 cent or 7 1-2 mile zone, there will be a still further charge of 5 cents for each additional call of 7 1-2 miles.

Aldrich defends the tariff in the senate, says an exchange. But it will take considerable argument to convince the people that the tariff is unselfish.

Is there not danger when spraying trees of also destroying the Calosoma, the enemy of tree pests, which are being so carefully propagated by the State? It looks so.

We wonder if Congressman Ames will be disappointed if he is defeated in his contest for Senator Lodge's position? No doubt he will be surprised if he gets there.

"So many safe and sane movements are starting up lately," says the Boston Globe, "that one begins to suspect we have hitherto all been crazy and didn't know it!"

"Every day will be Sunday by and by," said a disappointed householder, who was compelled to eat bread and milk Wednesday for dinner, because he couldn't get into a provision store for his one o'clock dinner. The storekeeper will say, "Serves him right; he should have ordered in the morning," and that ends the argument. —[Natick Bulletin.

As yet nothing seems to have been suggested toward making the Fourth "sane and safe" in this town. Some form of amusement will have to be provided or else there will be danger of reaction, by driving the pent-up enthusiasm into the alleyways and other secluded places. Patriotism and extreme materialism will not link up in the opinion of young America who looks upon the Fourth as the day of days.

Stratton D. Brooks, superintendent of Boston schools, says: "I believe it is a good thing both for the city and for the school children, but we have had it in Boston now for nearly a year. The necessity of learning how to swim is now a requisite of the course in physical training. The High school pupils use the public bath houses in the summer and the municipal bath house during the winter season for all those who attend schools that are not equipped with swimming pools."

THE MILK SITUATION.

Through the efforts of the Board of Health the milk which is now sold in Winchester will all come under the inspection of the local inspector of milk, arrangements having been made with the outside contractors, D. Whiting and Sons, whereby the town will receive its supply from one of their best dairies, located so that it may be readily inspected.

The contractors have the following to say regarding their supply:

The milk delivered to our customers in Winchester is exclusively from dairies in the town of New Braintree, Mass., in the heart of the finest dairying section of the state. These Dairies have been inspected by the Milk Inspector of the towns of Winchester and Woburn. They are also under the inspection of the State Board of Health and are regularly visited by our own trained inspector. In addition this milk is periodically examined in our chemical and bacteriological laboratories to ensure richness and cleanliness.

WONDERFUL RETRIBUTION.

An Incident of the Workings of Canada's Government Protection.

In September, 1904, two white men entered the Lesser Slave lake country, in the Canadian northwest, ostensibly prospecting for gold. Subsequently the Indians reported that one of the men seemed to be traveling alone, an observant Cree boy adding, "The white man's dog won't follow that fellow any more." The answers given by Charles King of Mount Pleasant, Utah, regarding his lost companion, Hayward, were not satisfactory. King was arrested, and there began one of the most splendid bits of detective work of which Canada has record.

Sergeant Anderson turned over the ashes of a campfire and found three hard lumps of flesh and a small piece of skull bone. In front stretched a little slough, or lake, which seemed a likely place in which to look for evidence. Setting Indian women to fish up with their toes any hard substance they might feel in the ooze, Anderson secured a stickpin of unusual make and a sovereign case. He systematically drained the lake and found a shoe with a broken eyed needle sticking in it. The campfire ashes examined with the microscope yielded the missing part of a needle's broken eye and established unmistakable connection between lake and camp.

The maker of the stickpin in London, England, was communicated with by cable, and the Canadian government summoned a Mr. Hayward to come from England to identify the trinkets of his murdered brother. Link by link the chain grew. It took eleven months for Sergeant Anderson to get his complete case in shape. The mounted police brought from Lesser Slave lake to Edmonton forty Indian and half breed witnesses. The evidence was placed before the jury, and the Indians returned to their homes. A legal technicality cropping up, the trial had to be repeated in its entirety, and once more those forty men, women and children left their traps and fishing nets and came into Edmonton to tell their story.

The result was that Charles King was found guilty of the murder of Edward Hayward and paid the death penalty. The trial cost the government of Canada over $30,000, all to avenge the death of one of the wandering units to be found in every corner of the silent places, an unknown prospector.—Agnes Deane Cameron in Century.

QUEER VILLAGES

Some Peculiar Ones That May Be Seen In England.

The English village is very dear to the hearts of poets and painters, and thousands of them are certainly charming. A few, however, are more amusing than anything else—as, for instance, one which consists entirely of old railway carriages, even the chapel being composed of four horse trucks. Another village, with a population of 1,100 and taxed at the valuation of $8,000, has neither school, church nor other public building, the only thing of the sort being a letter box on a pillar.

Villages with but a single inhabitant are not unknown, one of them being Skiddaw, in Cumberland. The single villager complains bitterly because he cannot vote, there being no overseer to prepare a voters' list and no church or other public building on which to publish one, as the law requires. The lonely rate payer in a Northumberland village has declined to contribute money to maintain the roads, remarking that the one he has is quite good enough for its use. In the isle of Ely is a little parish with about a dozen inhabitants that has no rates, as there are no roads or public institutions of any kind and consequently no expenses.

Kempton, near Bradford, can probably lay successful claim to the distinction of being the longest village in the world, as it straggles along the road for a distance of seven miles.

Sometimes a village will entirely disappear, having been built either on the edge of the crumbling cliffs that make part of the coast line or over an ancient mine. One of the latter class is in Shropshire, and each year one or more of the cottages tumbles as the earth sinks beneath it.—Harper's Weekly.

His Little Scheme.

"Great Caesar, old man!" exclaimed the [illegible] as he opened the door and found his friend's house brilliantly lighted [illegible]. "What does this mean? Why are all these blankets over the windows and why is the gas burning in the daytime?"

"Sh!" whispered Guyer cautiously. "It's a scheme of mine."

"What kind of a scheme?"

"Why, my wife is on a visit to her mother, and I told her I remain home every night and read. I've got to get rid of some gas somehow so it will go on the bill at the end of the month."—Atlanta Constitution.

Dew Water.

The ancient "dew ponds" of England have their modern counterparts on the rock of Gibraltar, where drinking water is obtained by the condensation of the abundant dew in specially prepared basins. The primitive process consists in making a hollow in the ground and lining the bottom with dry straw, over which is placed a layer of clay. [illegible] the clay [illegible] the dew [illegible] the basin. The pond is [illegible] cement under the straw. At Gibraltar the present practice is to use wood instead of straw and sheet iron instead of clay.

"Life is full of new beginnings"

AN ENJOYABLE ROUTE TO NEW YORK.

Commencing Thursday, June 16, the Old Colony Street Railway Company again inaugurated its special through service between Boston and Providence or Fall River which has been so popular in the last few years. A special through car, or more if necessary, will be run from Post Office Sq., Boston, every afternoon at 3 p. m., without change to Providence where it will arrive in time to make connections with the various boat lines to New York. The return trip will be made in the morning, leaving Market Sq., Providence, at 8 a. m., and arriving in Boston between 11 and 11.30.

This service will make it possible for travellers between Boston and New York to get an exceptionally low rate of fare and at the same time enjoy the novelty and the pleasure of traveling speedily without change through one of the prettiest sections of southeastern Massachusetts. By using this service it will be possible to travel between the two great Metropolises at a comparatively small expense, in fact it will be the cheapest way possible. The cars which will be used this summer on the trolley end of the route have been especially equipped for the service for speed and safety. The open cars particularly have been made more comfortable for passengers by the addition of upholstered seats. The service will be run every day during the coming season, including Sundays. Any one desiring to connect with the Fall River line of boats to New York from Fall River may take this car from Post Office Sq., and make one change at Taunton. In order to take advantage of this special trolley service, it is not necessary to make the trip to New York as local tickets will be sold between the cities of Boston and Providence or Fall River.

HIGH COST OF LIVING TARRIF.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Congressman from this, 8th District—S. W. McCall was the New England member of the Ways and Means Committee, and one of the House refrees that placed upon the people the "high cost of living tariff" and he had more to do with it than any man from Massachusetts, and has stated since it became a law that it is the best tariff ever passed and has written a magazine article saying so, praising Speaker Cannon.

Will you please print this statement, with the inclosed from Senator Dolliver's speach in the Senate the 13th, on the subject: A Republican Senator from Iowa was proposed for Vice President at the last Republican Convention.

Courteously
Whitfield L. Tuck.

"Two great hoaxes occurred last summer," said Mr Dolliver. "One was the testimony of the North Pole by Mr. Cook; the other was the downward revision of the tariff by the Senator from Rhode Island. Each was warmly congratulated by the highest official of this Government."

Of the cotton schedule figures given by the President in his Winona speech, Mr. Dolliver said:

"These are vagrant children, introduced into the President's intellectual household by outsiders. The harboring of them is more of a misfortune than a fault."

Mr. Dolliver produced a bunch of cotton samples and held them up for inspection as he announced the import duties paid on each. He showed that each article paid advanced rates. "And yet," he exclaimed, "these brethren passed a table up to the President to be read in his Winona speech."

Raising his voice, Mr. Dolliver said the present tariff act is "a monstrosity which represents neither intelligence nor opportunity."

Mr. Dolliver declared that the seven years' administration of President Roosevelt presented "the greatest example of moral leadership in the history of the world."

"I am through with permitting a few people to use all the power of the Government for their own interests!" Vehemently declared Mr. Dolliver. "I will fight that evil, but as a Republican. I do not care what my political fate may be. My quarrel is with the modern methods of money-making. I believe they will destroy republican institutions."

A DELIGHTFUL PLACE.

Since the members of the Mass. Press Association assembled at Norumbega on the beautiful Charles River at Auburndale, four years ago, it has made rapid strides.

Always to the fore, it has gone so far ahead this year as to hopelessly distance all other parks in the country.

The new magnificent open-air theatre costing over $60,000, is largely responsible for this. Its size and architectural decorativeness are amazing and unparalled. Its seating capacity of 3500 has already been found none too large. This grand, out-door temple of summer amusement is to-day the finest, out-door open-air theatre in the world.

The entire plan originated with Park Manager, Carl Alberte, who now enters on his 13th season, and is the result of many years experience. It is thoroughly fire-proof, is constructed entirely of steel and concrete thoroughout and is the striking ornament of this beautiful Park.

Norumbega is a shining success in the amusement world because it has always maintained the highest standard of excellence.

Special attention has been given this year to the transportation facilities so that adequate service will be provided for all patrons of Norumbega.

The theatre with its usual high-class vaudeville is not the only attraction. It was noticed that the Zoological Garden was better than ever, there being many new animals.

Other attractions noted with interest, were the Chalet of Wonders, Rifle Range, Casino, Swing Court, Merry go round, Woman's Cottage, and the Canoes, Boats and Launches for river trips.

Members of the party enjoyed a delightful luncheon at the Park restaurant.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

On Sunday evening beginning at 7.30 there will be special [illegible], by [illegible]'s famous band, and the latest of moving pictures.

Sensations are following each other in rapid succession at Keith's these days, where with Madam Cuming still a popular idol another comes in Lillian Lawrence, the favorite stock actress who was for years at the old Castle Square and [illegible] headed her own company [illegible] Boston. It is now two years since she has appeared in the city and she comes at the close of a most successful season with Francis Wilson. She will be seen in an entirely new comedy written especially for her, entitled "A Reno Divorce." Another Boston favorite on the bill is Ralph Smalley, cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

For the children there will be an exceedingly strong feature in Captain Geo. Auger and company in "Jack, the Giant Killer." Captain Auger is the tallest actor on earth, and Ernest Rommel, who takes the part of Jack the Giant Killer, is the smallest actor on the stage. Other features of the bill will be Ray Cox "the girl who made base ball famous", Howard and Howard, "the messenger boy and the thespian", [illegible] attractions [illegible].

BOSTON'S BIG AIRDOME OPEN.

The Airdome, the big outdoor vaudeville entertainment, at the American League grounds, Huntington avenue, Boston, was formally opened on Tuesday evening (June 14th) and established itself at once as the most remarkable form of amusement that has ever been given in this part of the country. The bill for the opening week includes George Bonhair's Troup of Acrobats, the De Dio Troupe of trained dogs, monkeys and ponies; Maximo, the "Tipsy Wire-Walker," Unita and Paul, "The Lady and the Clown;" Mrs. Thompson, the famous woman "whip"; Ben Buyer and Bro., comedy cyclists; the Marriott Twins Co., comedians and jugglers; High School Horses, Rice Sully and Scott, the acrobatic comedians; the daring Flying [illegible] and the Airdome Girls, a company of the prettiest and most graceful [illegible] ever [illegible] together.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

[illegible]

Sir Arthur Sullivan's [illegible] and Sir W. S. Gilbert's libretto, are perfect [illegible] of humor, and few of us are there who are not moved to laughter by "The Flowers that bloom in the Spring," "I've got a little list," "The punishment fit the crime," "Tit Willow" and the dozen and more other lyric with which the opera is filled. Seemingly, too, it is most alluring.

One of the finest casts ever seen in Boston has been provided for this revival of "The Mikado." The leading tenor and [illegible] roles of Nanki Poo and Yum Yum [illegible] filled by Harry Davis and [illegible], while the [illegible] by [illegible] and George [illegible] Castle Square [illegible] Ko Ko [illegible] Mikado. [illegible] will be George Crampton, Clarence Clute, Vera Roberts, Mary Sherwood and Lola Villiers.

THE EARTH AS A MOON.

Our World as It Appears to Venus and Our Own Moon.

If we could be transported to the planet Venus a peculiar set of views could be obtained of our earth which would enable us to see ourselves, to some extent at least, as others see us. Venus is about the same size as the earth, is somewhat closer to the sun and has more atmosphere than the earth. When the earth and Venus are nearest together they are, of course, on the same side of the sun, and in consequence of this the earth does not see more than a very small part of the Venus illuminated but Venus, on the other hand, sees all of one side of the earth illuminated and consequently is able to claim she has something that takes the place of a moon anyhow, for the earth to Venus at this time looks very large and bright, almost as much so as our moon does to us.

If we could see all the illuminated surface of Venus on [illegible] occasions we should have [illegible] a distinct second moon. When we do see all of her illuminated surface she is on the opposite side of the sun from us and consequently at an enormous distance, yet she is so brilliant as to keep us from seeing her surface distinctly.

But to our own moon we appear in the best light as a moon. A full earth as seen from the moon, according to Professor Todd and other astronomers, is a very inspiring sight on the moon's surface. It can at once be seen why this is necessarily true. The earth is several times larger than the moon and would appear in the heavens as a disk about fourteen times the size of the moon. It would shine with probably a variable light, due to the shifting clouds on the earth, though the light, of course, is reflected from the sun, and the reflecting is done in part by the upper surfaces of the clouds.

The outlines of the continents of the earth appear very [illegible] to the moon as if they were [illegible] of paper [illegible] [illegible], if such [illegible] [illegible] light.—St. Louis Republic.

A Peculiarity of Dreams.

As to dreams, [illegible] was a discussion at the club lunch and one man remarked that no man dreamed of himself as braver than he is. When the dream came the dreamer was always the underdog. He was in [illegible] danger and never did anything picturesque to face it. There are, he men who are [illegible] in their sleep, but it would be interesting to find one man outside of [illegible] cowards [illegible] London Chronicle.

Wrong Method.

He [illegible] [illegible] protested.

"W[illegible] you [illegible] your [illegible] rather than [illegible] your daughter [illegible]" she demanded severely.—Puck.

THE GREEN DOOR.

A Bold Adventurer Finds a Romance In Solving a Mystery.

By O. HENRY.

[illegible]

Suppose [illegible] Broadway after dinner, with [illegible] utes allotted to the consummation of your [illegible] you are deciding to [illegible] tween a diverting tragedy and something serious in the way of vaudeville. Suddenly a hand is laid upon your arm. You turn to look into the thrilling eyes of a beautiful woman wonderful in diamonds and Russian sables. She thrusts hurriedly into your hand an extremely hot buttered roll, flashes out a tiny pair of scissors, snips off the second button of your overcoat, [illegible] ejaculates the one word "[illegible]" and swiftly flies down a cross street, looking back fearfully over her shoulder.

That would be pure adventure. Would you accept it? Not you. You would flush with embarrassment. You would sheepishly drop the roll and continue down Broadway, fumbling feebly for the missing button. This you would do unless you are one of the blessed few in whom the pure spirit of adventure is not dead.

ON THE OTHER WERE WRITTEN THREE WORDS, "THE GREEN DOOR"

In the big city the twin spirits, Romance and Adventure, are always abroad seeking worthy wooers. As we roam the streets they slyly peep at us and challenge us in twenty different guises.

Rudolf Steiner was a true adventurer. Few were the evenings on which he did not go forth from his hall bedchamber in search of the unexpected and the egregious. The most interesting thing in life seemed to him to be what might lie just around the next corner. Sometimes his willingness to tempt fate led him into strange paths. Twice he had spent the night in a station house. Again and again he had found himself the dupe of ingenious and mercenary tricksters. His watch and money had been the price of one flattering allurement. But with undiminished ardor he picked up every glove cast before him into the merry lists of adventure.

One evening Rudolf was strolling along a cross town street in the older central part of the city. Two streams of people filled the sidewalks, the home-hurrying and that restless contingent that abandons home for the specious welcome of the thousand candle power table d'hote.

The young adventurer was of pleasing presence and moved serenely and watchfully. By daylight he was a salesman in a piano store. He wore his tie drawn through a topaz ring instead of fastened with a stickpin, and once he had written to the editor of a magazine that "Junie's Love Test," by Miss Libbey, had been the book that had most influenced his life.

During his walk a violent chattering of teeth in a glass case on the sidewalk seemed at first to draw his attention (with a qualm) to a restaurant before which it was set, but a second glance revealed the electric letters of a dentist's sign high above the next door. A giant negro fantastically dressed in a red embroidered coat, yellow trousers and a military cap discreetly distributed cards to those of the passing crowd who consented to take them.

This mode of dentistic advertising was a common sight to Rudolf. Usually he passed the dispenser [illegible]

[illegible] gave him as he passed. Rudolf picked it up. It was printed with the dentist's name and address and the usual schedule of "plate work" and "bridge work" and "crowns" and specious promises of "painless" operations.

The adventurous piano salesman halted at the corner and considered. Then he crossed the street, walked down a block, recrossed and joined the upward current of people again. Without seeming to notice the negro as he passed the second time, he carelessly took the card that was handed him. Ten steps away he inspected it. In the same handwriting that appeared on the first card "The Green Door" was inscribed upon it. Three or four cards were tossed to the pavement by pedestrians both following and leading him. These fell blank side up. Rudolf turned them over. Every one bore the printed legend of the dental "parlors."

Rarely did the arch sprite Adventure need to beckon twice to Rudolf Steiner, his true follower. But twice it had been done, and the quest was on.

Rudolf walked slowly back to where the giant negro stood by the case of rattling teeth. This time as he passed he received no card. In spite of his gaudy and ridiculous garb the Ethiopian displayed a natural barbaric dignity as he stood, offering the cards suavely to some, allowing others to pass unmolested. Every half minute he chanted a harsh, unintelligible phrase akin to the jabber of car conductors and grand opera. And not only did he withhold a card this time, but it seemed to Rudolf that he received from the shining and massive black countenance a look of cold, almost contemptuous, disdain.

The look stung the adventurer. He read in it a silent accusation that he had been found wanting. Whatever the mysterious written words on the cards might mean, the black had selected him twice from the throng for their recipient and now seemed to have condemned him as deficient in the wit and spirit to engage the enigma.

Standing aside from the rush, the young man made a rapid estimate of the building in which he conceived that his adventure must lie. Five stories high it rose. A small restaurant occupied the basement.

The first floor, now closed, seemed to house millinery or furs. The second floor, by the winking electric letters, was the dentist's. Above this a polyglot babel of signs struggled to indicate the abodes of palmists, dressmakers, musicians and doctors. Still higher up draped curtains and milk bottles white on the window sills proclaimed the regions of domesticity.

After concluding his survey Rudolf walked briskly up the high flight of stone steps into the house. Up two flights of the carpeted stairway he continued and at its top paused. The hallway there was dimly lighted by two pale jets of gas, one far to his right, the other nearer to his left. He looked toward the nearer light and saw within its wan halo a green door. For one moment he hesitated, then he seemed to see the contumelious sneer of the African juggler of cards, and then he walked straight to the green door and knocked against it.

Moments like those that passed before his knock was answered measure the quick breath of true adventure. What might not be behind those green panels! Gamesters at play, cunning rogues baiting their traps with subtle skill, beauty in love with courage and thus planning to be sought by it, danger, death, love, disappointment, ridicule—any of these might respond to that temerarious rap.

A faint rustle was heard inside, and the door slowly opened. A girl not yet twenty stood there white faced and tottering. She loosed the knob and swayed weakly, groping with one hand. Rudolf caught her and laid her on a faded couch that stood against the wall. He closed the door and took a swift glance around the room by the light of a flickering gas jet. Neat but extreme poverty was the story that he read.

The girl lay still as if in a faint. Rudolf looked around the room excitedly for a barrel. People must be rolled upon a barrel who—no, no; that was for drowned persons. He began to fan her with his hat. That was successful, for he struck her nose with the brim of his derby, and she opened her eyes. And then the young man saw that hers, indeed, was the one missing face from his heart's gallery of intimate portraits. The frank gray eyes, the little nose, turning pertly outward, the chestnut hair, curling like the tendrils of a pea vine, seemed the right end and reward of all his wonderful adventures. But the face was woefully thin and pale.

The girl looked at him calmly and then smiled.

"Fainted, didn't I?" she asked weakly. "Well, who wouldn't? You try going without anything to eat for three days and see!"

"Himmel!" exclaimed Rudolf, jumping up. "Wait till I come back."

He dashed out the green door and down the stairs. In twenty minutes he was back again, kicking at the door with his toe for her to open it. With both arms he hugged an array of wares from the grocery and the restaurant. On the table he laid them—bread and butter, cold meats, cakes, pies, pickles, oysters, a roasted chicken, a bottle of milk and one of red-hot tea.

"This is ridiculous," said Rudolf blusteringly, "to go without eating. You [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] He [illegible] from her [illegible] and poured the cup full of [illegible]. "Drink that first," he ordered, "and then you shall have some tea and then a chicken wing. If you are very good you shall have a pickle tomorrow. And now, if you'll allow me to be your guest, we'll have supper."

He drew up the other chair. The tea brightened the girl's eyes and brought back some of her color. She began to eat with a sort of dainty ferocity like some starved wild animal. She seemed to regard the young man and the aid he had rendered her as a natural thing—not as though she undervalued the conventions, but as one whose great stress gave her the right to put aside the artificial for the human. But gradually with the return of strength and comfort came also a sense of the little conventions that belong, and she began to tell him her little story. It was one of a thousand such as the city yawns at every day—the shopgirl's story of insufficient wages, further reduced by "fines" that go to swell the store's profits, of time lost through illness and then of lost positions, lost hope and—the knock of the adventurer upon the green door.

But to Rudolf the history sounded as big as the Iliad or the crisis in "Junie's Love Test."

"To think of you going through all that!" he exclaimed.

"It was something fierce," said the girl solemnly.

"And you have no relatives or friends in the city?"

"None whatever."

"I am all alone in the world, too," said Rudolf after a pause.

"I am glad of that," said the girl promptly, and somehow it pleased the young man to hear that she approved of his bereft condition.

Very suddenly her eyelids dropped and she sighed deeply.

"I am awfully sleepy," she said, "and I feel so good."

Rudolf rose and took his hat.

"Then I'll say good night. A long night's sleep will be fine for you."

He held out his hand, and she took it and said "Good night." But her eyes asked a question so eloquently, so frankly and pathetically that he answered it with words.

"Oh, I'm coming back tomorrow to see how you are getting along. You can't get rid of me so easily."

Then at the door, as though the way of his coming had been so much less important than the fact that he had come, she asked, "How did you come to knock at my door?"

He looked at her for a moment, remembering the cards, and felt a sudden jealous pain. What if they had fallen into other hands as adventurous as his? Quickly he decided that she must never know the truth. He would never let her know that he was aware of the strange expedient to which she had been driven by her great distress.

"One of our piano tuners lives in this house," he said. "I knocked at your door by mistake."

The last thing he saw in the room before the green door closed was her [illegible]

[illegible]

We[illegible] he descended to the [illegible]. The Ethiopian [illegible] there. Rudolf confronted him with his two cards in his hand.

"W[illegible] the way you [illegible] these cards and what they mean?" he asked.

In a broad, good natured grin the negro exhibited a splendid advertisement of his master's profession.

"Dar it is, boss," he said, pointing down the street. "But I 'spect you is a little late for de fust act."

Looking the way he pointed, Rudolf saw above the entrance to a theater the blazing electric sign of its new play, "The Green Door."

"I'm informed dat it's a fust rate show, sah," said the negro. "De agent what represents it pussented me with a dollar, sah, to distribute a few of his cards along with de doctah's. May I offer you one of de doctah's cards, sah?"

AN ARRAY OF WARES FROM THE GROCERY AND THE RESTAURANT.

At the corner of the block in which he lived Rudolf stopped for a glass of beer and a cigar. When he had come out with his lighted weed he buttoned his coat, pushed back his hat and said stoutly to the lamppost on the corner:

"All the same, I believe it was the hand of fate that doped out the way for me to find her."

Which conclusion, under the circumstances, certainly admits Rudolf Steiner to the ranks of the true followers of Romance and Adventure.

CASTE IN LONDON.

Good Clothes Count For Nothing if One Lives In W. C.

"I'd know you were [illegible] if I'd only seen your [illegible] velope," said the [illegible]. [illegible] men always seem to put [illegible] they possibly can into an address."

Well, the address of [illegible] is a very important thing—almost as important as his pedigree. A good address, especially in London, is more highly regarded than square meals, the latter often being sacrificed for the former.

There are, as has been explained, only certain parts of London in which one can live and be recognized. It is divided into districts, the most important of which bears the address London, W.

The next district in importance is S. W. (southwest). This includes Chelsea, where the artists congregate, and South Kensington, where upper middle class fashionable folks live.

N. W. (northwest) includes Hampstead, St. John's Wood, Belsize Park (one of the prettiest and healthiest parts of London, where wealthy city men reside, and the many large residences there can boast beautiful gardens and lawns, such as are unobtainable in any other part of London.

The next district and one of the most closely populated is W. C. (west central). It is a world of boarding houses and, being the most convenient part of London for railway stations, places of amusement and sightseeing generally, it is peopled with the most cosmopolitan set to be found anywhere in the world.

One of the puzzles of this address is that if you write W. C. after it the recipient will probably not bother to call, but if you write in such and such a place and add "Russell square" that makes it all right. Russell square is recognized, but west central is not.

On meeting new people the first thing they invariably ask is your address. If you are wearing a nice frock and say you live W. they immediately ask you to dinner, but if you say west central the nice frock carries no weight. They simply say, "How very odd!" and talk about the weather.—London Letter in New York Sun.

TYBURN TREE.

Park lane was Tyburn lane, and it seems as if the gallows described in an old document as "movable" at one time stood at its east corner. It was there the ferocious Lord Ferrers was hanged in 1760 for murdering his servant.

Horace Walpole's words paint the picture well: "He shamed heroes. He bore the solemnity of a pompous and tedious procession of above two hours from the Tower to Tyburn with as much tranquillity as if he were only going to his own funeral, not to his own execution." And when one of the dragoons of the procession was thrown from his horse Lord Ferrers expressed much concern and said, "I hope there will be no death today but mine."

On went the procession, with a mob about it sufficient to make its progress slow and laborious. Small wonder that the age of Thackeray, with Thackeray's help, set up its scaffolds within four high walls. Asking for drink, Lord Ferrers was refused, for, said the sheriff, late regulations enjoined him not to let prisoners drink wine passing from the place of imprisonment to that of execution, great indecencies having been committed by the drunkenness of the criminals in the hour of execution.

"And, though," said he, "my lord, I might think myself excusable in overlooking this order out of regard to your lordship's rank, yet there is another reason, which, I am sure, will weigh with you. Your lordship is sensible of the greatness of the crowd. We must draw up at some tavern. The confluence would be so great that it would delay the expedition which your lordship seems so much to desire."

But decency—so often paraded by those who outrage it—ended with the murderer's death.

"The executioners fought for the rope, and the one who lost it wept, the greatest tragedy, to his thinking, of the day!"—London Sketch.

They Were Not Indians.

It is said that when the first Chinese entered California the Indians were very curious about them. A dispute arose among some of them as to what country the strangers might hail from and whether or not they were Indians. The Indians decided to apply the water test. One day a party of Indians met a party of Chinamen approaching a little stream. The strangers approached the bridge and started across. The Indians, too, filed across and, meeting the Chinamen in midstream, pushed two of them into the angry, spuming current below. The test was conclusive. They could not swim. They were not Indians.

A Mountain Colloquy.

"Did your husband get that terrible red nose working out in the sunshine?" asked one woman.

"No," answered the other. "That ain't sunshine. That's moonshine."—Washington Times.

Bird's Sense of Direction.

The migratory instinct in birds is combined with another equally mysterious, that of the sense of direction. A gentleman engaged in scientific research work for the fishery board on board the government steamboat Gold Seeker recorded a very interesting observation he made of this characteristic of migratory bird life. An oyster catcher that was being buffeted by a head wind in its eastern flight across the North sea toward the continental shores alighted on the boat. It took kindly to the attention paid to it so long as the boat kept its easterly course, but when the course of the boat was altered a few points to the northward the bird immediately showed signs of uneasiness and after an apparent consideration of its bearings flew into the darkness [illegible] on its eastbound course. The alteration in the boat's course was revealed to those who were watching the bird only when the compass was examined.—Scotsman.

SEAL HUNTING.

Eskimo Methods In Dealing With the Wary Creatures.

Writing of far northern hunting methods, Harry Whitney thus describes in Outing how Eskimos kill the wary seal:

"Many seals were seen on the fresh made ice, and Esa-yon, my head man, expressed a desire that I take charge of his dog team while he stalked some of them. Seals are extremely shy, and great caution must be practiced in approaching them. The Eskimos use a blind in the form of a miniature sledge, about eighteen inches in length by six in width, with bearskins tacked on the runners. Fore and aft are two upright crotched sticks, upon which the rifle rests and to which it is lashed. On the front of the sledge a crossbar sustains two long perpendicular sticks, over which a piece of white cloth is stretched, or when that is not attainable bareskin is substituted. Through a hole in this cloth screen the muzzle of the rifle protrudes.

"Holding his blind before him, he was enabled to walk within 300 or 400 yards of a seal without startling it. Then he dropped on his hands and knees and pushed the little sledge before him. Thus hidden behind the cloth screen, which so blended with the ice as to arouse in the seal no suspicion of danger, he approached within fifty yards before shooting. Seals always lie close to their holes, and it is necessary to hit them in the head or under the shoulder and have the bullet penetrate the heart and kill them instantly; otherwise they will flop into the hole and sink before it is possible to reach them."

NORWAY'S BILL OF FARE.

Fish and Boiled Potatoes Served Day After Day.

"As we sat cozily before the cheerful blaze," writes Caroline Thurber in a delightful account of "A Motor Invasion of Norway" in the Century, "we indulged in mathematical calculations and found that we had eaten forty-two consecutive meals of fish, with potatoes never otherwise than boiled. One of the women of our party once cried from her soul to a sympathetic looking host: 'Why, oh, why, are there no chickens in Norway?'

"'There are chicken, but they are for laying purposes.'

"'Then why, oh, why, do you always boil your potatoes?'

"'We are different from you, madam. We don't like them messy. We prefer to know a potato as a potato when we eat it.'

"In our passage through the country we had certainly encountered new and unpalatable foods, but we were always nourished, for good milk, butter and eggs were everywhere at hand, and we developed powers of digestion previously undreamed of. Even so, one supper menu staggered us, nota bene: Sausages, three kinds; raw salmon, pickled anchovies, shrimps, cold fried fish, cold fish pudding, cold meats, five varieties of cheese, pickles, oranges and gooseberry marmalade, tea, four kinds of raised bread, that bread with caraway, English biscuit, Norwegian rusks, fried eggs, hot stew (variety unrecognized) and boiled potatoes."

A Week of Blunders.

Sir William Harcourt once told me that he had dined out every night for a whole week in advance of his invitation. He discovered his mistake only on the last night, when on going to dine with some people who gave long invitations and large dinners he found them alone. After a very pleasant evening he thanked them for asking him in so friendly a manner, whereupon they explained that the invitation had been for a week later, but that they had been only too delighted at his mistake. On hearing this Sir William looked at his engagement book and discovered that this was the last of a [illegible] which he had [illegible].—"Memories of [illegible]," [illegible] Heber.

[illegible]

R[illegible] George [illegible] In his [illegible] touching [illegible]

"For fourteen years I have not had a day's real health; I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary, and I have done my work unflinchingly. I have written in bed and written out of it, written in hemorrhages, written in sickness, written torn by coughing, written when my head swam for weakness, and for so long, it seems to me, I have won my wager and recovered my glove. I am better now—have been, rightly speaking, since first I came to the Pacific—and still few are the days when I am not in some physical distress. And the battle goes on—ill or well is a trifle so that it goes. I was made for a contest, and the powers have so willed that my battlefield should be this dingy, inglorious one of the bed and the physic bottle. At least I have not failed, but I would have preferred a place of trumpetings and the open air over my head."

BENEFITS OF FIRE INSURANCE.

Fire insurance has been thoroughly welded, as it were, at a white heat, into the fabric of modern enterprise, and is today as much of a staple among man's necessities as iron, wool meat or flour. It has passed into a proverb among business men that a business not worth insuring is not worth doing. Careful wholesale merchants will not knowingly sell to retail dealers who are not insured, and a prudent man would not engage in business at all did not insurance afford him a secure foundation. At this late day it is not often necessary to argue the necessity for fire insurance with those who have the intelligence to acquire insurable property. It is not only insurance, however, that is needed, but good insurance, such as is written by

The High school graduating exercises were held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening before one of the largest audiences in the history of the school, parents, pupils, teachers and friends turning out in large numbers to lend their presence to the closing event in the Winchester High School Class of [illegible]. The program, [illegible] covered a period of about an hour and a half, was well presented, and included the President's address, orations, essays and music by the school chorus under the direction of Albert Edmund Brown.

As is the present custom the class prophecy, history, statistics, etc., were given privately at the Class Day.

The music by the chorus of about [illegible] voices was again a feature of great pleasure to the audience, the two numbers given at the opening and close of the program calling forth much applause. The first selection was "The Two Grenadiers" by Schumann, and "A Merry Life," from the Italian, by Denza, was sung previous to the presentation of the diplomas by Mr. Robert C. Metcalf, formerly superintendent of the schools. Mr. Brown's work in the school has already received much favorable comment, and the work of this graduation amply fulfilled the expectations and upheld the high standard set in the Winchester schools for this branch of study.

The opening prayer was given by Rev. William I. Lawrance, and except for the presentation of the diplomas, the entire program was given by the scholars.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS
Walter Badger

Parents and Friends:

In behalf of the class of 1910 it gives me great pleasure to welcome you here this evening to witness the successful close of our public school education. The four years which we have spent in the Winchester High School have been only a preparation for the work [illegible] truths which [illegible].

Thus we can truthfully say that our High school course has been the common foundation upon which [illegible]. We have all enjoyed [illegible] and from now on the value of our structure lies with each individual's ability to build wisely.

Just as every building or structure or work of any kind depends upon the solidity of its foundation, so our future depends greatly upon the uses we have made of our High school course. It rests with us, I say, because none could have done more for us than has been done by our parents, teachers and citizens of this town. Therefore, it is not only my duty but pleasure to thank them for their interest and painstaking care in our welfare. We have chosen as our motto, "I will either find a way or make one." The resolution expressed in those few words is well worthy of serious thought. Many times a life considered a failure has been turned to success through the exercise of the will. Time and again the most difficult problems are solved, if we have the courage of our convictions. Let us then go out into the world prepared to accept opportunity as it comes always ready to overcome the barriers which seem to obstruct our path and ever striving to maintain the ideals toward which our minds and hearts direct us.

The first essay on the program was that of Miss Dorothy Wellington, being entitled "Public Playgrounds," and containing more than usual interest in view of the recent playground movement in this town. The following abstract is taken from her remarks:

"In the city where they were first established, the playgrounds provided a place where the children, the young people of the community, could obtain exercise. I mean, legitimate, healthful exercise without peril to life and limb. Incidentally, the children were also kept out of mischief. After the playgrounds were all established and the directors became somewhat acquainted with their charges, it became very evident that, besides providing physical exercise, they needed to help these same boys and girls to do some mental gymnastics and raise their moral standards. As the movement has spread beyond the city, however, its motive has been modified. Besides there being no such imperative need, in the suburbs, to raise the moral standard, it is also not necessary to provide a safe place to play. In every town, there are plenty of such places, but when the young people come, there is nothing to do, nothing to hold their interest, and so they do not stay. That is [illegible] ... [illegible] pieces, but they [illegible] annoy their elders and that they do to the full extent of their ability."

During April I visited the Newton playground. Although it was not quite in working order, it nevertheless was an active [illegible] ... [illegible] of it continuing [illegible] there were twenty-five boys regularly practising football.

If we in Winchester can equal what has already been done in Newton, and, furthermore, accomplish all that is intended there, we shall have good reason to be proud of our success.

The oration by Francis X. McNally on "King Cotton" was well given and forceful, the following paragraph summarizing the thought fairly well.

"What would the history of the country be without cotton? We should have had no Civil War, for slavery would not have been in such demand. England would have had no incentive to disregard her agreement of neutrality. The inventive genius of Eli Whitney and others would never have been developed. This country would not be so independent of imports nor so rich from exports. The manufacture of the product would probably never have become of any importance here, our swift rivers might run on forever with their power wasted," many of

CALUMET WON FIRST IN SIX INNINGS.

The first match in the series of three games between nines representing the Calumet and Country Clubs was played on Manchester Field Tuesday afternoon in the early evening. The nines were representative only, both clubs failing to place nine members in the field, and although [illegible] the game was evidently played somewhere between five and six o'clock.

Calumet won the match in six innings, which appeared to be time enough for all the players to get their fill of base ball with the thermometer standing at 90 in the shade. The score was 11 to 3. The batteries were Bond and Flaherty for Calumet and Brooks and Thompson for the Country Club.

Conspicuous by their absence were the Calumet big three, Messrs. Stephenson, Commins and Newman, but fortunately for the team the emergency did not arise for the need of their services. The star player of the evening was President Tenney of the Calumets, who batted strongly for a man wearing a silk hat and fielding well by carrying an umbrella in centre. Unfortunately Mr. Tenney did not get a chance to touch the ball. A feature of the game was Mr. [illegible]'s race with a fly which he won by beating it by [illegible] seconds.

[illegible]

TREE TO REMAIN.

[illegible] consideration again to remain.

The tree is partly in the street, and its removal has been protested in a petition of some 20 names sent to the tree warden.

WATER OPPORTUNITIES.

Editor of the Star:

[illegible] Winchester is like [illegible] town, [illegible] not apparently such as would encourage the establishment of manufactories on any considerable scale, [illegible] manufacturing is in itself perfectly honorable and praiseworthy; nevertheless when any locality, whether Winchester or any other place, possesses superior attractions and advantages for strictly residential purposes, it is well, in these days of increasingly congested populations, that we should have some spots where the largest possible enjoyment may be had of free sunlight, pure air, and open spaces. If, then, Winchester is to remain for an indefinite time, largely devoted to homes, it is highly desirable to take long looks ahead and to plan, not simply for the present day, but for many generations to come. Such foresight, however, embraces the consideration of a large number of subjects, covering a broad field. [illegible] time allow me to [illegible] upon one only of the numerous topics involved, in the hope that others may be stimulated to think about the large and [illegible] problem [illegible] the development of Winchester. The single item to which I wish at this time to draw attention is the question of properly utilizing our water opportunities.

In its river, ponds and lakes Winchester is favored beyond most communities, and these are moreover so centrally located that they are easily accessible to all the inhabitants of the town and [illegible] be readily enjoyed by every one. Would it not be worth while to spend a little money in making [illegible] ... On the other hand it is hardly conceivable that the water would be rendered less [illegible] for industrial purposes if flowing along attractive banks, and certainly no individual owner would object to aesthetic improvements which did not inflict on him a pecuniary injury. But it will also be asserted that such outlays mean expenditure of money for unproductive purposes. Are we so sure of this? Are we certain that we should not get back the money, perhaps many times over? To take an illustration on a small scale: is it not entirely likely that the beautifying of the High school and Town Hall grounds with shrubbery makes a sufficiently favorable impression upon prospective residents [illegible] ... desirable and wealthy citizens.

Not only in availing themselves of every advantage afforded by parks and [illegible] ... Americans a worthy example, but they also utilize their water resources in another way which we might imitate to good purpose, and that is in the abundant use of fountains. In our case we [illegible] of water in its [illegible] Metropolitan system [illegible] for water [illegible] but our water [illegible] small quantity passing [illegible] does not necessitate [illegible] any one of a single drop now [illegible] used. We have an abundant [illegible] needs, and, when all services are on meter, we shall presumably have enough water for at least double our present population, for domestic purposes at any rate. If the time comes when we need to limit or even cut out certain users, such as manufacturers, and market gardeners, that can be done as occasion necessitates, for naturally the householders have the first claim; but that is a remote contingency at best. In this year of grace 1910, we are confronted by no shortage of water, and shall not be for years to come, so far as supplying one fountain is concerned. A running fountain is one of the most attractive and refreshing sights we can furnish, and this can be done at no expense whatever for the water.

Most of us have our share of sorrow and suffering, of failure and disappointment, of bodily pain and mental anguish. Let us then, so far as possible, offset these by filling life as full as we can of [illegible] happiness; let us do all we can to contribute toward the joy of living; let us [illegible] our beautiful Winchester even more beautiful; and one of the many ways open to us is to improve river and ponds, and to let some of our unused water run through our unused fountain.

Charles E. A. Currier.

BAPTIST PICNIC.

The annual picnic of the First Baptist Sunday School, which was scheduled for [illegible] was postponed [illegible] Saturday owing to [illegible]. In the afternoon there will be a [illegible] game between the Winchester A. A. and an outside team.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

It is the duty of every good Winchesterite who has an eye to the public welfare to endeavor to the best of his ability to keep the streets of the town tidy and snip-shape. Every good citizen ought to help clean the streets. Every Winchesterite can help in a negative way by not throwing refuse on the sidewalk or into the gutter, by not spitting on the sidewalk. [illegible] these restrictions should not be confined to individuals, the influence should be used with neighbors to have them do the same.

In the course of a conversation on the duties of parents toward their children one of our Winchester clerical gentlemen took occasion to remark that in his opinion there is too much activity in advocating the playground idea for children and too little done in the direction of keeping them at home to do what work they might. In the [illegible] he pointed out to The Spectator the children are under the eye of their parents [illegible] of the way of mischief and [illegible]. The money spent on playgrounds, the clerical gentleman thinks, could be more advantageously spent elsewhere.

One of Winchester's foremost citizens is correct in asserting that this town is one of the best in the Commonwealth. Winchester has [illegible] reputation as one of the leading of the smaller communities, and will maintain it.

Some Winchesterites who have not yet put up [illegible] screens are going up and down the town [illegible] hats.

[illegible] The Spectator's acquaintance [illegible] sometimes [illegible] The Spectator has not found so [illegible] Winchester [illegible] ideas [illegible] mentally [illegible] during [illegible] society, but act [illegible] Novel [illegible] mental reactions. Every Winchesterite confesses at times to doing silly things. Sanity is a relative term. A man may do absurd things a dozen times a day and still be accounted sane. To relish a hobby and cultivate a fad when at leisure is regarded by many as a wise thing to do. Some say it is better to play the fool sometimes than to be prematurally wise. High thinkers affirm that the best of us really know little and understand nothing.

A well known Winchesterite complains to The Spectator that his wife treats him like a dog. If he gets the treatment that some women here in Winchester give their dogs, he is luckier than most husbands.

The advertising columns of The STAR are its "human interest" columns. The store keeper's business story there will bring results if he has been wise enough to put to best possible use the Power of Words. Not every advertiser can afford to use large display space. That is all the more reason that the small advertiser should be careful of what he puts in his small space. If any storekeeper in Winchester has never before tried the power of intelligent advertising, it should be tried now.

A Pleasant street friend of The Spectator muses that advice given away is not appreciated, and it is given away because the giver has no use for it himself.

One of Winchester's well known residents treated his neighbors to a very fine "harvest" scene recently. He was sitting by an open window cutting his corn.

The Spectator readily concedes that any young man in Winchester has a right to bang his hair in the middle, but when The Spectator sees such a one his soul is filled with horror. If all the silly persons in the world were to be suddenly struck down, The Spectator fears the chances of escape of the young man in question would be exceedingly minute.

"What an appetite that fellow has!" exclaimed a recent visitor at a Main street house. "I never saw a person eat as he does." [illegible] big eater [illegible] pig eat [illegible] nothing [illegible] think [illegible] admiration [illegible] powers [illegible] favorite.

"Let the women vote if they want to," said a prominent Winchester business man within hearing of The Spectator. "Any woman who supports a husband and family of children is capable of supporting the Constitution."

PIANOFORTE RECITAL.

The Dorchester pupils of Miss Sadie F. Bowser of Winchester gave a most successful recital last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George W. Yeaton, 15 Kenwood street, Dorchester, assisted by Miss Minna Lawrence Harding reader, Mr. William L. Bowser tenor and Mr. Arthur Carpenter monologist. The pupils taking part did excellent work, each one from the first to the fifth grade playing their selection easily and entirely without notes. Miss Harding made her usual happy selections for the occasion thereby giving much pleasure. Mr. Bowser sang "If I had the world to give you," and the "Garden of roses," responding to encores for each.

Mr. and Miss Bowser sang two vocal duets which were well received. Mr. Carpenter's selections were heartily encored and proved a most pleasing innovation to the usual program. The spacious hall and parlors was decorated with flags and an artistic arrangement of roses and ferns.

PLAYGROUND NOTES.

[illegible] basket ball standards were completed during the [illegible] while the swing uprights are ready awaiting the arrival of the swing equipment.

Active operations will begin on Manchester field, Monday morning, June 27 at 9 a. m. It's hoped that sufficient apparatus will be in position so that all phases of the work may be carried on, if not, base ball, volley ball, soccer, and various other games, with the basket ball, will be started. The other equipment will then be added as quickly as possible.

The base ball league has not as yet been formed or schedule planned out because of the small number of teams that have entered up to date. It is hoped that the various teams of the town, of all ages will enter the league and hand in their name to the Playground Supervisor.

No definite statements can be made as yet regarding the playground at the Chapin School on Swanton street as arrangements for the supervision have not been completed.

It is hoped that all the citizens of Winchester will avail themselves of the privileges of the Playgrounds as much as possible. It is believed that old and young may find plenty of opportunity for recreation and enjoyment. The hours on Manchester field will be from 9 a. m.—12 m., 2 p. m.—5 p. m.

FIRE AT BACON'S MILL.

Box 28 at Bacon's felt mill was sounded shortly after three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, and when persons in the centre looked down the railroad tracks the whole mill appeared to be doomed, so thick was the volume of smoke arising from it. The fire apparatus made a record run to the scene, notwithstanding the intense heat of the afternoon.

The blaze was confined to a storage house next to the railroad, used for raw material, it being filled mainly with wool. It is thought that the intense heat caused the wool to ignite. The fire hose at the mill was quickly put on the fire and this [illegible] the flames [illegible]

DRYING SECURITY VAULTS.

[illegible] and [illegible] companies are providing their vaults with electric radiators for drying purposes only. This is certainly a move for the survival of the fittest documents, let it be hoped. One remembers the musty, old, all smelling goat parchments of centuries agone over which lawyers and their clerks have had to spend days and weeks poring into the mysteries of old titles and at the same time being half killed by the very awful odors from these ancient papers. In the future, thanks to electricity, none of this.

In one particular vault of which a good convincing illustration may here be given there have been installed two electric radiators by which the valuable papers and documents may thus be forever preserved in their original condition. It has long been a problem how to keep dry and unmusty, in one man's word, valuable books and such like, and this is the way, the only way. Will all safety deposit vault managers please note. It will give their customers an added sense of security. For the moth and rust will no longer corrupt, and with electrical burglar devices thieves can certainly never break through and steal. —Electrical City Magazine.

WINCHESTER HIGH WON LAWSON RACE

Paddling in a drizzling rain storm and clipping [illegible] seconds off the record time the Winchester High School crew won the Lawson Trophy Race, the annual scholastic canoe event on Lake Mystic [illegible] June [illegible]. The Winchester crew covered the half mile course [illegible] to better the time [illegible] seconds [illegible] form [illegible] than at any [illegible] course.

The former record [illegible] and was made by the [illegible] 1907.

Notwithstanding the stormy weather the lake was well covered with boats and canoes carrying the enthusiastic followers of the various crews, while the club house and floats at Medford, where the finish was held, were thronged.

Winchester drew the course at the Boulevard side of the lake, with Medford in the centre and Dedham on the Cambridge [illegible] side. [illegible] was paddled [illegible] first quarter, when it [illegible] the line. Winchester [illegible] and easily [illegible] Dedham [illegible] and Medford by four.

The crews rowed as follows: Winchester High, Locke stroke, Sherman 2, Tuck 3, Capt. Hanson 4. Dedham High, [illegible] stroke, [illegible] 2, Sukeforth 3, Capt. Lidey 4. Medford High, [illegible] stroke, Tyson 2, [illegible] 3, Capt. Street 4.

The officials of the race were George B. Smith of Winchester, [illegible] of Dedham and [illegible] Daly of Medford, judges at the finish; [illegible] Howard of Medford, starter; Arthur E. Mather of Medford [illegible] and Chester [illegible] Pike [illegible] of Medford [illegible] of the course.

This is the first time that Winchester High has won the trophy, although it often has been a dangerous competitor. Dedham has won it five times and Medford three. The trophy for which the race is paddled is of [illegible] bronze, made from the model of [illegible] which was [illegible] Francis W. Lawson to race for the American [illegible]. It is a perpetual trophy, to be held by the winning crew till the next race.

"Already we have passed out of this quarter, and the groom on consulting his watch informs us that we have been riding over three hours, and are therefore about [illegible] miles out of London. Thus far nothing has occurred to mar the serenity of our way except a few quarrels [illegible] who would refuse to yield the right of way to coaches going to London. Now the road seems to be getting rougher, and [illegible] we are jolted up and down [illegible] have great difficulty in keeping our places. One bump succeeds another, and then, just as we are trying to compose ourselves we are again thrown forward [illegible] against one another, and tossed back into our seat with a great [illegible]. The [illegible]'s beaver is knocked [illegible] monkey commences to [illegible] and the dog to bark. Just as it [illegible] as if we were going to win [illegible] the coach swerves, and [illegible] deathly second it has [illegible] on its side. For the [illegible] we [illegible] that we make no [illegible] to disentangle ourselves. At length, however, the [illegible], who has fainted, regains consciousness and blushing, withdraws herself from the arms of the old gentleman in whose she was thrown, and thus brings us to our senses. The groom [illegible] gets up and calling his [illegible] to his aid picks up his [illegible] the best we can [illegible] the poor driver out of his muddy [illegible]. As [illegible] green suit, it [illegible] "It was [illegible]." [illegible] the horses are [illegible] highwaymen [illegible] road with [illegible] dangling [illegible] send shivers up and down our backs.

Now we are nearing the most [illegible] spot [illegible] highwaymen, and the old gentleman begins to tell stories of all [illegible] which [illegible] The poor little [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] "I [illegible] well [illegible] Can it be true? Yes it is the voice of the coachman chuckling and explaining in his uncouth way: "If the giblets don't teach them a lesson I will," and with that he slams the door.

Relieved as we are by this fortunate turn of affairs, we are yet so worn out by our long ride that we can scarcely calm our over excited nerves. However, the most dangerous part of our journey is over, and at last we are on the outskirts of Oxford. In another hour we have [illegible] the [illegible] of the Red Mouse and are telling our experience to the jovial host, who stands smiling at the door welcoming us to a hearty supper and a warm [illegible]."

From Mr. Schuler's [illegible] we give two paragraphs in which the general [illegible] is well expressed, the emphasis being especially strong in the second.

"About two months ago I witnessed a most destructive forest fire just south of Concord, N. H. The vegetation was so dry that a small spark falling from a locomotive kindled a blaze. The first intimation anyone had of the fire was the cloud of murky, black smoke, which shortly began to roll up from the burning pines. I saw the smoke from a distance of five miles. When I reached the scene, the flames, some of them sixty feet high, fanned by a stiff breeze were sweeping on at a terrific rate. Every puff of wind would send the fire seething through the top of some gigantic pine, then the dead needles and leaves at the foot of the tree would burst into flames. In almost less time than it takes to tell it, the tree would be destroyed. Within the half hour since the fire had been discovered it had already burned over two square miles of valuable pine and oak. It raged on all night long, lighting up the sky for miles around with its lurid glare and its constant clouds of bright sparks. When late the next day the flames were finally checked by the Merrimac, six square miles of timber had been turned to charred and smouldering stumps.

By just such destructive fires, people have been aroused of late years to take an interest in the great national problem of preserving the forests. The number of those who recognize the vast importance of this subject increases daily. Indeed so many are [illegible] to its values that it compels attention."

"The basis of forestry is scientific lumbering. It consists not merely of cutting down marketable lumber, but of planting trees where there are none and [illegible] them out where they are too thick. Just to show the superiority of [illegible] lumbering over the old fashioned method I will cite the following example.

Of two brothers with whom I was well acquainted, one stayed at home and took care of the farm while the other went to college. When the mother died some years ago, the farm was divided between the two boys. The farmer let his share of the wood lot grow as it might, until last year he cut off the entire growth. The college man, however, persisted in caring for his wood lot according to the method of scientific lumbering. He [illegible] cut out the larger trees, [illegible] the smaller ones a chance to grow. [illegible]

[illegible] As you stand on the brink of the precipice and look down for hundreds of feet to the rushing waters below, you shudder at the fearful thought of slipping on the pine needles and falling headlong down the perpendicular cliff. Far up the gorge the water comes tumbling down over the rocks, and then, eddying in and out among the smaller stones, slides smoothly over a flat boulder and goes foaming on again till it is lost in the distance.

Climbing Ascutney Mountain, which looms up above Windsor, not very far away, is a favorite diversion. The day we made our ascent was clear, cool and sunny. After a delightful ride to the foot, we all jumped out, eager to begin the climb, three miles to the top. The path looked so inviting that the uninitiated dashed boldly ahead, but the more experienced climbed slowly and surely. After struggling for a long time up the rocky mountain path, edged with delicate ferns and mosses, with here and there a rare specimen of a mountain flower, we reached a spring, "Half Way Spring," a conspicuous sign board called it, though really we were two thirds of the way up. Here we called a halt to refresh ourselves with a pickle and a sandwich or two from the luncheon hampers, and to fill all the bottles we could carry with the sparkling water. But impatient to reach the top, we soon started on again. The last quarter of a mile is a hard one, and we were all breathless when we did finally reach the top. With one desperate dash, we ran to throw ourselves on the rocks with deep sighs of satisfaction.

The view from the summit is of indescribable beauty. An almost boundless expanse of green valleys stretched on and on till it terminates on the far away mountains. Nearby you may see flocks of sheep, looking like so many balls of cotton, straying peacefully over the velvety green. Here and there a solitary red farm house blazes up like a flag on a gold ground, its fertile fields perhaps irrigated by a narrow river, shining like a silver ribbon in the sunlight. In the far distance loom the mountains, range upon range in soft shades of a purplish gray, and over all [illegible] infinite blue of the summer sky.

CLASS SONG

BY DOROTHY ARMSTRONG.

The Class of Ninteen Hundred Ten!
The class we'll ne'er forget.
O may our friendship long remain,
With never one regret!
Tho' some may roam away from home,
Some ne'er return again,
Whate'er we do, we will be true
To dear old Nineteen Ten.
Whate'er we do, we will be true
To dear old Nineteen Ten.
Vacation days have come at last,
We lay our books aside;
But may the lessons we have learned
Forevermore abide.
Whatever comes to us in life,
We'll bear these lines in mind:
That we will strive a way to make,
If one we cannot find;
That we will strive a way to make,
If one we cannot find.
The time has come to say "Good bye"
To all our schoolmates dear;
Farewells to say with grateful hearts
To all our teachers here.
Tho' we depart, come, let us keep
Class spirit to the end:
And now we'll give three hearty cheers
For dear old Nineteen Ten!

Winchester's Opportunities.

Winchester is slow to improve its opportunities. Nature has been lavish in this direction, but the town fails to co-operate. Modern streets, water systems, schools, fire department, library and playground we have the best. But the beautiful side has been sadly neglected, although there is no town or city in this part of the State wherein the opportunities are so great as right here in Winchester. Committees, almost without number, have wrestled with this questions, and brought forth nothing. Those of our town officials who have to do with this subject, even in a small way, have little or nothing to recommend and yet, so much might be done toward a Winchester Beautiful. Even the fountain on the Common, always an attractive sight, has been allowed to fall into disuse. No wonder that thinking men, those who have acquired a taste for the beautiful and the aesthetic are beginning to marvel at our deferred opportunities. Let us make a beginning now and make our lives more pleasant, so that there will be no need to go elsewhere to dwell on borrowed beauties. We comment to the readers of the STAR the communication from Mr. C. F. A. Currier to be found elsewhere in this issue. The idea embodied by him is in the minds of a great many of our prominent citizens. Why not make a beginning now toward carrying this out. The STAR would pleased to hear from other citizens on this matter.

PROOF POSITIVE OF THE GROWTH OF PEACE.

Beneath the graciousness of speech with which Dr. Lammasch, president of the arbitration court which is now trying the New Foundland fisheries case, opened the proceedings, and the deserved compliments which he bestowed upon the eminent council, among whom, as one of the American representatives, is a brilliant member of the Boston bar, Samual J. Elder, lies proof positive of the enduring worth of the arbitration idea.

Since its establishment the Permanent Court of International Arbitration has shown, in words of Dr. Lammasch, "that, instead of appealing to brute force with its casualties, cruelties and injustices . . . important differences between mighty States may be adjusted according to laws of equity, justice and humanity." In fact, the peace tribunal has decided "disputes touching all four continents;" the "greatest powers of the world have submitted by their free will . . . and nations of minor forces have found their protection before it." Governments have appealed to the court not once but two and three times and arbitrators sitting in one case have been asked through their fairness and reasonableness, to decide other cases. All of which is the most convincing evidence, said the president, that the nations have been satisfied with the work of the court. And he added:

"Every sentence rendered by this court ought to be, by virtue of its impartiality and equity a new marble pillar to sustain the ideal palace of Justice and Equity, the symbol of which is to be that noble edifice which has been dedicated in this town (The Hague) by the munificence of a man whose name is [illegible] both litigant nations."

Moved by the president's speech, [illegible] frequently expressed, it is [illegible] nations freely accept the decision of the Court of Arbitration as freely appeal to the court again when disputes do not yield to diplomatic treatment. It is this international satisfaction that promises a speedy realization of international peace.

AN ATTRACTIVE STORE.

The new firm of F. E. Barnes and Co., desires to call the attention of the readers of this paper to some of the attractions of their new store.

First. The stock is new, clean and up-to-date, and it is our aim to keep it so.

Second: Our prices are reasonable and our goods reliable.

Third. Our large windows and light interior finish combine to give us most excellent light, which is so desirable in the selection of dry goods and for evening use, we have the new Tungsten lamps with the latest macbeth shades, the combination of which leaves nothing to be desired in the way of evening light.

Fourth: We have ample space to show our goods and we consider it a pleasure to do so.

And lastly it will be our constant aim to so please our customers that they will feel less and less need of going out of town to spend their money.

RAINY DAY HOLIDAYS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

During the past school year at varying intervals, the warning blast of the whistle has sounded in the early morning giving the signal to the school children of Winchester that no school session would be held for the day on account of the severity of the weather. If this recurring signal had been taken as an indication of really rigorous weather necessitating the confinement to their homes of all persons old and young other than those physically hardy, it is to be feared that many of us (who though far from robust, have lost scarcely a day from business during the same period) would have found our capacity for attending to business somewhat diminished had we obeyed the morning mandate.

Granting that children of a tender age should be carefully guarded as to their physical well being, particularly in those seasons during which la grippe and pneumonia are rife, it would nevertheless appear that there ought to be some limit to the exercise of this generous spirit of dispensing rainy weather holidays. One may err by being cautious just as much as by being over zealous. To over safeguard young people against draughts and colds by encouraging them to keep within doors without a strong reason therefor is to bring on just those evils which a reasonable precaution should be exercised to prevent, the undergoing of a little exposure being necessary to build up strong and healthy bodies for the children.

On a few of the days last winter, the temperature and the snow were such as to require the wise exercise of the signal of admonition, but on some of the days, particularly during the spring months last past [illegible] the holding of the sessions, considerable difficulty has been experienced in the endeavor to keep the young idea within the bounds set by the school authorities. On such days the weather not being sufficiently austere to prevent the going out of the ladies of the family, the younger element by force of the example set by their elders, are inclined to look upon the postponement of study and recitation hours at these times as a period of relaxation to be celebrated in the open air. Under such circumstances parents would prefer that their children should be at school, and that they should be left personally to decide the amount of physical exposure to which their boys and girls should properly be subjected.

It was a saying of the first Napoleon that every neglected hour was a chance for misfortune in future life. Every day lost to a student is a subtraction from his future efficiency, and this loss is directly proportionate to the number of days he is kept from his instruction; and, therefore, is a greater or less impairment of his capacity for work. If students are discouraged from attending school merely because of a slight inclemency in the weather, are they not also encouraged to seek further excuses or not devoting their care and attention to their school work, and in a larger sense taught to regard obstacles not as obstructions to be met and overcome, but as reasons for turning aside from their appointed tasks?

In the days of the little red school house, the sessions of which usually occurred in the winter, the weather would be marked in its severity before it could imprison in the isolated farmhouses the school children of those bygone times. The storm and the cold were then welcomed as affording time and opportunities for mental advancement, the days of other and better seasons being employed in the toil of the farm and the upbuilding of those habits of industry and persistency which have made this country great and glorious.

If in those days of limited educational advantages, unlimited amounts of rain and snow could be braved by the youth of our ancestors, and the journey back and forth over rugged roads made each day, what can be said of the vigor of their descendants, who, with opportunities for great intellectual advancement and smooth thoroughfares, are not adjudged sufficiently robust to withstand the assault of the ordinary New England snow storm or the onslaught of an enterprising April shower.

FROST—MARSHALL.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. John Marshall, corner of Washington and Forest streets, when his daughter [illegible] Parker, was married to Mr. H[illegible] Arthur Frost [illegible]. Rev. Mr. Osgood performed the ceremony. The bride wore a gown of [illegible] and carried [illegible]. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Laura [illegible] who wore [illegible] and carried pink sweet peas. Mr. Frost was attended by his brother Mr. Asa Frost. The ushers were Mr. Harry Collamore of Woburn, a cousin of the bride, and Mr. Arthur Belvill.

The house was beautifully decorated with flowers by the bride's young friends. A collation was served, the club of nine young ladies, of which the bride was a member, taking charge. After a short wedding trip, the young couple will reside in Somerville.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Winchester, Mass., June 24, 19[illegible].

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

What is the objection to improving the appearance of the center of the town by turning the water into the fountain on the Common. A dry fountain is about as ornamental as a dried up sullen stalk in the center of a [illegible] I [illegible] that our reservoir is full, and the water running to waste.

OBSERVATIONS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Well, what is the program for the 4th? Last year you know the Selectmen did not inform the citizens what the celebration was to be, and even the STAR could not find out. The program should not only be announced in the paper, but by posters also.

With our State tax $3200 more than last year and our corporation tax receipts $4000 less, and the freedom with which the annual town meeting voted money, we shall be lucky if our tax rate does not go above $17 this year. Our corporation tax receipts available for next year will be some $4000 less than for this year.

Now that the bushes on the town house lawn have got larger, they set off the building much better, but what is there about that rotten old pole in front of the main entrance that it should be retained? Is there a Selectman who would stand for it in front of his own home? There is a very rusty iron drain pipe on the building at the offices entrances, also a broken window in the basement nearby. Isn't there a sub committee on town house and grounds?

Under date of May 17th the Supreme Judicial Court has ruled in favor of one Jacobs against Arthur E. Whitney for one-eighth of the Asa Whitney property in Winchester which said Jacobs had acquired by conveyance from the assignee of Fred M. Whitney adjudged insolvent in 1889. If not settled partition will have to be made by sale. The construction of the will however is open to the respondent.

I am glad Manchester Field is to be used more. We pay and have been paying out $2500 a year interest on the bonds to say nothing about maintenance and we have not got the benefits from this fine field we should have and would have if our Park Boards had been onto their job. Cannot a few cents be spent to paint the unpainted boards on the artistic grand stand. Take a look at it from the train when you go by.

AS A SPORTING PROPOSITION

Wednesday [illegible] scores of persons about the square disturbed her not in the least, and it was a close bet which would reach a certain point in the middle of the inward track first, she and the child or the train. It is thought, however, that she had a little advantage over the train, as the gate tender raised the arm on one side, allowing her a fraction of a second more time in leaving the roadbed. The incident was most disquieting to those persons of a nervous temperament who witnessed it.

CARD OF THANKS.

CLASS MOTTO

"O spirit of that early day,

Be with us in the godly way
Our faithful fathers knew."

Joseph [illegible] Middlesex street, employed on the town street department, was struck by an automobile while at work on Washington street last Saturday and somewhat bruised.

MARRIAGE A SURPRISE.

The wedding of Miss Molly Leahy, daughter of John M. Leahy of 35 Cutting street, Medford, to Thomas F. Lally, formerly of Winchester which occurred in Chicago Sunday afternoon, marked the culmination of a romance dating back to the childhood of the two parties. Miss Leahy left Medford Saturday and traveled 1000 miles to wed her lover, who has resided in Chicago for the past two years.

Friends of both parties knew of their engagement, but the time and place of the wedding was only known to the immediate families of the parties. The news of the marriage came as a pleasant surprise today to a large circle of acquaintances as both bride and groom are well known.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Michael Lally of this town and a brother of John J. Lally of West Medford. He is the manager of the United States construction and building Co. in Chicago, where he will make his home with his bride after their wedding tour.

FROM TORCHLIGHT PARADE TO FRENZIED FINANCE.

Confessions of a Famous Magazine Publisher—Just how Thomas W. Lawson's Exposure Articles came to be Written is now Fully Revealed for the First Time—So are Details of a Much Heralded Dinner at New York's Hotel St. Regis—Hall Caine Modestly Claims a Certain Credit for the Success of Everybody's Magazine—Other Intimate Disclosures have been Made by John Adams Thayer in Memoirs Originally Intenced to be Posthumous.

BY L. W. COBURN.

Boston, June 17, 1910. A Boston boy who in 1876 was a private in the Hayes and Wheeler torchlight company of which Thomas W. Lawson was captain and who years later served with Mr. Lawson in a very important capacity in applying the torch to the "system", has thrown some new light on one of the most extraordinary chapters of American history. John Adams Thayer, one of the publishers of Everybody's Magazine, during the months in which the installments of Mr. Lawson's Frenzied Finance series were eagerly awaited by the public and who subsequently retired from active connection with the periodical, has written a narrative of his experiences which a Boston house will issue simultaneously with editions in England and France.

A rash thing it is to do, of course. One of the things that few men can afford to do, as a rule. But there is a suspicion that the alimony was substantial when the energetic Mr. Thayer secured his papers of separation from the Ridgway-Thayer Company and left these shores for a vacation abroad. In Paris the ex-publisher concluded he had a story to tell, and produced some memoirs which were originally intended for posthumous publication but which, through the persuasion of friends, have been given to the world during his life time. "Astir" he calls his story, a narrative which, whether or not it takes rank with the autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, relates amusing incidents of the career of a Cambridge born American who 35 years ago stood behind the bat trying to hold the swift pitching of that other distinguished Cantabrigian, the late John Clarkson.

A stone rolling to some purpose this Yankee has been, in defiance of the discredited adage. Union printer in Boston and Chicago. Employee of type founding concerns before the trust was formed. Travelling saleman among the hot breezes and mint juleps of summer swept Texas and Arkansas. Book agent for a day at Bar Harbor. About 1892 a new comer in Philadelphia, like that other Boston bred printer, Benjamin Franklin, but with better lined purse and stomach. Thereafter advertising manager of the extraordinary periodical of which Mr. Edward Bok is editor, for six years—a long time for a man who has found profit in making quick changes. Business manager for a month and a day in the publishing house founded by Frank A. Munsey, "a genius in spots" and hence successful in business; on the pavement for a few days and advertising manager of a Boston daily paper for a year; recalled to New York to bleach a black sheep of the magazine world, a job so successfully accomplished that the lamb has since been recapitalized for more than fifteen million dollars; one of three men to take over Everybody's Magazine from which he later resigned. Mr. Hall Caine performed his annual because of disbelief in the grandiose project for a weekly to appear, "for God and country", simultaneously in several American cities.

But to revert to Mr. Lawson and the now famous articles which enabled the publishers of the magazine to escape most of the harrowing experiences which other magazine publishers have undergone in the period of getting established. The true story of how Frenzied Finance came to be written John Adams Thayer is able to tell authoritatively.

Thomas W. Lawson one day in 1904, through one of his inimitable advertisements, let the American people know that he meant to spend the rest of his life and his fortune, if necessary, in showing up the insiders of Standard Oil, with whose leaders he had fallen out. The advertisement found, among other readers, George Warren Wilder who [illegible], Mr. Thayer and Erman J. Ridgway, [illegible] the [illegible] of Everybody's Magazine. Mr. Wilder [illegible] to write out the story of Amalgamated Copper. Next Lawson [illegible] by the editor of the magazine, John O'Hara Cosgrove. Mr. Thayer arrived in the Hub to besiege the Lawson sanctum which overlooks the scene of the Boston massacre.

Thomas W. Lawson is not always an easy man to reach, but the New York magazine publisher secured his attention through the medium of a note of introduction from General Charles H. Taylor, publisher of the Boston Globe, [illegible] in his communication to the circumstance that young Thayer as a Cambridge boy had marched among the torchlight hosts commanded by the future captain of industry.

This allusion to boyhood exploits won, and in the end Messrs. Thayer and Cosgrove secured the greatest prize ever drawn by a magazine. The terms were sufficiently extraordinary. Mr. Lawson offered to write the articles, to accept not a cent of payment and to advertise them in the daily papers at his own expense. Just where he himself got off some people might regard as mysterious; but on a more recent occasion Mr. Lawson has told an assembly of publicity men that he began life with nothing to sell, advertised it as vigorously as he knew how and soon was millions ahead of the game.

The effect produced by the publication of the Frenzied Finance articles is now a matter of history. Not so, however, the circumstance that the fortunes of the magazine were made, not as has been generally supposed, by the advent of one new contributor, but of two. A story by Hall Caine began running at the same time. That the gifted Manxman believed it to deserve the credit is proved by an anecdote which Mr. Thayer quotes: "In the early autumn pilgrimage to London to call upon his publisher. The latter, having transatlantic connections, mentioned to the author that the circulation of Everybody's Magazine's had made extraordinary gains. 'Yes,' said Mr. Caine, 'I expected it. That is the American magazine which is publishing my new story, 'The Prodigal Son.'"

Incidents of a much heralded dinner at the Hotel St Regis during which the Boston banker talked over the long distance telephone to each of the forty personal friends of the publisher, who had gathered to celebrate his birthday, are also recalled, and the copyrighted letter of Mr. Lawson's which was read at the dinner and which under awful injunctions no newspaper was then allowed to quote is now published—a harmless enough Lawsonade. Here are a few sentences from it:

"Looping the life circle is the order of human existence. Old Ringmaster Time cracks his whip as the man steps out upon the flying zone to begin his wonderful journey by way of sunland, moon and starland to the enchanted chamber at the world's end. Round the great orbit he swings through spring days and summertime, and above the music of the spheres the crack of the Ringmaster's whip signals the passing years, faintly at first, louder as the mellow autumn shadows fall and in thunder tones as the circles spins into the hoary regions where Winter is king. To-night the echo of the whip's crack, dimly heard, is in the air, and we who cling near your rim of the circle rejoice that its course is still in the August loop, and that before you and us stretch glorious days of racing in space amid suns and constellations hung out for our delectation."

So, too, is printed for the first time the inscription which the State Street man affixed to the publisher's personal copy of "Frenzied Finance." Characteristic sentences are these: "As sure as water seeks its level, released balloons the sky, and stocks the earth, crime will hunt its creator. You little thought when General Taylor sent you with that note that you and I would be condemned to travel hell together without a fire extinguisher or insurance policy, but we have—and learn."

Since the [illegible] of half a [illegible] for the [illegible] has circumnavigated the globe and navigated the air with Santos-Dumont has himself turned literateur. He has returned to New York, to watch the game from the out-side, until doubtless, there is some reason for getting into it again. His characteristically American story, one of hard work rather than of luck, perhaps justifies the remarks of a kind friend:

"When a man starts as a printer and makes a habit of working unlimited hours a day, using every pound of pressure and energy, developing every atom of his originality and initiative, I don't think it particularly lucky if he arrives somewhere at the end of forty odd years. It recalls Maurice Barrymore's remark at billiards, when he made a twice round the table shot on a fluke which caused his opponent to drop his cue and exclaim; 'Holy God!' With his sweet smile, Barrymore replied: 'No, not wholly God. I was in it too.'"

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The summer opera season at the Castle Square is an immediate triumphant success. After a week of "The Mikado", "Rip Van Winkle", with the story of which everyone is familiar, will be staged at the Castle Square Monday evening with the same perfection.

Its composer is Planquette, who wrote "The Chimes of Normandy," and it is filled with passages of great beauty, with many beautiful solos, and with effective concerted numbers.

In the role of Rip Van Winkle will appear William Wolff, who created the part when the opera was given at the Castle Square fifteen years ago. Miss Ethel Balch will double the role of Gretchen in the earlier part of the play with the role of her own daughter Meenie in the last act. Donald Meek and George Hassell will both have comic characters that they will act with their accustomed mirth provoking skill, while Harry Davies, George Crampton, Clarence Chute and Veta Roberts will be seen in the other leading parts. The chorus will be large, and the orchestra will be under the direction of Samuel L. Studley.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Mr. Keith will [illegible] another departure at his theatre in Boston next week by the engagement of Captain Fritz Duquesne, who was selected to accompany Ex-President Roosevelt on an [illegible] trip to Africa and was presented [illegible] by the British government, [illegible]

[illegible]

Other features on the bill will be [illegible] Hazzard, comedian; [illegible] company in a sketch entitled "An Awful Fix," the Big City Four, Cross and Josephine, and Claude M. Roode.

THE GRIDIRON OF POLITICS

What the Legislature Did at the Last Session

RISING PRICES ARE HALTED

Former Governor Guild Claims a Downward Tendency—Democratic Machine Determined to Slaughter Ex-Senator James H. Vahey—Latter Will Fight

The legislature of 1910, which was prorogued Wednesday, June 15, has passed a number of important laws during the session just closed. One of the most bitterly fought was the so-called bar and bottle bill, which prohibits the sale of liquor in bottles in bar rooms. This measure was strongly supported by the temperance people of the state and is generally regarded as wise legislation. Another measure which caused a very warm fight during the session was the so-called Berkshire trolley bill, by which the New Haven railroad was authorized to secure control of the Berkshire Trolley company. The bill permitting the Boston Railroad Holding company to [illegible] was stiffly fought but finally became a law during the [illegible] of the session, and a new [illegible] holiday for the commonwealth on Oct. 12 was established, to be known as Columbus Day, in honor of the discoverer of America.

Direct Nominations

The act providing for the direct nomination of [illegible] representatives which became a law at this session was largely the work of Senator Walker, who fought for the measure until it was enacted and signed by Governor Draper. The legislature also enacted a measure requiring an employer of labor advertising for help to state that a strike is in progress, if such is the case.

Among the important bills which were defeated were the anti-injunction bill, the anti-lobbying bill, which forbade lobbying at the state house, the bills providing for amendments to the new Boston charter adopted last year, the bill extending the term of office of district attorneys to five years, and the bill to permit labor unions to fine those of their members who refuse to strike when ordered, or who return to work after a strike is ordered and before its settlement. One of the most important measures defeated was that providing for a federal income tax. A bill providing for an investigation of holding companies and voluntary trusts was also defeated, as was a bill providing for the state going into the business of furnishing homesteads, and another to prohibit the sale of liquor to women.

Cost of Living Is Lower

In an article just given out former Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., shows conclusively that there has been a halt in the advance in the cost of living. The governor says that it is an odd freak of fortune that, just when political orators and city, state, and national governments are getting ready to probe and investigate and explain advancing prices, those prices have refused to advance. The contention is made and appears to be sustained by figures of market reports that during the last five months prices have been generally decreasing.

Ex-Governor Guild shows that on June 10, 1910, the price of pork backs was from $4 to $5 less per barrel, the price of beef from 1½ to 2c less per lb., and the price of lard 2 to 3c less per lb. than the prices of the same articles during the preceding months. Poultry also shows a decrease at wholesale of 1c per lb., and eggs a decrease of 13c a dozen. Butter is about 6c per lb. cheaper, and potatoes something like 20c a bushel less in price. Wheat shows a decrease in price of about 28c per bushel and flour is from 70 to 75c cheaper, while cotton has dropped from $[illegible] to $2.20. [illegible]

Decreases in Price General

Ex-Governor Guild finds that worsted yarns have [illegible] since [illegible] heavyweights [illegible] 20 per cent, while lightweight stock, worsted and woolens are now selling [illegible] to 40 per cent below last year's prices. There has been quite a substantial decrease also in the price of cotton textiles, such as sheetings, drills, and staple prints, and since the first of the year northern cotton yarns have declined from 18 to 20 per cent, and southern cotton yarns from 25 to 30 per cent.

The ex-governor finds that while everything has not declined in price since January, the general tendency has been downward, and that advances have been exceptional.

The Machine Against Mr. Vahey

There seems to have been quite a decided change in the last few days in the political situation so far as the Democratic nomination for governor is concerned. The friends of ex-Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown believe there is a much stronger public sentiment in favor of his nomination than has been apparent heretofore. They claim that a good many active Democrats throughout the state have let it be known in Boston that it would be dangerous to throw down Mr. Vahey after the two campaigns he has waged with such vigor, and some of them have gone so far as to claim that the Democratic nomination would be worthless if it is taken from Mr. Vahey through any unfair methods or by an excessive use of money. Just what effect these warnings will have upon the Democratic leaders, who seem to have decided that Congressman Foss shall receive the nomination, is at present unknown.

Whatever the outcome may be, it seems to be true that the Vahey men are in a fighting mood and that they propose to fight for their man to the last ditch. Some of Mr. Vahey's friends assert that even if he were to retire in favor of Mr. Foss, the rank and file of the party would believe that he had been practically forced out and that the result would be a tremendous knifing of Mr. Foss at the polls.

So far as the Republicans are concerned, they do not seem to care which man is the nominee. There are some Republicans who think Mr. Vahey is the stronger of the two, while others believe that Mr. Foss would [illegible] the larger vote. If Mr. Foss is [illegible] it is said the Democrats [illegible] but Mr. Foss would [illegible] [illegible]

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

[illegible] the sudden death of the King has tended to [illegible] the cause of woman suffrage sooner than its warmest advocates had hoped. All party questions have been postponed in Parliament by common consent. This leaves Parliament temporarily with hardly anything to do. Woman Suffrage has suffered hitherto because it was not a party question. That very fact now leaves the way clear for its consideration. Burning party issues have taken up the attention of the members, and the suffrage Associations have always been told that there was not time to get their bill through its various stages; that all the time was needed for "more pressing" questions. The militant tactics have made this subject a pressing one and now Parliament unexpectedly finds itself with abundant time on its hands.

A "Conciliation Committee" has been organized by 38 influential members of Parliament, to put through a woman suffrage bill upon which Liberals, Conservatives and members of the Labor Party can unite. The Committee has issued a circular, saying that, "the present House of Commons, like every House which has met since 187[illegible], shows a majority for woman suffrage. Indeed, while over 400 members are known to be favorable, not more than 70 have declared themselves hostile. . . . The painful struggle of the past four years is an experience which no one would wish to see repeated. It is with the object of preventing the continuance of this evil and of forwarding an act of justice long overdue that we ask for support of this bill."

Meanwhile the English suffragists are preparing to hold a great procession in London on June 18, in support of their claim to the franchise. Among those taking part will be Lady Constance Lytton, whose brother, the Earl of Lytton, is chairman of the Parliamentary Committee working for the suffrage bill, Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M. D., Mayor of Aldeburgh, the only woman Mayor in England, Miss Beatrice Harraden, Mrs. Isabel Zangwill, Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, Miss May Sinclair, a contingent of teachers, another of nurses under [illegible] [illegible] "Votes for Women" [illegible] the route. It is expected to be the greatest procession that London has ever seen.

The soothing spray of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspeakable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a godsend and no wonder. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

FOR SUMMER TRAVEL.

[illegible] Passenger Department of the Boston and Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Companies for the season of 1910 have been given general distribution and will be found of unusual interest to trolley travelers. The folder this year has an especially unique and attractive cover design which is certainly distinctive of trolley travel. It is very striking in color and original in design. Inside of the cover are twenty-four pages devoted to a great deal of interesting and instructive matter telling about the various trips which can be taken over the [illegible] miles of track comprised in these two systems, as well as trips upon all connecting lines. The book is profusely illustrated with interesting half tone cuts of various attractive sights along the lines.

Aside from the information which is given as to how to go to various points, the distances, the fares, the running time and the places where cars are to be taken and where changes are necessary to be made, there are also two departments devoted, one to the principal points of interest along the lines and the other to the more important pleasure places by the shore, inland and by lakes and rivers. Tipped in to the back of the folder is a new four color map covering the entire section of southern New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Massachusetts east of Worcester.

This map is one of the most complete ever issued covering this particular territory, not only of the lines of the Boston and Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Companies but also the lines of all street railway companies operating throughout that entire district. The steam railroad lines are also given with the various stations upon those lines showing where it is possible to make connections with the trolley. City, town, county and state lines are depicted and in fact the map contains an unusual wealth of general information.

These folders are for general distribution and will be sent entirely free upon application to the Passenger Department at 309 Washington street, Boston, or to the local Division Supt's. offices of the Boston and Northern and Old Colony Railway Companies.

Last Friday afternoon Mrs. Nelson Allen was on her way to the bank in Woburn with $175 in her purse which she had placed in her hand bag. When she boarded the Woburn car she struck her bag against a seat which caused it to spring open. She discovered when the conductor came for his fare that her purse and money were missing. After a hurried search for it she got out and walked back to Winchester, heartbroken at her loss, as it meant a great deal to her and her husband who has been many years in the employ of the town. The next day she received a telephone call from Boston to call at a certain address and receive the lost purse and money, which she did. A lady had found it in one of the seats and sent word to the address in the purse. The good luck at receiving the money was not all, as the finder refused to accept any reward.
